LORD CARNARVON'S OPENING ADDRESS.

Lord CARNARVON, in his opening address, said he need make little preface in stating what were the objects and history of this Conference. Its object was to obtain information, to compare the different prison systems of different countries, to discuss the principles and details upon which those systems were based, and to arrive, if possible, at some general conclusions. Its history was the history of a remarkable agreement by the peoples and governments of many civilized countries on a subject which had been most justly considered of the highest importance. The difficulties in the way of such an agreement being come to were proverbial, for there were the prejudices and difficulties of race, language, institutions, character and climate; but with all these difficulties facing them he did not despair of attaining on the part of those present some general agreement in respect to the subject upon which they had met. He was encouraged in this hope because nations widely different in general characteristics had thrown themselves heartily into this discussion. Almost every European State had given the Congress its support. France, embarrassed by a thousand difficulties, had given her assistance. Italy, true to the history of her own great jurists, took her part. Belgium had, among others, accredited one of her most distinguished statesmen to the Congress. Holland, with the sound sense which the English were delighted to believe was a common quality to both countries, was interested also in the Conference. Switzerland, Denmark, all-inquiring and all-embracing Germany, and, lastly, the United States—a country which, by numberless experiments, had already contributed so much to the common knowledge, drawing with them to the other side of the Atlantic the South American States—were all represented, and had accepted England as the place of meeting. The government had refused the Congress assistance and recognition, and, he understood, had even refused official information. He was bound to express his regret at this refusal, and still more at the grounds upon which that refusal was made. He denied that this Congress was to be classed with ordinary voluntary associations, and he was of opinion that there was a precedent for government support in the vote given to the Statistical Conference. The recognition of this Congress would have been a graceful acknowledgment to those governments which had spared neither time nor money to send information on this subject, but, much as he regretted the absence of governmental or official recognition, he should not regret it if it were to be taken as an illustration of the sturdy English independence of official control in the same way as our prisons were managed by unpaid magistrates, our semi-criminal industrial schools by persons interested in them, and as the Discharged Prisoners' Aid Societies were managed—upheld by private liberality and support. Though the government reaped the fruits of these labors they were given none the less ungrudgingly, and if the foreign guests would only accept the refusal of the government to work in this Congress in this view he would give them a hearty though unofficial welcome. He hoped that when the visitors returned to their own country they would carry with them some not unpleasing recollections of their stay, and whatever might be the results of the conference on prison discipline and criminals he hoped one result of the gathering would be to strengthen the ties of comity and good will which ought to bind together the whole commonwealth of nations. He proceeded to say that while thus bidding them welcome he could not pass over in silence the name of one who would be missed there, a man whose name and long experience gave his name more than an English reputation. Many were present whom all were rejoiced to see; many were absent who could be spared; but in the death of the late Recorder of Birmingham was lost one who would have received from all Englishmen, whether they came from any part of this or the other side of the Atlantic, an honored reception. The noble chairman then passed in review the subjects to be considered in the Congress—criminal law, criminal procedure and preventive police, &c. He said that in matters like these he knew it was an invidious task to suggest a limitation of subjects and points to be discussed, but he would say this—the more diffused such investigations were the less likely they were to be fruitful in practical results, and, therefore, he urged that this Congress would act wisely in restricting rather than in enlarging the scope of their inquiries. He then proceeded to enter upon the subjects of punishment and the repression of crime in a very long and eloquent speech, in which he dwelt upon the attention which the British people and the British colonies had given to the subject of the management of the prisons. He referred to the measures passed by the British Legislature in 1864-65, and later still, and he said that while, on the one hand, our prisons were not what they were when Howard commenced his labors, they were not palaces, as Voltaire had described them. They had passed through the two extremes, and now, while they gave the essentials for health and life, and facilities for the exercise of moral and religious duties, they gave that disagreeable punishment which it was intended the criminal should suffer. He spoke as to the necessity of uniformity of practice in our jails, and complained that there was a shortness of official inspection in regard to them—a point which the Legislature ought to remedy; for it should know that it was not sufficient to make good laws, but it should provide for the enforcement of those laws by giving the requisite machinery. (Cheers.) In this country we pretended to control nearly two hundred jails, scattered over England, Scotland and Wales, by only two inspectors, and if there were shortcomings it was owing to the want of machinery to do the work. (Hear, hear.) He referred to the endeavors now being made to stop criminality at its source by means of industrial schools, and went on to express his opinion of the uselessness of repeated re-convictions to prevent crime. He pointed to the case of Liverpool, where 390 prisoners were last year committed, and these had been in prison no less than fifteen times each. These, he said, belonged to the hopelessly incorrigible class, for whom the prison had lost its terrors, and to those crime was a natural atmosphere. The only way to deal with these was by imprisonment for life; and however hard it might sound, he believed that would be the proper way to deter persistence in a criminal life. He hoped that Congress might find time to discuss the subjects connected with reformatories, penitentiaries, discharged prisoners' aid societies. Entering into the question of prison punishments, he urged that authority should be given for exercising unquestionable severity of punishment, and also that means should be given for the moral improvement of the prisoner; the one was a duty to society, the other a duty to a fellow creature. He urged, too, that the work given to a prisoner should not be selected for its profitable character to the prison, or because it was pleasing to the prisoner, but that work should be selected which was really a punishment. Above all, the prisoner should not be allowed comforts which an honest laborer could not obtain by hard work; he should be debarred from all enjoyments of any kind, and should, under all circumstances, be made to feel that he was suffering punishment. The noble lord resumed his seat amid loud applause.

LORD HARROWBY'S SPEECH—FIRST DAY'S BUSINESS.

Lord HARROWBY said it was only a short time before that he was informed that he was expected to take a part in these proceedings, and he had to take upon himself the laborious task of giving a welcome—a cordial welcome and greeting to those eminent men, from many different countries, who had honored Englishmen by coming among them. (Cheers.) The part that Englishmen had to take on this occasion was a difficult one, because they could not give that greeting to their visitors which would have been accorded to them in other countries. Any other country would have given a national reception to the visitors in a manner worthy of the work they had in hand; but Englishmen had to stand as humble apologists and ask their visitors to kindly overlook the official coolness of those islanders who were worthy followers of the inhospitable Britons of old. (Laughter.) This was no new reputation, for we were so often called "barbarous Englishmen" that we were used to it. (Laughter.) Perhaps, however, beyond the official skin would be found a warmness of heart, and during their stay the visitors might find some feature they liked in the English character, but impressions were not easily removed. When it was seen that in Italy a royal commission had sat since November on this subject; that France had delegated fifteen members of the Assembly to consider it, and they had sat twice a week for four months; and that every continental country except Portugal, with America, South America, even Chile, had worked in the matter and had done something, it made England very much ashamed to find that the State had done nothing. ("Hear.") He then spoke of the great improvements in prisons in his recollection, and expressed the hope that the Congress would have the effect of still further diminishing crime. His lordship concluded by moving "That the delegates from the Courts of Quarter Sessions, benches of magistrates, visiting justices, public societies and institutions and the English members of the Congress generally beg to offer their sincere welcome to the official delegates and other foreign members from the various countries of the world who are present on this occasion, and to congratulate the Congress on the completeness and importance of the official representation from nearly all civilized States."

Sir CHARLES ADDERLEY seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously.

Baron VON HOLTZENDORFF, in response, said that England had the hospitality to give shelter to expelled kings and republicans, and was firm enough to protest against having expatriated outcasts thrown upon her shores. He went on to say that the first feeling of a foreigner on coming to England was that he was alone—that he was afloat on the ocean by himself; but he no sooner came into contact with England's people than that feeling was wholly dissipated. He thanked the English for their reception.

The Hon. Mr. CHANDLER, of the United States, then addressed the meeting, and said that he was told beforehand that he was to speak, but he no sooner came into that fine old hall, which was associated with the history of his family, than his thoughts vanished. He proceeded to speak of the interest taken in the subject of prison treatment in his State.

Mr. BERDEN also spoke in response to the vote of welcome.

Mr. G. W. HASTINGS then moved a vote of thanks to the Benchers for the use of the hall, and took the opportunity of saying that the government had given some information, though scanty; but it had shown an interest by sending Captain Du Cane, and Mr. Bruce would himself attend one day.

Lord LICHFIELD seconded the motion, which was carried, and was acknowledged by Mr. J. ANDERSON, Q. C.

Dr. MANNING proposed, and His Excellency M. VAN DE WEYER seconded a vote of thanks to the chairman.

Mr. HIBBERT, M. P., interposed with some remarks upon the absence of government control, and he thought this was a subject of congratulation. He hoped to see some of the members of the government present, but only on an equality with their fellow Englishmen. And while he acknowledged that we had much to learn from foreigners, they might learn something from us.

The vote was carried and was acknowledged.

The meeting then adjourned until this morning.

THE FRANCO-GERMAN CONVENTION.

Terms and Mode of Payment of the Remaining Indebtedness of France to Germany.

The following is a translation of the text of the convention, signed on Saturday, the 29th ult., between France and Germany:—

The President of the French Republic and His Majesty the Emperor of Germany having resolved to settle by special convention the execution of the third and fourth articles of the Preliminary Treaty of Versailles of February 26, 1871, and of the seventh article of the Treaty of Peace of Frankfort-on-the-Main of May 10, 1871, have appointed for that purpose, as their plenipotentiaries, the President of the French Republic, M. Charles de Rémusat, Minister of Foreign Affairs; and His Majesty the Emperor of Germany, Count Harry von Arnim, his Ambassador to the French Republic, who, having come to an agreement upon the terms and mode of payment of the sum of three milliards due from France to Germany, and also as to the gradual evacuation of the French departments occupied by the German army, and after having exchanged their full powers, which were found to be in good and proper form, have agreed as follows:—

ARTICLE 1.—France undertakes to pay the said sum of three milliards in the following manner:—1. One half milliard of francs in two months after the exchange of ratifications of this present convention. 2. One half milliard of francs on February 1, 1873. 3. A milliard of francs on March 1, 1874. 4. A milliard of francs on March 1, 1875. France may, however, anticipate the payments falling due on the 1st of February, 1873; 1st of March, 1874, and 1st of March, 1875, by paying instalments, which must amount at least to 100,000,000, but which may extend to the total amount of the sums falling due at the periods before mentioned. In the event of any payment by anticipation the French government shall inform the German government one month previously.

ART. 2.—The provisions of the third line of the seventh article of the Treaty of Peace of May 10, 1871, as also those of the separate protocols of October 12, 1871, remain in force for all payments that may be made by virtue of the preceding article.

ART. 3.—His Majesty the Emperor of Germany will cause his troops to evacuate the Departments of the Marne and the Haute Marne fifteen days after the payment of one-half milliard; the Departments of the Ardennes and the Vosges fifteen days after the payment of the second milliard; the Departments of the Meuse and Meurthe-et-Moselle, as also the arrondissement of Bellecourt, fifteen days after the payment of the third milliard and of the interest remaining due.

ART. 4.—After the payment of two milliards France reserves to herself the right of furnishing to Germany for the third milliard financial guarantees, which, in conformity with article 3 of the Preliminaries of Versailles, shall be substituted for territorial guarantees if thus accepted and recognized as sufficient by Germany.

ART. 5.—The interest of five per cent upon the sums mentioned in the first article, payable from the date of March 2, 1872, shall cease in proportion as the said sums shall have been paid either at the dates fixed by the present Convention or prior to those dates, according to the provisions in the first article. The interest upon the amounts remaining unpaid shall continue to be payable on March 2 of each year. The last payment of interest shall be made at the same time as the payment of the third milliard.

ART. 6.—In the event of the number of the German troops in occupation being diminished as the occupation becomes successively limited, the cost of maintenance of the said troops shall be reduced proportionately with their numbers.

ART. 7.—Until the complete evacuation of the French territory the departments successively evacuated in conformity with article 2 shall be neutralized in a military sense, and must not receive any other bodies of troops than the garrisons which shall be requisite for the maintenance of order. France shall construct no new fortifications in them, nor extend those already existing. His Majesty the Emperor of Germany on his part engages not to construct in the occupied departments any other fortified works besides those now existing there.

ART. 8.—His Majesty the Emperor of Germany reserves to himself the right of reoccupying the evacuated departments in the event of non-execution of the engagements undertaken by the present Convention.

ART. 9.—The ratifications of the present treaty by the President of the French Republic on the one part and by His Majesty the Emperor of Germany on the other shall be exchanged at Versailles within the space of ten days, or sooner if it be practicable.

In faith of which the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the present document and affixed to it the seal of their arms.

Done at Versailles, June 29, 1872. REMUSAT. D'ARNIM.

There were 103 cases on the calendar of the Special Sessions Court yesterday morning, all of which were disposed of by Judges Hogan, Ledwith and Scott in the usual expeditious manner. Of these cases 53 were for assault and battery, 9 for cruelty to animals, 15 for violations of the Health code, and 28 for petty larceny.

THE GOLD MARKET begins to show signs of the usual summer rise in the premium, be it this time more or less. Yesterday the price touched 114⅛, or within a trifle of the highest in nearly a year. The movement is this time helped by a wealthy clique, whose existence and intentions have already considerably agitated the placid Mr. Boutwell. So far his resistance has been only a silent watching of the scheme.

AMERICAN TALENT IN LONDON.—A cable despatch informs us of the appearance of Miss Clara Louise Kellogg on Monday night at Her Majesty's Opera, Drury Lane, in the opera of "La Traviata." Her success was so great that she was recalled five times before the curtain, and received the warmest congratulations of the Prince and Princess of Wales. Such honors rarely fall to the lot of a prima donna, and conclusively show that American talent is bound to make its way to the foremost ranks in art as well as in everything else.

OUR AUSTRALASIAN DESPATCHES.—The news from Australasia, telegraphed to the HERALD from San Francisco, is quite interesting and reassuring of a solid, substantial, healthy colonial advance. Valuable mines of copper had been discovered, the yield of gold was fair and the wool trade remunerative. There were politics and official aspirations and party manœuvres inevitably; but the governments control a people who are still young in the exercise of the franchise, and consequently able to bear a good deal of that sort of thing without injury to the general interest.

COMMENTS OF THE ENGLISH PRESS ON THE HERALD LIVINGSTONE EXPEDITION.—We publish on another page of this morning's issue the comments of the British press on the discovery of Dr. Livingstone at Ujiji by Mr. Stanley, the HERALD's African Explorer. With characteristic British fairness, the principal journals of the English metropolis acknowledge the grand work achieved by Stanley in carrying out the mission entrusted to him in the finding of Livingstone, and in furnishing the intelligence that the brave old man still lives and still labors to solve the problem which for centuries has baffled the scientific skill of the savans, the explorers and the travellers who made the source of the Nile the study of their lives.

REVOLUTION IN FIJI.—The Australasian mail at San Francisco brings intelligence that the Fiji Islands are "undergoing incipient revolution," and that the existing government is powerless against it. The despatch does not state whether the anticipated change applies to the matter of the every-day dietary of the natives or whether it is merely political and of an anti-dynastic tendency. This is a very serious omission on the part of the news reporter. If the trouble of the Fijians is merely gastronomic or of a homely culinary nature, we have nothing to do with it. If it is for freedom, independence, democracy and self-rule, we, of course, sympathize with its promoters, and the American government will, no doubt, accept accomplished facts should the people win, notwithstanding the executive embarrassment which may ensue in Washington on account of our having already a treaty of amity and friendship with King Thakambou—who may be deposed by this time, for all we know to the contrary—confirmed by the signet of the great whale's tooth which is duly suspended in the State Department.

The North Carolina Election—Its Probable Result and the Effect on the Presidential Contest.

The State election for Governor and Legislature which will take place in North Carolina on the 1st of August will be the first gun of this Presidential campaign, in being the first election after the final shaping of the Presidential contest between the supporters of the administration and the opposition elements of the country. The March election in New Hampshire, the April election in Connecticut and the more recent election in Oregon all indicated in their results that General Grant was still strong among the people; but these elections will not apply to the actual political situation, because within a week it has been wonderfully changed. The democratic party, in union with the liberal republicans, with republican candidates for President and Vice President, and with the Cincinnati resolutions for its platform, has indeed taken a new departure, and a departure, too, which cuts loose the party in its future policy from the dead issues of the past and brings it into the foreground upon the living issues of the day.

Accordingly the results of none of the State elections of this year preceding the late Baltimore Convention will apply as indicating the strength of General Grant against the general opposition ticket of Greeley and Brown. Neither can the approaching North Carolina election be regarded as a test between the rival republican candidates, inasmuch as the nominations of both political parties in that State were made before the acceptance of Greeley at Baltimore and without regard to the union that has since taken place between the liberal republicans and the democracy. The situation is the same as it would be if New York were called upon to vote to-morrow on candidates for some local offices who had been put into the field respectively by the democratic and republican parties before the Presidential nominations had been made and without reference to the division in the republican ranks. It is possible that the votes of some republicans might be controlled by consideration of the more important Presidential issue in the future; but the probability is that the party would adhere to their nominees for local offices without reference to their subsequent action in the Presidential contest. Nevertheless, as General Grant represents the regular republican organization, and is the standard-bearer of that party, it is of vital consequence to him to carry the North Carolina election, and hence we find the administration party working with a degree of industry and liberality in its electioneering appliances seldom witnessed in a mere State election since that in Pennsylvania of 1856, upon which it was known on all sides in advance the issue of that Presidential contest depended. In 1868 General Grant carried North Carolina by nine thousand majority; in 1870 the democrats recovered the State by five thousand majority. In 1871 they lost the State again, by a majority of over nine thousand against them, upon the question of a constitutional convention, which involved, as it was understood, the overthrow of the whole work of the reconstruction of the State in the event of the success of the democrats. Hence their defeat. Now all this is changed, and with Mr. Greeley as President no man can fear the overthrow of Southern reconstruction or of any of the fixed facts of the situation as accepted by the democratic party.

The chances of the election, however, are all in favor of the success of the regular republican ticket next month. The administration is using its power energetically to influence the result, and the State is being canvassed very thoroughly on that side, while the democrats appear to be singularly apathetic and almost disposed to suffer the election to go by default. The republican candidate for the Vice Presidency, Senator Wilson; the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Boutwell, and other prominent administration politicians, are engaged in stumping the State, and all the employés of the national government are at work on the same side. The unusually large amount of money appropriated for certain federal purposes in North Carolina just at this moment excites the suspicion that eloquence will not be the only means used to influence the voters; and the people of the State are miserably poor under the policy to which they have been subjected since the close of the rebellion. The census of 1870 shows that there were then nearly four hundred thousand negroes out of a population of a little over one million, and the colored citizens are relied upon, almost to a man, to vote for the republican State ticket against the straight-out democratic candidates, whatever may be their action in the Presidential election, when the fight will be between two republicans. The result can, therefore, scarcely be regarded as doubtful, and it is only a matter of surprise that the administration republicans should evince the doubt and apprehension manifested in the extraordinary precautions they are taking to escape defeat. Their anxiety no doubt arises from the conviction that a single overthrow in the skirmishes preceding the battle would render their defeat almost a matter of certainty. Probably the apparent apathy of the democrats is owing to the absence of a similar feeling of responsibility, since no one would regard the defeat of the straight-out democracy in this State contest as destructive of the Presidential chances of Mr. Greeley, this local battle having been joined on old democratic candidates and issues before the meeting of the Baltimore Convention.

There is one feature of this North Carolina canvass which, unfortunately, threatens to disfigure the whole Presidential campaign—the apprehended attempt to combine the negroes together in a solid mass as men whose interests are adverse to those of the white citizens of the State. In North Carolina the negroes number two-fifths of the whole population of the State, there being six thousand white to four thousand colored inhabitants. In some of the Southern States the negroes are actually in the majority, while in others they are numerous enough, with the help of a fraction of the whites, to control the elections. The South is thus threatened with the political rule of freedmen not released from bondage a sufficient length of time to have enabled them to obtain education and to become intelligent electors, united with the worst class of white citizens—the men who for political purposes would excite a conflict of races in the South. The HERALD condemns such a selfish and unpatriotic policy, no matter by what party it may be attempted, and it is to be hoped that Senator Wilson, Secretary Boutwell and the other Presidential orators who are now stumping North Carolina will refrain from any exciting appeals to the colored voters as a class in their efforts to induce them to adhere to the republican party. The negroes are a simple-minded and confiding people, and they should be taught that their interests are identical with those of the whites in securing an honest and efficient State government. It is as impolitic and unchristian as it is unnecessary to keep alive in their breasts the old prejudices against their former masters; it is as dangerous as it is false to tell them that their white fellow citizens are prepared, at any moment they may have the power, to strip them of the freedom and the privileges conferred upon them by the war and to reconsign them to a state of servitude. The attempt to set race against race is even more reprehensible than those proscriptive Know Nothing tenets of whose mischievous tendency, it is to be hoped, Senator Wilson has long since become convinced. The appeals Greeley and his friends are making to the Irish as a distinct nationality are bad enough, but are less objectionable than the effort to control the negro vote of the South by exciting the fears and passions of the colored race, inasmuch as the Irish are natural politicians and are shrewd enough to follow their own judgment, while the Southern blacks are ignorant, inexperienced and credulous and their prejudices may be worked upon to a dangerous extent.

There is, besides, no real necessity for any such questionable policy to aid Grant in the South. The Southern blacks are well disposed toward the administration and have a reverence for the profession of which General Grant is the acknowledged head in merit as well as in rank. The probability is that they will vote the administration republican ticket without persuasion, and their united support in North Carolina, joined with the strength of the federal office-holders in that State, the efforts of the stump orators, and, probably, an open-handed liberality toward the voters, cannot fail to carry the election. The wisest policy General Grant could pursue would be to refrain from any extraordinary effort to influence the negroes, to prohibit any interference of the civil or military authorities with the canvass or the polls, and thus to foreshadow by his action in that State a complete change of treatment for the entire South. The people of the Northern States have made up their minds that whatever may be the result of the Presidential election the next administration shall give peace and entire freedom to the white citizens of the South, and shall extend the protection of the constitution over the whole Union. They will no longer suffer the Southern States to be paralyzed and their white citizens to be degraded to help any political party. If the President, recognizing this fact, would rid himself of his present political advisers—stump orators, carpet-baggers, office-holders and all—and adopt toward the South such a generous and noble policy as he pursued toward the vanquished soldiers of Lee's army and foreshadowed in his famous report to President Johnson, he would not only ensure the success of the republican State ticket in North Carolina next month, but would sweep the whole Southern States in November. Such a triumph would be more valuable and more honorable than any victory won by political trickery or by the dangerous expedient of creating a hostile feeling between the white men and the negroes of the South.

LONGFELLOW'S ACCIDENT—A GAME HORSE.—It will be learned with extreme regret by the large class interested in sporting matters that John Harper's great horse, Longfellow, was disabled from racing, it is feared for life, by an accident at the Saratoga course yesterday. That this took place in a race which saw two and a quarter miles accomplished in three minutes and fifty-nine seconds—the fastest time on record—will make the accident the more regretable, when, too, it is learned that Longfellow only lost the race by a length. One of his plates became twisted in the running and cut the other foot and leg badly, but the heart of the horse never weakened. He ran gamely as ever to the end, and was led off limping and bleeding to the stable. There seems something in this of pluck, almost heroism, which man arrogates entirely to himself; but two miles and a quarter on little better than three legs and in such time will challenge admiration the world over. It will be remembered that he recently beat his successful rival of yesterday, Harry Bassett, at Long Branch, in a two and a half mile race, by about one hundred and fifty yards, in four minutes, thirty-four seconds.

THE BRATTON ABDUCTION CASE.—The Bratton case was brought up in the Court at London, Ontario, yesterday. Our readers will remember that Dr. Rufus Bratton was abducted from Canada on the 4th of June, and that he reappeared subsequently in South Carolina. The case has caused considerable excitement, as it seriously involves principles of international law. It appears that Bratton arrived in Ontario on Saturday last, but that he purposely concealed himself until the opening of the Court yesterday. According to Bratton, Cornwall, who is charged with the abduction, laid violent hands on him in Waterloo street; handcuffed him, with the help of a cab driver, and forcibly placed him in the cars. Bratton says he protested to the last and yielded only because he relied on British justice to sustain him in the end. The case was further remanded. This is a curious case, and it seems to us that it will lead to some strange developments. It is but little likely to set the St. Lawrence on fire; but it may furnish us with a sensation of some interest in these dull times.

A UNITED STATES PROTECTORATE of a portion of the South Sea Islands has been, as we are informed by telegram from San Francisco, formally assumed by an American naval officer on board one of the national war vessels. We presume his action is all right.

THE ALABAMA CLAIMS ARBITRATION.—The members of the Court of Arbitration for the settlement of the Alabama claims assembled in session in Geneva yesterday. The meeting was of very brief duration, an adjournment having been had within the space of thirty minutes. A variety of printed matter was handed in by the national agents. Our telegram report indicates that the progress is quite harmonious so far, and that the entire proceedings may be, perhaps, closed at an early day.

The Question of Trial by Jury.

The not unlooked-for result of the jury trial in the case of Stokes furnishes strong evidence of the little reliance that can be placed on the proper administration of justice under the present system. So many experiments of the same nature have been tried with a like result that the public conscience is not so much affected as might be expected or even desired. Still there is abroad a general dissatisfaction that some conclusion has not been reached by the twelve men who were obtained with so much trouble to try this case. The main facts of the charge against Stokes were admitted by the defence, and it only remained for the jury to decide what was the nature of the act which Stokes committed when he shot and killed Fisk. To the ordinary mind the issue seemed a plain one; but, as the evidence of motive in such cases is always of a most conflicting nature, it is natural to expect that different men would take different views of the responsibility incurred by one man in shooting down another. Where important evidence of a conflicting nature is certain to be presented and requires to be carefully weighed and analyzed, it is of the first importance that the men to decide on its relative value should be of superior intelligence. It is not enough that they should be honest and unprejudiced; they ought to represent the highest intelligence of the community. The interest of the prisoner, no less than that of the public, demands this; yet the law as at present interpreted tends to exclude from the jury box the only class whose presence could give weight and authority to that ancient but much overrated institution.

There can be no question that the present ruling in relation to the selection of jurors is made rather after the letter than the spirit of the law. It is evident that the framers of the law never intended that the intelligent portion of the community should be driven from all practical share in the administration of justice. The intent was to protect the citizen from the malevolence of personal enemies, and the challenge was meant to meet the case of personal prejudice which might endanger the life of the accused. No reasonable man will attempt to maintain that intelligent legislators deliberately passed a law with the intention of making the life of the citizen dependent on the stolid stupidity of men who, from their sheer want of intelligence, form no opinions on events that agitate the whole community. This position is too absurd to be maintained, and yet the judges in our Courts constantly ignore the evident intent of the law and give force to its literal interpretation, without a word of comment or protest. But the vast mass of the people are becoming tired of the judicial farces which are constantly being enacted in our midst, and the desire for the adoption of some more logical mode of procedure has grown to be universal, at least among the classes who do not care to indulge in the amusement of shooting down their fellow beings. No doubt the rowdy element will look with disfavor on any change in the present system, which practically places at their mercy the lives of the peaceable inhabitants.

It is scarcely just that all the protection of the law should be afforded to those who, setting all law at defiance, make their own wills the only guide, while the victims of their violence are deprived of all protection. If this state of things continues it will be the interest of every one to defy the law, and we may look forward to the execution of summary vengeance for real or fancied wrong as a regular item of daily intelligence. If judges and juries are to be assembled, at some expense to the general purse, simply to tell us that they do not know whether or not killing is a crime, the sooner we dispense with the farce of holding courts of justice the better. Two ways suggest themselves of curing the present evil, and we think the moment has come when the remedy should be applied. The adoption of a rule which would make a two-thirds majority sufficient to secure the conviction of a criminal would undoubtedly give a real guarantee for the administration of justice. In addition, the present interpretation of the Jury law, which excludes the intelligent classes from the jury box, ought to be modified so as to apply only to such cases of prejudice as might be held to interfere with a juror's returning a true verdict according to the evidence. This was certainly the intent of the framers of the law, which legal sophistry has so distorted as to convert what was meant to be a safeguard for the innocent into a powerful shield for the guilty. With the introduction of these reasonable changes into our code we might hope to see abated, if not entirely suppressed, the murderous ruffianism which is a blot on our city and on our civilization.

Gambetta and President Thiers.

In his speech at La Ferté-sous-Jouarre on July the 15th M. Gambetta praised the republic as the embodiment of the principles of self-government, order and prosperity. He denounced the conservative party—that is, the monarchical majority in the Assembly—and in terms the most flattering complimented President Thiers, pronouncing his administration a grand success. President Thiers a few days ago surprised his conservative friends by declaring for the republic, and now Gambetta surprises many by declaring for President Thiers. After Thiers Gambetta is unquestionably the most powerful republican civilian in France. In the event of the death or retirement of Thiers Gambetta is the man to whom republican France would look. It is a good sign for the republic that two such men are agreed. It does not mean, however, that France has yet seen the end of the troubles begotten of the late war. A general election is hourly becoming more and more a necessity; but no living man can tell what would be the result of a general election in the peculiar circumstances in which France now finds herself. The pear is ripening.

TOO LATE—Colonel Blanton Duncan, of Kentucky, straight-out democrat, and Mr. Horace H. Day, of New York, Vice President of the Labor Reform League, in their efforts for a joint stock national convention, in view of a straight-out democratic and labor reform Presidential ticket and party for this contest. It is too late now for a third party, for the masses of the people, of all parties, have already made up their minds for Grant or Greeley. If Colonel Duncan could do nothing for a third party at Baltimore in July he will not be able to do much at Louisville in September.

A Blessing Not in Disguise.

Thanks to that Divine Providence which watches over the fall of a sparrow, New York has clean streets. The abundant dashing showers of Monday, pouring their torrents upon the three hundred miles of our paved streets, have conferred upon us a boon for which we have long looked in vain to the well-paid contractor. Clean streets for once we have, and are grateful. Fierce sunrays during the past fortnight, in spite of the exertions of Captain Thorne's broom brigade, had developed smells that threatened disease. We now have nothing which could offend the most sensitive nostrils, and the air of yesterday, though at full summer heat, was as wholesome and pure as that which sighs through the mountain passes of the Adirondacks or crests the waves at Long Branch. Nature taught us in her copious flooding the true way to secure a clean and healthy city. The practical water-cure is upon us, and our filth is buried in the ocean tides at our feet. Shall we never learn the lesson and wash our streets with the abundant water which surrounds us?

New York can easily and cheaply become the cleanest city in the world, and the healthiest. Just now the death rate of Philadelphia, where there has lately been a slight scarcity of water, has advanced beyond our own. We have had no lack of that inestimable blessing, pure Croton water, and should thank the wise prudence of those who provided it for us in such unstinted measure. With clean streets and abundant water rightly used we shall have little cause to fear epidemics as a result of summer heats.

CUBAN AFFAIRS—THE DEPARTURE OF VALMASEDA.—The most notable event mentioned in our budget of Cuban news this morning is the departure of the late Captain General Valmaseda yesterday from Havana, en route for Spain. It appears that an immense concourse assembled on the occasion to bid him farewell, and we presume that there was more a feeling of gladness than of sorrow among the assembled multitude in witnessing the departure of the man whose cruelties against the Cuban insurgents constitute his most conspicuous claims to distinction. We cannot doubt that the government of King Amadeus in this matter has acted in deference to the general opinions from the public press of the civilized world, touching the savage policy adopted and pursued to the last by Count Valmaseda in his efforts to suppress the Cuban rebellion; and from the high character of General Ceballos, the newly appointed Captain General of the island, we are confident that a more humane and enlightened policy will now be tried against the insurgents than that of Valmaseda, which has so signally failed. In short, abandoning the policy of extermination, we expect General Ceballos will do what he can to deserve success in adopting the policy of amnesty and conciliation.

THE INTERNATIONAL PRISON CONGRESS.—The last English mails brought the report of the first day's sitting of the International Prison Congress in London. All the European governments, with the exception of Portugal, were represented on the opening day. America, both North and South, was also well represented. Earl Carnarvon, in his opening speech, welcomed the delegates, but expressed his regrets that the British government when applied to refused to aid financially the scheme of reform contemplated. The warm welcome of His Lordship to the foreigners who had gathered together for so worthy a purpose outweighed the other consideration, and there is no room to doubt that the Congress, even without British support, will accomplish all its promoters intended it should achieve.

FISH AND THE CATACAZY PAMPHLET.

WASHINGTON, July 16, 1872.

Secretary Fish arrived here this morning, expecting the President to be here also, but for some reason the latter did not reach here. The Secretary is very much annoyed over the publication of Catacazy's defence. At the time the original document was prepared allusion was made as to its purport in these despatches. Mr. Fish then endeavored to obtain a copy from Chief Justice Chase, but failed. Since Catacazy's return to Europe he has consoled himself with the statement in a letter from Minister Curtin that the causes of differences between this government and Catacazy should not be the subject of further publicity. Silence was maintained until Catacazy's successor, Baron Offenberg, was received by the President. On that occasion the usual exchange of courtesies in the way of complimentary notes was marred on our part by an unnecessary allusion to the "late onpleasantness." The President's reply to the address of every Minister received is prepared at the State Department. In harmony with the declarations of the new Plenipotentiary, and as Baron Offenberg had only renewed considerations of the highest regard, &c., the Russian government regarded the reply of the President as uncalled for. It was this that gained for Catacazy permission to expose the alleged duplicity of the Secretary of State.

THE WEATHER.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER,
WASHINGTON, D. C., July 17—1 A. M.

Probabilities.

The lowest barometer will probably move eastward over northern New England on Wednesday, with westerly winds from New York to Virginia and westward. Cloudy weather, with possibly light rain, continue from Pennsylvania to Kentucky, but clearing away during the day; rising barometer and northwest winds prevail from Lake Erie northwestward.

No material change is indicated for the Southern and Gulf States.

The Weather in This City Yesterday.

Yesterday was rather a day of comparative relief from the excessive heat of the passing season. The forenoon and early afternoon were sultry as usual, but in the evening a cooling breeze set in which did much to reduce the temperature to endurable closeness. Judging from the freshening rains of the day previous and yesterday's pleasant change, there is still some hope that the hottest part of the season is not yet to come. There was one case of sunstroke yesterday, Edward McCusker, a poor street sweeper, who succumbed while at work in the Fourth ward, and who lies at the Park Hospital almost a hopeless case.

The following record will show the changes in the temperature for the past twenty-four hours in comparison with the corresponding day of last year, as indicated by the thermometer at Hudnut's Pharmacy, HERALD Building:—

CARL SCHURZ AT HOME.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 16, 1872.

Senator Schurz arrived home to-day. It is not yet announced but it is understood that he will make his opening campaign speech here next Monday night.

EGYPT.

The Shooting Affray Between Americans in Alexandria.

Investigation of the Case—Major Campbell Dangerously Wounded—Consul General Butler Away from the City.

TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

ALEXANDRIA, July 16, 1872.

A military commission is now sitting to inquire into the circumstances and facts connected with the shooting affray which occurred between a party of Americans in this city on the 11th instant. The affair, as will be recollected from the first despatch to the HERALD, was between the United States Consul General, George A. Butler, and Mr. Wadleigh, his Secretary, on the one part, and General W. W. Loring, Colonel J. M. Reynolds and Major William P. A. Campbell, who had served in the American Confederate forces, and have been recently employed in the army of His Highness the Khedive, on the other.

Generals Loring and Reynolds and Major Campbell testify to circumstances which, in their judgment, clearly show that the affray was premeditated by Butler and his friends and that their purpose was to take the life of Major Campbell.

The latter is dangerously wounded.

Butler left Alexandria in the mail packet steamer this morning.

The Cashiered Officers.

BRIGADIER GENERAL W. W. LORING.

A soldier from his fifteenth year, the General served with great distinction in Florida, on the Plains, in the Rocky Mountains, in Mexico (where he lost an arm) and as a division commander in the Confederate armies. Though yet in the prime of life he has probably been under fire more frequently than any officer now in active service in any country. It was remarked by a spectator of a great military pageant at Alexandria, in which Loring took a part, that his empty sleeve conferred on him more dignity and more honor than all the stars, crosses and gewgaws with which the well-padded breasts of the Egyptian pachas, generals and other officials were profusely covered. General Loring was a chief of corps, with his headquarters in the old Strangers' Palace at Alexandria, his command extending over the whole delta up to Cairo.

COLONEL A. W. REYNOLDS

was chief of staff of General Loring's Egyptian corps. He is a graduate of West Point. Colonel Reynolds served with distinction in the United States armies in Florida, on the Plains and in Mexico. Returning to Virginia, his native State, at the outbreak of the civil war, he distinguished himself as a brigadier general in the armies of the Confederacy, but particularly at the battle of the Gauley, in West Virginia. Colonel Reynolds was commissioned a general by the Egyptian agent in New York, but consented, on his arrival at Cairo, to be cut down to a colonelcy, with the promise of speedy promotion; but that promise had not been fulfilled.

MAJOR WILLIAM P. A. CAMPBELL.

Major Campbell is a fine type of the American sailor and officer. A Tennesseean by birth, he entered the United States Navy in 1847. In 1861 he resigned and reported for duty to the Confederate government and was ordered to Florida to organize the defences of that coast. At the request of Commodore Tattnall, of Merrimac memory, he was ordered to report to that officer, and served with him in and around Savannah. He was then detailed to proceed to England to superintend the building and take command of a steamer similar to the Susquehannah. It was he who suggested and planned the cruise in the North Pacific, which proved so destructive to the American shipping in that quarter, and he was selected by Admiral Maury especially for that work. He built and equipped his ship and got safely to sea; but a serious accident to her machinery compelled him to seek a port for repairs, and, permission being previously obtained, he ran into Calais, where his ship was detained, by order of the French government, to the end of the war. He was now connected with the heavy artillery, and was chief of staff to General Sibley, who is in command of the Khedive's artillery.

THE ALABAMA CLAIMS.

The Geneva Arbitration Board in Session Yesterday—A Variety of Matter Submitted to the Court—Speedy Work and Amicable Progress Anticipated.

TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

GENEVA, July 16, 1872.

The Board of Arbitration met to-day.

A large quantity of printed matter was submitted to the members and exchanged by the agents of Great Britain and the United States.

No other business was done, the Court adjourning after a session of less than thirty minutes duration.

There is no reason to anticipate further delay in the proceedings, nor is any lengthy controversy expected.

ENGLAND.

American Artistic Triumph in Opera—A New Peer of the Realm—Roman Catholic Movement in Support of the Holy See.

TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

LONDON, July 16, 1872.

Miss Clara Louisa Kellogg achieved great success in "Traviata" on Saturday, being recalled five times. The London journals unanimously concede her perfection in "Violetta." She has received the congratulations of the Prince and Princess of Wales.

A PEER OF THE REALM.

ROMAN CATHOLIC MOVEMENT IN SUPPORT OF THE CHURCH.

An influential meeting of Roman Catholics was held in this city last night, the Duke of Norfolk presiding.

Resolutions were adopted protesting against the action of the Italian government towards the Papal authorities and condemning the recent law passed by the German Parliament proscribing the Jesuits.

UNITED STATES NAVAL FLAG

Admiral Alden's Fleet About to Leave England.

TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

LONDON, July 17—5 A. M.

Admiral Alden, United States Navy, who has been visiting this city, yesterday rejoined his fleet at Spithead. The fleet will sail for Antwerp and Hamburg.

A WATERSPOUT IN COLORADO.

The Spout Empties Itself Over a Carriage and Drowns Two Persons.

DENVER, July 16, 1872.

A remarkable waterspout occurred on the Central City stage road, four miles above Golden City, on Sunday afternoon. The torrent of water struck a carriage containing G. Vierden, his wife, her sister and a girl named Blood, who reside five or six miles up the canon and were returning home. The two latter were drowned. The body of Miss Vierden was found some three miles below the scene of the disaster, covered with sand and débris. The road was badly washed out and rendered impassable.

Heavy storms of thunder and lightning, accompanied with rain, have visited this region and towards New Mexico during the past four days. The telegraph line south of Trinidad was not working yesterday.

ARRIVAL OF THE YACHT RAMBLER.

BOSTON, Mass., July 16, 1872.

The yacht Rambler, Captain H. Crocker, which sailed from Boston last spring for a trip to the Azores, arrived at this port this afternoon, having left Santa Cruz, Teneriffe, on the 21st of June. She has as passengers Mr. J. M. Forbes, owner of the Rambler; his sister, Mrs. Francis Cunningham; Miss Alice H. Forbes, Miss Sarah C. Jones and Miss R. L. Dabney. The trip has been highly enjoyed by all on board.

NORTH CAROLINA.

A Great Liberal-Conservative Ratification Meeting at Raleigh.

SPEECHMAKING AT MORDECAI'S GROVE.

Remarks by Senators Doolittle and Tipton, Governor Walker, of Virginia; Ex-Senator Miller, Governor Graham and Others.

RALEIGH, N. C., July 16, 1872.

This was a great day for Raleigh. It witnessed the grandest and most important political gathering since 1860 in point of numbers, enthusiasm and in the distinguished character of the speakers. At an early hour the streets were thronged with country people, and by ten o'clock, when the procession was formed in front of the Yarborough House, there were as many as ten thousand people in the neighborhood. The following was the order of formation:—

Oak City Brass Band.
Marshals.
Carriages containing distinguished speakers.
Honored guests in carriages.
Citizens in carriages and on horseback.
Citizens on foot.

The procession reached Mordecai's Grove at half-past ten o'clock. W. G. Mason, chairman of the Liberal Republican State Executive Committee, called the meeting and announced for President Hon. D. M. Barringer, of Wake, who, in taking the chair, delivered a short, well timed address, after which he introduced Hon. James R. Doolittle.

SENATOR DOOLITTLE'S SPEECH.

The Senator came forward amid much applause. He said he thanked God he was permitted to speak to North Carolinians as fellow-citizens; that years ago it was his pleasure to receive instruction from his venerable friend, Dr. Mason, of Raleigh, who had on this occasion petitioned the throne of grace, when Professor in New York College, and it was indeed a pleasure to be here to-day. He spoke at length in regard to the centralization of the powers of government towards which the present administration drifted, and warned people of the dreadful results that would inevitably follow should the administration succeed in the coming election. He spoke of the law allowing federal troops at the ballot box in cities, of the attempt to secure by legislative enactment control of the telegraph, with power of the Executive to suspend the writ of habeas corpus and other acts, as clearly and positively indicating the tendency of the party towards centralization. He denounced in unmeasured terms the many flagrant acts of ursupation and constitutional violations by the dominant party. In referring to past differences between the people of the North and those of the South, he believed it was intended by our forefathers the States should remain in the Union, and that they should have equal rights and priviliges; that they intended these States should never be deprived of these blessings by secession and dissension. Now t at this question was forever settled, let us and come together as one man to defend and protect the liberties of the people. He knew well the cause of dissension between North and South; he knew how the people of the South had suffered; knew their losses and, for one, could appreciate their sufferings. He had buried his eldest son who had fallen in battle fighting for the same principle of constitutional liberty that the Southern people thought they were fighting for and for which they fought desperately in earnest. He believed the power of centralization equally as dangerous as secession, and thought a union of all the States necessary that the citizen of one State may enjoy the rights and privileges of all other States. He read extracts from Mr. Greeley's letter of acceptance, in which he planted himself firmly in opposition to the acts which he had referred to, and which was the main plank of the administration platform. He then addressed the colored men present, and told them of the folly of voting in solid platoons against the moral and intelligent citizens of the South. Though they might continue to do so Greeley would be elected in November beyond the possibility of a doubt. He would carry enough Northern States, without the aid of a single Southern State, and then have it ty odd votes to spare. He briefly referred to the celebrated epistle of Greeley, saying that in the final consummation of the rebellion he was in favor of charity to all and malice toward none; that this position then assumed had never been given up, but he sacrificed his personal popularity and sustained great (pecuniary) losses. He concluded his eulogy of Greeley by saying he has the largest head, the kindest heart and the most extensive information of any man in the country. In referring to General Grant the speaker said he did not wish to abuse or speak unkink y of him. He was well known to the people; his life, his acts, his administration speak for themselves, and he would in charity draw the veil. He briefly referred to Lincoln, saying that but for his assassination, for which act the perpetrators alone were responsible, the same state of affairs would have existed in 1865 that we now see coming; that Lincoln would have inaugurated the same plans of peace and restoration that will occur in the administration of Greeley. In concluding he urged upon the people of the South to be guilty of nothing in the campaign that radical papers might magnify as outrages; to behave quietly and peaceably, but to work.

SHAKE HANDS OVER THE "BLOODY CHASM"

REMARKS OF EX-SENATOR MILLER.

Ex-United States Senator Miller, of Georgia, was next introduced, who entertained the audience for an hour in a brilliant and forcible speech. He reviewed briefly the general shortcomings of Grant's administration, but his speech was directed almost exclusively to the reconstruction laws and the finger Grant had in the matter. His rebukes and references to the "powers that be," were scathing and sarcastic. He, too, paid a glowing tribute to the life and character of Mr. Greeley, and promised to carry the State for him in November. Senator Doolittle earnestly desired a stenographic report of this speaker's remarks for a campaign document in the North.

GOVERNOR WALKER ON THE PLATFORM.

A recess was taken to enjoy a barbecue, which was bountiful. Afterwards Governor Walker made a speech of forty-five minutes, urging the people of North Carolina to throw off the yoke of radicalism in August, and set an example that Virginia will follow. His remarks were eloquent and earnest, and he created a most favorable impression by his fine looks, genial face and polished manners.

SENATOR TIPTON NEXT FOLLOWED

in an earnest speech, making direct charges against the administration and exposing the acts of the radical party at Washington, which had caused the organization of the liberal republican party. He said Senator Wilson, who had belonged to the liberals, had been bought over by the candidacy for Vice President.

He was followed by able remarks from ex-Governor Graham, of North Carolina, who said that the close of the war was really the commencement of the quarrel, and that the Cincinnati nomination was now

THE OLIVE BRANCH OF PEACE.

He was willing to meet more than half way his liberal republican friends. Next followed Judge Fowler and General W. R. Cox, of Raleigh, and Colonel Masten and Captain J. T. Davis, in enthusiastic remarks. The meeting throughout was enthusiastic and much good feeling prevailed.

There is speaking to-night in Tucker Hall and a torchlight procession in the streets.

THE VOTE IN 1868.

At the April election the republican State ticket was elected by an average majority of 19,000. In November of that year Grant's majority for President was 12,000. In August, 1870, the only State officer voted for was Attorney General, and the democrats elected their candidate by a majority of 4,995 votes, and carried the Legislature by an overwhelming majority. In 1871, on the Convention bill of the democratic Legislature, which was opposed by a great many democrats and was a very unpopular measure, the vote against it was 9,245 votes. This was considered a triumph by the republicans, but the democrats deny that it was a fair test of the strength of the two parties.

THIS WAS THE LAST ELECTION

held in the State, and it is, therefore, the latest data to judge from of the probable result of the present contest. But now the democrats are generally united, and it is predicted that the State will go democratic in August by from four to five thousand. This is the lowest estimate. Others claim a much higher majority. The democrats are sure of securing a majority in the Legislature, and will certainly elect five, and possibly seven, out of the eight Congressmen.

THE ABDUCTED CANADIAN.

Dr. Bratton Appears in Court, to the Great Surprise of His Captor—He Trusts in British Justice.

LONDON, Ontario, July 16, 1872.

The case of Dr. Rufus Bratton, who was abducted from Canada on the 4th of June and taken to South Carolina, came up on a writ of remand to-day. Bratton arrived here on Saturday last, but kept himself concealed until after the opening of the Court, when he made his appearance, to the great surprise of the defendant.

His testimony shows that Cornwall, the prisoner, laid violent hands upon him on Waterloo street, handcuffed him, with the assistance of a cab driver, and thrust him into the cars; that he protested to the last, and only yielded because he relied on British justice to sustain him in the end.

The case is further remanded.

AUSTRALASIA.

Colonial Progress, Governmental, Political and Agricultural.

New Mines of Copper and the Supply of Gold and Wool—The Coal Trade—Shipwreck—The British Naval Flag—The Church Question.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 16, 1872.

The steamship Mohongo, from Honolulu, arrived here to-day with dates to July 3 from that place, and to June 6 from Australasia.

Captain Edward Wakeman, of the Mohongo, was stricken with paralysis on the trip from Honolulu.

The following is a summary of the news.

New South Wales.

The members of the present Ministry have been re-elected and expect to meet Parliament with a working majority. They have partially arranged the Border Customs Treaty. It only requires the legislative sanction to become law.

The Executive Council has decided to enforce the extreme penalty of the law on Nichols and Lester. The latter made a full confession.

COPPER AND GOLD.

Splendid copper mines have been discovered near Broadwood and Boro.

The yield of the gold mines has decreased from want of water, but the returns of gold are good.

DEFICIT IN THE REVENUE.

A special audit of the government's shows a considerable deficit in the public revenue.

SHIPWRECK.

The steamer Clarence, from Sydney for Grafton, was totally wrecked on the 2d of June. The passengers and crew were saved. The wreck was sold for a mere trifle.

The bark Mary and Edith, from Puget Sound for Australia, laden with lumber, was wrecked near Noumea. A French resident purchased the wreck and got the vessel off. The ship Young Australia was lost a few hours after leaving Brisbane for London, with a cargo of 1,400 bales of wool and other produce. The ship and cargo were fully insured.

THE BRITISH SQUADRON.

The British war steamers Dido and Fawn are hourly expected to join the Australian squadron. A Rear Admiral will shortly assume command of the squadron.

TRADE.

Sydney is to be made a new depot and traffic s ta tion, with a permanent staff.

The coal export trade is increasing. A scarcity of tonnage just now prevents the execution of all the orders. A number of vessels are at Sydney loading for California.

Victoria.

The Chamber of Commerce has published a protest against the ratification of the California mail contract made by Premier Duffy, whose ministry, being defeated on the question of improper patronage, resigned. Mr. Francis, the new Premier, annuls all negotiations with Mr. Webb. The government will call for tenders for alternate mail service via the Cape of Good Hope.

THE WOOL CROP AND COTTON TRADE.

The scarcity of water is causing great losses to the farm squatters.

The next wool season is expected to be earlier than last and the clip somewhat lighter.

Thirty thousand cases of preserved meats were shipped for Europe last month.

POLITICS AND ELECTRICITY.

A political crisis causes great delay in parliamentary business.

The new ministry is expected to join that of Queensland in establishing a second cable to Batavia.

South Australia.

The wet season delays the resumption of the construction of the overland telegram line. The government has purchased a number of horses and will open a despatch express. Only 250 miles of the line remain to be completed, which will probably be early in August.

THE CROWN AND CHURCH.

Parliament has again passed a resolution ignoring the English government's order respecting the precedence of religious dignitaries.

The Markets.

SYDNEY, July 6, 1872.

Markets very firm. Wool unchanged. Tallow higher. Kerosene steady and in good supply. Tobacco advanced 2c. Lumber wanted.

The Melbourne markets are stronger. Devoe's kerosene, 46c.; inferior, 44c. a 45c., in bond.

SANDWICH ISLANDS.

Parliamentary Progress and the Public Finance—A Heavy Public Debt—Honors to the American Flag—Mariners Murdered.

TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 16, 1872.

The mails from the Hawaiian Islands supply the following news report:—

The Legislature at Honolulu has been in session eight weeks. The government has intimated to the honorable body that it must finish its business in two weeks more or the members will be sent home.

There has been appropriated $116,000 for the interests of navigation; $12,000 for the support of a government paper—the Gazette—and several other large sums for different objects.

The public debt will be quite large for this country, greater, it is said, than can be supported, it being not far from half a million dollars.

An attachment was issued by the Supreme Court at the instance of the Attorney General against the steamer Nebraska, in consequence of the introduction of the smallpox on her arrival from San Francisco in May last. H. Hackeneed & Co., agents, gave the necessary bonds to enable the vessel to proceed on her voyage.

The Legislature adjourned over the Fourth of July in honor of the day.

MURDER OF MARINERS.

Captain Mammen and Fourth Officer Rose, of the whaling bark Onward, from Sydney, were murdered on April 20 by the natives of Gowen's Island, Solomon's Group.

Several of the crew were wounded.

NAVIGATOR'S ISLANDS.

The United States Naval Protectorate—Murder of a Missionary.

TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 16, 1872.

News from the South Sea Islands states that Commander Meade, of the United States steamer Narragansett, formally assumed protectorate of Tutuila (Titiulla?) Island, where a private company has been formed to work the plantations.

The promoters of the enterprise allege that they have secured promises of differential duties on produce shipped to the United States.

Gordon, missionary to Errominga, has been murdered by the natives.

THE FIJI ISLANDS.

Revolutionary Democracy Almost Triumphant.

TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 16, 1872.

The Australasian and Polynesian advices at this port by the steamship Mohongo report that the Fiji Islands are undergoing incipient revolution. The government is powerless against it.

THE HERALD AND THE SOURCE OF THE MISSISSIPPI.

[From the Hudson (N. Y.) Star, July 15.]

The New York HERALD, not satisfied with carrying the war into Africa, is now engaged—in the person of one of its reporters—in exploring the head waters of the Mississippi. The reporter is a "canoeist," and his boat rejoices in the name of Dolly Varden.

CUBA.

Explosion of a Powder Magazine by Lightning—Seven Killed.

Departure of Count Valmaseda—Unsuccessful Search for Hidden Treasure—A Havana Journal on the Filibuster Pioneer—Various News.

TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

HAVANA, July 14,
Via KEY WEST, July 16, 1872.

Fort Monarca, at Nuevitas, was struck by lightning on the night of the 10th inst. The powder magazine exploded instantaneously with the stroke, and seven artillerists of the garrison were killed. One of the rifled cannons was carried a distance of fifty yards from its embrasure. Fort Monarca was built in 1869 by the city of Nuevitas, and was presented to the government in 1870.

Count Valmaseda embarked for Spain to-day. An immense concourse of citizens assembled at the Captain General's palace and upon the quays to bid him farewell. He is accompanied by Colonel Ortis and his personal staff.

The newspaper La España has suspended publication.

Don Suarez Vigil has been appointed Political Secretary of the island of Cuba.

The Spanish iron-clad Numancia will shortly sail for New York en route to Spain.

An expedition which left here some time ago to search for hidden treasure near the Laguna de Cortes, in the Vuelta Abajo district, has returned unsuccessful.

General Loño, the commander of Fort Cabaña and Morro Castle, is shortly to return to Spain.

The Cuban civil government has granted to coolies the right to return to China, after complying with certain prescribed conditions.

The Cable Company has chartered the steamer Quintin to carry telegrams between Havana and Key West until the cable can be repaired.

The Diario, commenting upon the seizure of the steamer Pioneer, says that vessel is a pirate, not a privateer, and that the commander of the Moccasin decided her status when he captured her and carried her into Newport. Had she been a privateer he would not have taken her, because a privateer is a vessel-of-war belonging to a nation recognized as a belligerent.

UTAH.

SALT LAKE CITY, July 16, 1872.

Referring to my despatches regarding the threatened outbreak of the Indians, telegraphic information has just reached this city announcing that Indian Agent Dodge and Colonel Nugent, of the Thirteenth infantry, had several stormy interviews with a large body of Indians in the southern part of the Territory yesterday and to-day. The Indians seemed determined to hold out for a long time, and the great body of them took to the hills.

Matters certainly looked warlike. After considerable effort on the part of the United States official, a number of the chiefs finally promised, the second time, to return to their reservations.

General Morrow hopes this will prevent war.

A special to the Evening Journal says:—"The Navajoes are not hostile, but the Elk Utes are troublesome and threaten a general war."

Chief Justice McKean to-day delivered a most elaborate decision in the case of the Emma Mines vs. The Illinois Tunnel Company, granting an injunction, as demanded, against the latter. The decision is well received and much commented on in the city.

J. M. Orr, chairman of the Territorial Liberal Committee, has issued a call for a Territorial Convention, to meet on the 25th inst. at Corinne, Utah, to nominate a candidate for delegate to Congress against George Q. Cannon, a Mormon.

LONG BRANCH.

The President Still at the Branch—How He Passes the Day and Whom He Receives—Everything Quiet at the Branch—Interview with Mayor Brown, of St. Louis—His Honor on the Political Situation.

LONG BRANCH, July 16, 1872.

It is all very well for an unreasonable public to be anxious for news about the "movements of Grant," but what is an unfortunate correspondent to do with a man who won't "move" at all on any account? Greeley may and does dance around for the general amusement and the furnishing of material for readable newspaper paragraphs. What he knows about the advantages of being perpetually advertised, under one pretence or another, in the great newspapers of the day, is of admirable service to him just now, and he is undoubtedly aware of that fact; but his rival down here seems to care nothing about the light comedy scenes of the Presidential play. He won't attend meetings, nor visit clubs, nor hang around the headquarters of committees, nor receive heavy and formal delegations. He won't take his little hatchet and go around barking up old trees and making his mark on young ones. He won't dig, nor plough, nor sow, nor reap nor mow. It would be an immense relief if he and Henry Wilson would set up an old tannery and a cobbler's stall and invite people down here to receive practical lessons in the art of transforming the fresh cowhide into ready-made patent leather boots; but there is no use in making that or any other suggestion of the kind—he won't adopt it. He won't do anything, in fact. He rises early every morning and walks around the limited area, termed "grounds" by courtesy, which surrounds his neat but unpretentious little cottage. Then he takes an early breakfast, and after that a brisk ride on horseback a few miles into the country. The remainder of the day he spends receiving his friends, who keep up a constant succession in the calling way until late in the afternoon. All must call in a very simple and informal way or they will not be received at all. The callers, for the most part, are personal acquaintances and friends of the olden time, who just drop in in passing, have a pleasant chat and then drop out again in the same quiet way. A good many of the visitors to-day, and, indeed, for several days past, were old soldiers—officers who had served under General Grant during the late war and with him in the Mexican war. Finding themselves at Long Branch, they cannot resist the temptation to call and see their old commander or comrade, as the case may be, who has since become so distinguished, and may be still more so before he dies. They remind him of the regiment they served in and the engagements in which they were engaged, and fight all their battles over again in a most agreeable way. This kind of people the President seems always very glad to see, and makes heartily and unaffectedly welcome; but the politician, no matter how eminent, who comes to talk politics and "the issues" and "the prospects" and so forth, may be certain of being entertained with a tremendous display of cold shoulder.

The statement that appeared in most of your misguided contemporaries in New York, to the effect that the President was to go to Washington this morning to attend an important Cabinet meeting, had no foundation in fact whatever. There was no meeting of the Cabinet in Washington or anywhere else to-day, nor will there be one any other day of the week. The President had some intention of going to Washington this morning on some business of minor importance—he does run down there sure every ten or twelve days—but he did not go to-day.

Everything is very quiet at the Branch just now. A strong breeze kept blowing off from the land side all day, making a seat in the shade on the cliffs over the blue ocean and incomparable strand a luxury worth struggling for; but moving about in the sun was anything but agreeable. The hotels are pretty full, the guests being the usual class of watering-place loungers of both sexes, and the absence of the great lights whose names are familiar in men's mouths is rather noticeable. The only remarkable stranger I saw here to-day was whom I had the pleasure of meeting in the breeze-blessed halls of the West End Hotel. I had a pleasant interview with this gentleman, who is a robust man, of first class physique and fine intelligence—the beau ideal of a representative of the business and politics of a great American Western city. Mr. Brown speaks highly and proudly of the condition of affairs in St. Louis, which he represents as all that could be desired. His city, he says, was never so prosperous as it is at present, or showed finer prospects for the future. The health of the city is excellent, its financial condition is as sound as a bell, and business is extremely lively. The Greeley-Brown movement is carrying everything before it in Missouri and that whole section. Mayor Brown himself regarded the Cincinnati nominations at first with great disfavor, nor is he entirely satisfied with them yet; but he finds the queer movement has now pushed itself beyond anything he ever expected or calculated upon, and he goes with his party in support of it. He is very anxious—rather despondent, in fact—for the future of the country under Mr. Greeley's administration, should the Philosopher get elected. The latter has many admirable qualities, but they are exactly such as would be dangerous in a man occupying the position of President of the United States. Gratz Brown, the Mayor said, stands very well out in Missouri; but the liberal ticket would carry that State with any other name in the second place upon it. Carl Schurz was never a very popular man out there. He did not get the Senatorship through his popularity, but by a combination peculiar to unsettled politics in a State. Carl, the Mayor believes, is a man of great capacity and attainments, though theoretical rather than practical. He has undoubtedly given Grant a great deal of trouble; but Mayor Brown thinks the conduct of the great German in that regard was prompted more by personal resentment than by pure patriotism. He thought to run the federal business altogether in Missouri, and Grant was not willing to allow him. That accounted for the sour milk in the cocoanut. The Mayor spoke rather kindly of General Grant and the difficulties he had to encounter in dealing with the republican malcontents. The Mayor is President of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad, and has just come from San Francisco, where he went on business for the road, which is being rapidly built, the Pacific end having been already laid down, and the city of San Francisco taking ten millions' worth of the stock. Political affairs there, he says, are pretty much the same as in Missouri.

FIRE ISLAND.

The Inducements Offered to Visitors—Fishing and Bathing—High Tariff—A Profitable Season Progressing—Hint to Excursionists.

FIRE ISLAND, July 14, 1872.

A long stretch of sandy beach, devoid of even a solitary blade of grass, washed on one side by the never ceasing, white crested steeds of old Neptune, which dash up its sloping shore, and on the other hand by the still waters of Great South Bay, forms a place of popular resort to invalids who require sea breezes and salt water bathing. Such a summer resort is the far-famed Fire Island. It is reached from New York by way of the Southside Railroad, the cars from Bushwick, Williamsburg, connecting with the Fire Island steamboat. Just before making further progress it may be well to inform the readers of the HERALD who are not familiar with the locality and the lines leading here that the

RATES OF TRAVEL AND ENTERTAINMENT ARE HIGH.

For instance, the fare from Bushwick to Babylon is $1 10; from the railroad depot to the steamboat landing, ten cents; from thence to Fire Island (distance only eight miles) across the bay, $1. Board by the day is $4 for adults; by the week it is $20. The "extras," such as bathing, boat hire and refreshments at the bar are simply outrageous. As a sample it need but be stated that to engage a sailboat, which everybody does who cares to fish, for a day is to pay $6; for half a day, $3 50. A bottle of common cider, which is sold everywhere else for forty cents, is attainable at the principal hotel at an outlay of $1 50. In fact the new comers, who have never heretofore placed themselves in the meshes of the King of Fire Island, are perfectly astounded at the modest (?) demands for everything called for outside the table d'hôte. The latter is pretty fair, however, which is the redeeming feature of the house. Then there are also billiard tables, a bowling alley and a ten pin alley. All these games are going the whole time. People—young folks especially—grow weary of bathing and piscatorial sport and "keep the ball rolling" in the alleys from morning till night.

BRILLIANT PROSPECTS.

There are at present about three hundred guests at Fire Island, and the remaining rooms in the hotels are being rapidly engaged by parties who are "swinging round the circle" of fashionable and health inspiring summer resorts. No matter how the winds blow one gets a fresh sea breeze here the whole time, which compensates the old habitués for the absence of vegetation and drives—their being neither on this desert island. Those who have not accustomed themselves to like this beach do not take so kindly to it. Mr. Sammis, who owns the cars which run from the depot to the steamboat Nelly White, and owns the latter also, has built an addition to his house, which can now accommodate 600 guests.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

the old Surf House on Fire Island accommodated but eighty persons and that almost sufficed to meet the demand of the select party of visitors who made it their place of sojourn in those bygone summer days. Then the lighthouse keeper managed to turn an honest penny in harboring visitors who could not find room in the hotel. Government shut down on that little enterprise, however, fearing the keeper of the beacon light on that important point might neglect to keep his lamps trimmed and burning, were he too much engrossed in attention to visitors. This year they look for 600 guests at the Surf. The Southside Railroad has popularized the place by making it easy of access; and if greater moderation were exercised in the charges, the summer influx might possibly be even greater than it is. As it is excursionists are invited to make the trip and return the same day. Trains leave foot of South Eighth street, Williamsburg, and give three and a half hours for recreation on Fire Island and permit of the excursionists returning by mail train the same day. It will cost from Brooklyn just $4 40 for each adult to make the trip to the island and back. Boat hire and refreshments charged for in proportion. It will, therefore, be necessary for parties bound on such a day's pleasuring to see to it that they are well supplied with cash for the trip. The fishing is good. The bluefish, blackfish and mackerel are running handsomely now, and fishermen rejoice thereat.

STONINGTON.

STONINGTON, July 13, 1872.

There are few of the old seaport towns on the Eastern coast where the relics of the Revolutionary wars are treasured with a more jealous care than in Stonington. The residents of this once famous whaling headquarters have been born and brought up on the rocky soil where their fathers died before them. They love to point out with pride to the stranger a few carefully preserved shells that were fired into their homesteads from British guns in the days when, fighting for dear liberty, they kept the invader at bay, with the aid of two old eighteen pound guns that are still on exhibition as mementos of the stubborn resistance which forced the aggressors to raise the siege. It is not many years since when Stonington owned about the largest fleet of whaling vessels that hailed from any Eastern port, and it still has the reputation of giving birth to some of the best seamen that ever sailed under the Stars and Stripes. The residents of Stonington have always been a seafaring people, and many of our best and fleetest first touched the water in that port. Ex-Commodore Loper and Captain Nat Palmer, two of our oldest and most experienced yachtsmen, are natives of Stonington. The Madgie is at present lying at Stonington, and will soon be fitted out for the August cruise. Captain Nat Palmer cruises around in his sloop yacht Sallie E. Day, and Mr. Richard Loper, Jr., flies his colors on the sloop Josie, one of the fastest boats in Eastern waters. The latter gentleman is the preux chevalier of the

and generally takes a large party of ladies out sailing in the Josie whenever the weather is favorable. Although not considered a fashionable watering place, Stonington boasts of one of the best hotels in the neighborhood of Fisher's Sound. The residents of Stonington are very anxious to receive a visit from the New York Yacht Club during the August cruise, and, should the yachts cast anchor, they will doubtless be received with a hearty welcome. Stonington is at present in a fervor of political excitement, and the nomination of

is generally received with great enthusiasm. In course of conversation with Judge Palmer, one of the leading republicans of the borough, that gentleman stated that the borough would certainly go for Greeley, and they had the most sanguine hopes that he would carry the State. He said there was no doubt Greeley would poll a large republican vote, and the democrats, including the most rabid copperheads, were for him to a unit. Should Greeley be elected the old Revolutionary will once more be brought into action. Greeley hats, Greeley fans and Greeley badges are noticeable with nearly every second person one meets, and the young ladies appear especially devoted to the fans bearing a likeness to the white haired philosopher. There are some very pleasant drives in the neighborhood of Stonington, through pleasant green pastures, along shady lanes, to the neighboring villages of Mystic, Westerley, Noank and others. The hotel will be very full during the mouth of August, and the young people anticipate a gay season.

NEW LONDON.

NEW LONDON, July 15, 1872.

The Pequot season has been remarkably successful this summer, as to-day there are 350 guests in the house, and there is not room for many more. Usually the busy term does not commence much before the first of August, but this year the larger portion of the residents arrived early and secured their rooms up to September. Nearly all the old residents who have made this house their headquarters for time immemorial are here again, but among them are many fresh faces on an experimental visit. The Pequot has always borne a good name for the excellence of its

and it certainly has not deteriorated in that very essential addition to the comforts of life. It requires an unusual amount of ingenuity to kill time at the Pequot, as there is really nothing to do. Luckily, one can get a good breakfast up to eleven o'clock A. M., so that, with the assistance of a cigar, noon is easily reached. The New York papers do not arrive until two o'clock P. M., and from twelve up to that hour the male portion of the community are decidedly miserable. Some avail themselves of the pleasure yachts and take a sail, while others lounge around in a listless manner and patronise the establishment on the lower floor. Dinner and another cigar brings one up to five P. M., when the piazza is in great demand, and the gossip and scandal cliques are set in motion. The band commences shortly after seven, much to the delight of the infantine boarders, who immediately take possession of the parlors and do the greater part of the dancing. A few of the elder boys, however, occasionally show themselves in the parlor, and after taking a turn repair to the piazza and tell one another how such and such a girl squeezed their hand, and then discuss the respective merits of the female sex, and exhibit a knowledge of their respective points as if they had been studying so much horseflesh.

THE LADIES

are an enigma in the morning, as they only show themselves in order to favor the gentlemen with a passing glimpse of a morning toilet, after which they are generally invisible until about two P. M., when they appear in a walking costume. At dinner they exhibit a third costume, and after that hour they generally remain on the piazza until bedtime.

There is nothing very startling so far in the way of gossip or scandal, except what may have arisen from the jealousy of the single ladies at the attentions paid to some of the married ladies by eligible young men.

There is a new house this season on the opposite side of the river, called the Edgecomb House, which appears to be very fairly patronized. It is run on reasonable terms. It is pleasantly situated, and the fare is simple, plain and wholesome.

There have been several yachts here this season, and

has made this place her headquarters since the 10th of June. Mr. James R. Smith, her owner, has taken one of the cottages adjoining the Pequot, and his family are stopping there for the summer. The Fleetwing, Mr. George Osgood, left here on Saturday morning, bound for New Bedford and the East. The Columbia, Mr. Lester Wallack, left on Saturday morning for Mamaroneck, N. Y., but will return about Wednesday. Mr. G. Haven and family are stopping at the Pequot, and his schooner yacht Restless is expected every day from the East, where she has been cruising for the past ten days. There is a very pleasant sloop yacht here, run by Captain Norris, that is in great requisition, and makes several trips daily. She is called the Frolic, was built this season, and her dimensions are forty-three feet over all, and sixteen feet four inches beam. One of the most useful additions to the comfort of the residents is called the Cecile, which makes half a dozen trips daily between New London and the Pequot House dock. This boat carries about forty or fifty passengers, and as she docks at New London, near the depot, is very convenient for passengers to the hotel. The residents are already beginning to look forward to the visit of the New York Yacht Club fleet, an event which generally serves to break the monotony of their existence. The majority of the residents of the Pequot are from New York, although there are a few hailing from Boston, Philadelphia and other large cities.

NEWPORT.

Summer Recreations at the "Swell" Resort—The Season Not Yet in Full Blast—The Cuban "Lion" Opposite the Dock.

NEWPORT, July 15, 1872.

This morning brought to light the skeleton that haunts the Pequot House in the shape of Monday morning bills. It would be hard to discover a more dissatisfied lot of individuals than many of those perambulating the piazza after breakfast, and from the occasional remarks that one could not help overhearing, such as "A charge of seventy cents for boot blacking, when I pay $200 per week," "Twenty-five cents for a cup of tea in my room," &c., &c., it was evident that somebody "was putting it on pretty heavy." It was my luck to be charged for a day longer than I had been in the house; but that, of course, was an oversight, and a gentle remonstrance rectified that accidental error. But seeing a charge of $1 50 for carriage hire I ventured to inquire what carriage, and was informed, "Carriage to take you to the depot." We finally accepted the position, and were conveyed drawn by an unfortunate Rosinante whose want of speed was apologized for by the colored gentleman manipulating the ribbons saying that Bones had made the trip twice before that morning. Where is Bergh? The trip

TO THE DEPOT IN A WAGON

FROM NEW LONDON TO WICKFORD

by the cars is far from pleasant in this weather, as, notwithstanding all precautions, one is certain to arrive encrusted with cinders and dust. The sail, however, in the steamer from Wickford to Newport is a most delightful change, and has the effect of refreshing the baked traveller before he arrives at his destination. The principal hotel is not very full at present, but the officials appear to be attentive to their guests, as we had the satisfaction of eating a tolerable dinner, which, after it was eaten, we discovered had been prepared for somebody else. There was no good, however, kicking up a row about the error, as, after all, we might have travelled farther and fared worse. There are at present, but the Cuban privateer Pioneer appears to be attracting general attention. She is certainly not in a pleasant position with a United States cutter lying alongside of her.

The Pioneer is a great favorite with the ladies, who sympathize with her in her misfortunes and watch the Lone Star as it floats in the breeze with marked interest.

The citizens of Newport have at last made a move in the right direction by improving their docks. They have now a tolerably decent dock, which is used by the Providence, Narragansett and Wickford steamers. They have also some steps and a tolerable landing place for yacht gigs and pleasure boats. This advance in civilization deserves a hearty recognition, and already ladies have taken advantage of the change and now venture to visit that locality and go out sailing—an event from which they were hitherto debarred by an accumulation of insurmountable difficulties. The schooner yacht

MADELEINE,

Commodore Jacob Voorhis, of the Brooklyn Yacht Club, is in the harbor, and there are also several small sloop yachts. The Fleetwing, Mr. George Osgood, left yesterday for New Bedford.

The drive is tolerably well patronized in the afternoon, but all the fashionables have not yet arrived. There are a few handsome turnouts, but the majority of the ladies appear to favor basket pony phaetons. Horseback exercise is not much in vogue, and that branch of recreation is at present limited to two or three equestrians.

GRATZ BROWN.

His Movements Yesterday—Annoyances from Interviewers and Photographers—He is Going to the Seaside—A Ride in the Park Last Evening and a Lunch at Delmonico's—What He Thinks of the Outlook for November.

The Vice Presidential candidate showed a marked improvement in his condition yesterday morning, and sat listening to conversations in his room or receiving such of his old friends and acquaintances as called in the spacious parlors of his friend Dr. Steele's residence, in Great Jones street, during the entire forenoon. The visitors were almost innumerable, and most of those admitted to see the Governor were either old college classmates of his at Yale, or friends of former years, from Kentucky and Missouri. Among these last was Mr. Jamison, of the firm of Jamison, Smith & Codding, bankers, of St. Louis.

Mr. Ethan Allen, Chairman of the Liberal Republican National Executive Committee, called in the afternoon and had some conversation with the Governor, which was not, however, of an important character, and Mr. Allen remained but a short time.

Among the annoyances to which all

LIONS HAVE TO SUBMIT

are the persistent demands of photographers for sittings. It has been stated that Mr. Greeley was, some weeks ago, nearly distracted by these operators, who desired to catch his counterfeit presentment with bare muscular arm and axe on shoulder. Finally, when in their frenzy they insisted upon driving him up a tree, he rebelled. Escaping at the time he has since eluded their toils, and they, searching for a new victim, have by concerted action and to a man gone for Governor Gratz. The Vice President in prospective received them kindly as they came pouring in and explained that he would notify them of his coming to their respective galleries, each in good time. Thus several of the best known establishments have completed extensive preparations for the event, and are living from day to day on the qui vive of expectancy.

The Governor is quite weak yet and wears a weary air, with sometimes a look of longing in the eyes as of one who regrets absence from home. He spoke yesterday of his sudden illness, in which he is now removed from all danger, as perhaps the best event that could have occurred to him, warning him as it did of the limits beyond which, even by a robust man, industry cannot be safely pushed. Not having suffered from sickness for some years, he had entered upon the labor of the campaign with and had worked incessantly for months with hardly three hours of rest in twenty-four. Till two or three o'clock each morning he had sat up dictating and writing, buried in a correspondence that covered the country from Maine to the Pacific Coast. The sudden prostration which had overtaken him, fortunately without fatal results, taught him that he must exercise discretion in the tasks he has set for himself in future. He intends within three or four days to leave the city for some quiet place on the seashore, where he can find surf bathing and escape from the throngs that constantly surround him. In two or three weeks he expects to be recuperated, and he will then return to St. Louis and the West.

At four o'clock yesterday afternoon the Governor, with his friend and physician, Dr. Theophilus Steele, drove out on the avenue and through Central Park, with which he expressed himself delighted. Returning before dusk, they lunched at Delmonico's and were home early in the evening.

Speaking of the prospects of the campaign, Governor Brown says he can see no possible

to secure more than three States, and even these are acknowledged to be doubtful. The States alluded to are Connecticut, Massachusetts and South Carolina. A gentleman from Massachusetts, who held a conference with members of the Liberal Republican Executive Committee yesterday, sent word to Governor Brown that his State would, notwithstanding present appearances, give a handsome majority for the liberal ticket in November. Others were of the opinion that should any reasonable effort be made in South Carolina the vote of that State would be cast with her sister States of the South, and the representative men of Connecticut were unanimous in promising a majority of from five to ten thousand in the State of common schools and wooden nutmegs.

In regard to Iowa, which had by some been considered doubtful, the Governor remarked that the more densely populated counties bordering on Missouri had become infected with the popular feeling in the latter State, and the people there were among the most enthusiastic reformers. This feeling, too, was fast spreading, and would long before election day have swept completely over the State.

Governor Brown seems to regard the present movement as one of those great tidal waves of opinion which, rising from a deep popular sentiment, passes beyond the control of politicians, and, while it carries some forward on its crest, buries thousands who strive to ride thereon beneath its undertow forever.

THE GREELEY HEADQUARTERS.

Movements of the Philosopher—He Gives Himself a Rest—The Visitors at the Glenham—Letter from Ex-Senator Stewart—Position of Sumner and Forney.

Mr. Greeley returned from Long Island at daybreak yesterday and took the early train for Chappaqua, being almost exhausted with the continued excitement and worry of the past week, and anxious for rest. He will amuse himself to-day probably with chopping, having more leisure for that exercise now than he has had before since he owned his farm. During the campaign it is probable the woods will be beautifully trimmed, until the wooded hillsides present the appearance of an English park. He will probably return to the city this morning.

VISITORS AT HEADQUARTERS.

The following is a list of distinguished visitors at the Glenham headquarters yesterday:—C. M. Rucker, James M. Gray, of Georgia; D. H. Armstrong, of St. Louis, Mo.; William Rhodes, of St. Louis; A. D. Banks, of Mississippi; Colonel C. W. Baker, of New York; William B. Maxson, of New Jersey; E. Jefford, of Mississippi; Walter Trumbull, of Illinois; H. H. Hubbard, of Knoxville, Tenn.; General E. A. Merritt, of New York; John A. McCaull, of Salem, Va.; William Lowenstein, of Richmond, Va.; John V. Reynolds, of Pottsville, Pa.; Colonel Shorter, of Eufaula, Ala.; Colonel Herndon, of Alabama; Mayor S. Rich, of Alabama; Andrew H. H. Dawson, of New York; D. C. Birdsall and General Cabell, of Arkansas.

SOUTHERN SENTIMENT.

Colonel Shorter, in conversation with Mr. Everts, of Montana, said that the democrats down South did not care a cent for Greeley's past record. Said he:—"We don't ask him to go back on a single one of his life-long principles. We would not honor him as we do now if we thought he could be persuaded or paid to deny his old abolition record. We love and trust him now for his present record, his amnesty sentiments and his earnest desire for harmony and reconciliation." Colonel Shorter is an electric orator and made the most thrilling speech at the Chappaqua gathering on Saturday.

Colonel Herndon, of Alabama, who is running for Governor in that State, remarked that if Greeley was defeated he did not care to remain in political life. It is the last chance for the Southern people; and if Grant is elected the whole white population of the South is remanded to the servitude of the last seven years.

The National Democratic Executive Committee have so far delayed opening their headquarters. No reason is assigned for the delay, except the fact that they have found no rooms yet just suited to their wants. Mr. Augustus Schell and Ethan Allen, in their conference on Monday, discussed the matter of a mutual arrangement as to finances, but what the result was is not known.

Senator Thomas A. Hendricks, of Indiana, who has been stopping at Mr. Birdsall's for some days, had an interview with Mr. Greeley on Monday and left for home yesterday. He is the Greeley candidate for Governor of Indiana, and expresses an assurance that Indiana will go heavily for the Greeley ticket.

The following letter from ex-Senator James J. Stewart, of Michigan, gives some most interesting statements concerning affairs among doubtful republicans in Washington:—

LETTER FROM EX-SENATOR STEWART.

DEAR SIR—The administration forces in Washington are fearfully demoralized. Cameron was over last week, and is in great distress over the Pennsylvania situation, having endeavored, as I know, to invoke the good services of a friend of mine for a reconciliation with Forney. He was told "It is too late." Robeson, also, puffing in distress, asked what could be done in heaven's name to save Pennsylvania, and was told "Nothing." They are at their wits' end about Pennsylvania, and have lost head as completely as they did about consequential damages. What will they do when Governor Curtin arrives, as he will shortly, and takes the stump for Greeley and Brown? Colonel McClure assures me this is a fact. I mentioned it to Mr. Sumner in an interview I had with him on Friday, and he exclaimed:—"That settles the question." I had a long and free interchange of opinion with Mr. S., being an old friend, and I think succeeded in removing some embarrassments he expressed as to coming forward. I tried to satisfy his conscience as to his duty to the negro, that it would be subserved by his joining us, and the question was not whether they were to practically realize the rights granted to them by law, but whether the rights of all were to be secured by the preservation of our Federal Republic against Cæsarism. If the colored people, in their ignorance of their true interests, voted for Grant and thereby imperilled their liberties, as well as ours, it was his duty, with more intelligence, to vote for their true interests, and advocate them against their present will by opposing publicly the election of Grant, and advocating that of Greeley. He said it was a philosophical view of the subject, and I judge will act upon it before long.

Two of the five delegates to the Grant State Committee of Maryland, from Prince George's county, have declared for Greeley and Brown. JAMES J. STEWART.

THE GERMAN DEMOCRATS.

Action of the German Union Democratic General Committee Last Night—Enthusiastic Endorsement of Greeley and Brown.

The German Democratic Union General Committee, Coroner Schirmer presiding, met at the Teutonia Assembly Rooms last night, when the Executive Committee, through Mr. Goettman, its chairman, submitted a report endorsing the action of the Democratic National Convention at Baltimore, in nominating Horace Greeley and Gratz Brown, the Presidential nominees of the liberal republicans, and in endorsing the platform of the Cincinnati Convention, declaring that they hail with satisfaction the action of that convention, and pledging that they will support the ticket to insure its election. Further, that they call upon all German voters, in the interest of democratic principles, and for the sake of local, State and national reform, of general progress and of individual and national rights, to agitate during the campaign for Greeley and Brown, to insure their election.

These resolutions were passed by an enthusiastic and unanimous vote, notwithstanding a loud and angry protest by one delegate named Herz Stern, who in disgust left the hall.

A resolution was also passed declaring that the present Presidential campaign is not an agitation of one party against another, but a rising of the people against corruption and usurpation—a struggle of patriotism against a corrupt administration. It was, therefore, further resolved to appoint a committee of seven to confer and jointly act with other central organizations on the subject. The committee was composed of Messrs. Dr. Mierson, Henry Peter, Dr. P. Merkel, A. Eickhoff, Carl Weidling, Magnus Gross and Jacob Koehler.

SPICE OF THE CAMPAIGN.

Greeleyotypes and Grantographs.

The following bits of political personalities are from the Albany Evening Journal (Grant organ):—

"They ought to have begun talking about nominating Greeley, but not to have actually made him the candidate till four years hence. By that time we would have become used to it and, perhaps, reconciled. As it is, the thing comes too suddenly." So said a democrat to us.

A democrat was asked the other day for whom he would vote. His answer was, we give it literally, "For Greeley, damn him." That's the way many of them feel about it.

Our democratic friends havn't as much to say about "black republicanism" since they have made the blackest of black republicans their standard bearer.

Gratz Brown's nomination has produced one result. For twenty-five years since his graduation at Yale he had been as neglectful of his Alma Mater as she had been forgetful of him. He now visits her to claim relationship. In doing so he assumed to intimate that she was not as smart as she pretended to be, at which the old lady took offence. So Brown didn't make much of his visit, except to display his vanity.

"I might have stood Greeley, or Greeley without Brown, but to be asked to swallow both turns my stomach," said a democrat the other day. And it certainly is a nauseous dose for "an old liner"—these republican pills, with no sugar coating!

The Hartford Courant says Voltaire used to say of the diminutive territory of Geneva, "When I shake my wig I cover the whole republic with powder." It is the prouder boast of Horace Greeley, "When I put on my white hat I cover the whole democratic party with felt."

An old democrat from the backwoods, arguing in one of the hotel parlors at Baltimore in favor of regularly nominating Greeley, said:—"If you nominate Greeley here he is the best democrat living; but if you adjourn without nominating him he is the same d—d old fool that he always was."

The Argus wants to know why General Grant should be elected. One very good reason is because his opponent is, according to the Argus, a "financial abortionist" and an "incompetent addlepate."

The Chicago Post (Grant) speaks of the assemblages who listen to speeches in favor of Greeley as "squawking audiences."

Observes the Chicago Post:—"Mr. Greeley is a 'mucker' and a 'temperenzler' in the eyes of the Germans of the land, and because he is he cannot receive their votes. He cannot be forgiven for his muckerthum, simply because he is, as some say, a free thinker."

The Musquash (Phœbus! what a name!) Times goes for Greeley. It is a good agricultural name, nevertheless.

Williamsport, Pa., boasts of a number of Greeleyized republicans.

In Vermont Greeley clubs are springing up among all the green hills and valleys.

An old democrat of Pennsylvania declares the growing sentiment in favor of Greeley to be "like a prairie tornado that sweeps over the country, coming from no one knows where."

THE TAMMANY RING.

The Cases of Tweed and Connolly Before the Supreme Court.

IMPOSING ARRAY OF COUNSEL.

A Formal Decision Suggested by Judge Miller.

CHARLES O'CONOR'S REMARKS.

Opening Argument for the "Boss" and Ex-Comptroller.

THE CHIEF QUESTIONS.

Can the State Sue and What Would Become of the Money?

ALBANY, July 16, 1872.

Pursuant to the proclamation of the Governor, the Supreme Court met in extraordinary General Term, Judges Miller, Potter and Parker presiding, at the Capitol to-day, to hear the arguments in the appeal against the decision of Judge Hogeboom overruling the demurrer in the case of the People of the State of New York vs. William M. Tweed and others.

The following counsel appeared for the defendants:—David Dudley Field, Edwin W. Stoughton, William Fullerton, John E. Burrill, John H. Reynolds, W. O. Bartlett and Elihu Root.

The following counsel appeared for the people:—Charles O'Conor, Samuel J. Tilden and Wheeler H. Peckham, who now appear as respondents, the defendant having appealed from Judge Hogeboom's decision against the demurrer. The demurrer was that the State had no right to bring the suit. Messrs. William A. Beach and Samuel J. Courtney also appeared for Connolly and Fields.

THE CASE OF WILLIAM M. TWEED.

The case of Tweed was called, and Judge Miller suggested that as the case was to go to the Court of Appeals the Court make a formal decision.

Mr. D. D. Field said there could be no appeal to the Court of Appeals without an order of judgment, and asked what was to be done as to a judgment. If the Court of Appeals reverse the decision here it will order a new trial, and there must be a trial and an investigation now, in order that the Court of Appeals may have something to act upon.

Messrs. W. A. Beach and W. O. Bartlett put forth similar views referring to the decision of Judge Hogeboom, who was too sick to examine the matter and render an opinion.

Judge Miller said the Court would hear argument, and referred to the fact that the Court below, understanding that the case was going forward in any event, had rendered a formal decision.

Mr. D. D. Field said that, though these cases have been up four or five times, no opinion had really been received as yet.

Mr. W. A. Beach said that he hoped an arrangement could be made whereby these cases could be carried directly to the Court of Appeals for final action.

Judge Miller said that might be done by stipulation.

D. D. Field—Certainly. Let a judgment for a nominal sum be fixed upon and not entered on the record of the Court, and the case be thus carried up.

Judge Miller said it seemed to him that that was the best way. It was an excellent suggestion. What do you say to that on the other side?

STRONG OBJECTIONS TO A STIPULATION.

Mr. O'Conor—We will take the proposition into consideration as the argument progresses. We are dealing with numerous parties and numerous counsel, and how far we may agree with the stipulation it is doubtful. I am strongly impressed with the belief that it is our duty to push this case on without listening to any form of proposition from the other side. He had been coerced by his associate to accept terms in one of the cases, and when everything was done the defendant flew from the arrangement. He felt that he and his associates had done well in not letting a single one of the defendants escape. He felt that they had done the public service in so acting. Therefore, unless he could see a reason otherwise he would advise his associates not to make any bargains or arrangements of this character. He said counsel might talk, and could talk for a long time on both sides, but he insisted that there was no doubt respecting the points raised. He was willing to stake his reputation on the declaration that when this case reaches the Court of Appeals not a single Judge will feel any doubt, and not one will sustain the points raised by the defendant.

The counsel was proceeding in this manner when Judge Miller reminded him that he was

DISCUSSING THE MERITS OF THE CASE.

W. A. Beach—That is so, and I hope we will be heard in reply.

Mr. O'Conor disclaimed discussing the merits of the case.

D. D. Field claimed the right of replying.

Mr. O'Conor insisted that he was only protesting against magnifying these points.

D. D. Field rose to reply and demanded the right to do so.

The Court consulted and said the counsel would be given abundance of time to answer in his argument. Some conversation ensued between the Court and counsel as to the time to be occupied in arguments. The Court thought the Tweed and Connolly cases ought to be argued together. It was finally agreed to give four hours to each side arguing the Tweed and Connolly cases together, as they are similar, and in the meantime the Court said they hoped the counsel would consider the proposition for a stipulation.

MR. STOUGHTON OPENS THE ARGUMENT FOR TWEED.

Edwin W. Stoughton then proceeded to open the argument for the appellants. After referring to the fact that an appeal in all cases is provided for, he said the decision here took the form of a judgment, and proceeded to show the importance of a judgment when rendered by this Court. He said this was a suit at law, seeking to recover a judgment for $6,000,000 obtained, as it is claimed, by fraud. The first question was, can the people, on the complaint made, maintain an action? and he turned to an act entitled "An act to make provision for the government of the county of New York." He read the act to show that the officials named therein were empowered as county officials to issue bonds, raise money on them and deposit the money with the County Treasurer. "Does this not show," he asked, "that there were county authorities to do all acts therein specified, and who owned the money deposited with that treasurer? Has the Court any doubt on this point?" That was the question underlying this case, and to answer disposes of it. In ordinary cases he would proceed no further, but this was a suit brought by the people of the State of New York to recover this money. It was nowhere averred that the people of the State owned this money, nowhere averred that they controlled it while in the hands of the County Treasurer. No Court has yet determined that the people of the State owned this money raised on bonds issued by the county, and for which the county pledges its faith.

The counsel then proceeded to detail the proceedings of the Board of Audit. He also quoted the law authorizing the issue of the bonds, and then asked if this Court would allow a county to set up as a defence that it could not pay them because all the money raised upon them had been wrongfully used. Would this Court say that the county was not liable, but that the State was and could pay when it pleased, because, forsooth, the Legislature of the State had authorized the county to issue the bonds? He said his respect for this Court would not let him detain the Court much longer on this point. The county officers had disposed of this money and the county is still liable;

BUT WHO OWNS THIS MONEY?

the county or the State? If in this case it belongs to the State does not the same idea apply to all other counties of this State; and if so, where is the authority? The counsel then argued at some length the obligation of the county to pay these bonds. He asked, could the State assume the obligation to pay these bonds? and called the attention of the Court to what the constitution said about the State assuming such obligations. He referred to the averment that the suits brought by the Supervisors are collusive, and brought only to interfere with the suits subsequently brought by the State. It would, as the Court knows, make no difference how many such suits were brought, provided the State was entitled to bring suit. Then why, he asked, is this averment made here? Therefore he could not see how the plaintiff's case could be strengthened by bringing these suits. He, as counsel, had no interest in those suits; he only wanted to see, when the legal axe falls, that it falls in a legal track and is wielded by a legal hand. He called attention to the fact that in the complaint there was no averment against Tweed of fraud. There was an averment that after the money was deposited in the bank he participated in its division; but even in this there is no averment of fraud on his part.

THE ARGUMENT FOR CONNOLLY.

Samuel J. Courtney then opened the argument in the case of Connolly. He said this case, which is similar to the Tweed case, had been so ably presented by the counsel who had just taken his seat that but little was left for him to say. He commenced by referring to the declaration made by Mr. O'Conor that no judge could or would sustain the point raised by the defence, that they were frivolous. Counsel maintained that Mr. O'Connor was entirely mistaken, and cited the opinion of Judge Learned, as also that of Judge Hogeboom. The former declared it to be one of grave moment. Counsel read from Judge Learned's opinion to sustain what he said. He said it would not do to decide so important a case as this on the mere dicta of the counsellor upon the cry of "Thief, thief!"

The counsel then read a report of the proceedings as published by the Associated Press before Judge Hogeboom, saying that it was the correct report, and that which was published by the counsel on the other side, W. H. Peckham, a few days afterwards, was incorrect. He read this report to show that Judge Hogeboom also considered the point raised important—so important that in his condition of health he could not consider upon and render a mere pro forma decision, so that the case might be carried up. The counsel then asked if it was not time for the counsel on the other side and the public press to cease their clamor that the points raised by the defendants were of no consequence. As to the case of Mr. Connolly, the complaint had not been verified by even

THE FATHER OF ALL THE COMPLAINTS,

Mr. Tilden. Counsel, then stated the case of Connolly, and claimed that in time it would be clearly shown that he was entirely innocent. Counsel then at some length argued the point as to the right of the State to step in and bring suits such as these. He denied this right, and challenged the production of authority warranting it. He found no authority given to these gentlemen by the Corporation Counsel to bring these suits; but he did find a correspondence by which it was proposed to institute such proceedings as would secure the return of this money to those to whom it belonged. Those proceedings have been instituted. The only charges against Connolly were that he had neglected his official duties, and the amounts are so large that there is suspicion of fraud. In answer to this, we say,

CONNOLLY'S DUTIES WERE OFFICIAL,

governed by statute, and we insist that the people of this State have no right to call him to account for neglect of official duties, even were he guilty of it. Where is the authority that gives the Attorney General power to bring these suits? The action is brought to recover money lost by his neglect of duty. To whom did this money belong? Did it belong to the State? It belonged to the city and county of New York. Then by what right do the people of the State claim it? Who are the obligors mentioned in the bonds? Is it the people of the State? No; it is the people of the county of New York, and they are the ones, then, the only ones, who are liable to pay them, and the money to pay them is to come from the taxable inhabitants of the city and county of New York. The people of the State have no interest whatever in them. Suppose, he asked, the State recovers this money, what will it do with it? This was one of the questions which troubled Judge Hogeboom. He asked, What will eventually become of the money? Who will get it? Where will it go to, and, I ask, where would it go? Would it go into the State Treasury to be used in improving its canals or other great public improvements? The counsel referred to the effort made to legitimize this action by introducing a bill in the last Legislature. The bill was introduced by Mr. Tilden, a member of the House, and this action, counsel said, he had anticipated. He had said it would be done, and he was assured it would not be; yet it was done, and he declared that this was a cognovit of the fact that their action could not be maintained in Court.

SO FEARFUL, SO CONVINCED

were they that they could not sustain themselves, they were obliged to resort to the device of securing an ex post facto law to assist them. The bill failed, however; it never became a law. Counsel then referred to a law which appropriated $50,000 to pay these counsel. That law directed the county of New York to pay these gentlemen. This was a recognition of the county for this purpose. Counsel argued further against the plea of the interest of the people of the State in the matter, citing numerous authorities. He would not discuss the existence and organization of the Board of Supervisors of New York, leaving that to the counsel to follow him. Counsel concluded with an earnest appeal to the Court to pass upon the question with that impartiality characteristic of it.

MR. O'CONOR'S REPLY.

Mr. Charles O'Conor followed, saying he agreed with the counsel on the other side, who proposed to leave out of discussion here the matter concerning the Board of Supervisors as unimportant and irrelevant at this time. By so doing the Court would find themselves rid of much perplexity. He would therefore ignore all relative to that matter. He then read from the law authorizing the issue of bonds, explaining its provisions as he read. The Comptroller, who is not the County Treasurer, was to pay this money raised on the bonds to the holders of claims against the city and county. It was the Comptroller who was to pay out this money. The bonds were issued, the money was raised and the Comptroller paid the claims. This was all regular under the law, except in the matter of paying fraudulent claims. When Mr. Courtney alluded to the bill passed by the Legislature, providing $50,000 for the fees of counsel in these cases, Mr. O'Conor stated that he did not receive any such money.

Mr. Courtney replied that he did not say he did, but the bill was passed making that appropriation nevertheless.

Mr. O'Conor said that he did not receive a cent of the money, neither did Mr. Tilden. Their services had been given gratuitously.

Here the hour for recess arrived, when the Court took a recess till four o'clock P. M.

Afternoon Session.

On the reassembling of the Court, at four P. M., Mr. O'Conor continued his argument. After explaining how these bonds were authorized he asked who was to suffer from the misdoings in the matter? It was not nor would be the bondholder, because he had parted with his money in good faith, and the bonds were issued to him by the proper officers and under authority of law. He would be paid fully. Then who was it, he asked again, who was to suffer? It was the taxpayer, or he who would be the taxpayer when and as the bonds became due. He contended that this money was never in the county treasury, and if it ever had any lodgment there it was, according to a proper construction of the law, improperly there. The bonds were to be issued, money raised upon them, and that money used to pay certain claims. The Comptroller was to pay these claims with this money. He was not to deposit it in the county treasury, and therefore that department never had any possession or control over it. He then returned to the question as to

and that was the tax payer—persons perhaps now unborn. The corporate authorities—the Board of Supervisors—are not the ones who are to pay these bonds. The bonds are to be paid by taxation only. He asked, "Then is any body, any entity, to be injured—any one, in short, but the taxpayer;" and then, he said, "no individual taxpayer can bring a suit to recover this money; no one can bring this suit but the people of the State, represented in their sovereign corporate capacity."

Mr. Stoughton asked who it was that owned this money?

Mr. O'Conor said if such a question was relevant he had but one answer to make, and that was that the State of New York owned it. The State authorized the issue of the bonds, which took the money from the people of the State. Counsel argued at considerable length the point as to whom the money belonged. He put the case thus:—Agents of the State were authorized to raise, say $1,000,000. They raised instead $6,000,000. The State says, "You have who cannot get it back again, but I will step in and make you give it to me. It is my money, which you raised through my authority. Local governing corporations, he said, may, like all other corporate bodies "defend actions brought against them and prosecute actions in defence of their corporate or official property or rights. But they do not, in any general legal sense, represent the local population or the local taxpayers past, present or to come, nor is it their duty, nor have they any authority, to institute suits or proceedings to preserve or vindicate any public or private right of such persons to sustain this claim. He quoted various authorities, and he, therefore, asked, if the State has not the right to bring this suit who has? He held that the county was only liable as the servants of the State. Every dollar was to come out of the citizens of the State. Counsel then discussed the organization, powers and duties of the Board of Supervisors, holding that their powers and duties were of the most limited character. He pursued this point at much length.

Here Mr. O'Conor was interrupted by a conversation between counsel and the Court as to the time to be taken on each side, when Mr. Beach said that he hoped the arguments would be concluded to-morrow as he had written to the President of the Court of Impeachment that he was engaged here, and asking a postponement of the Barnard trial till Thursday. It was agreed that the argument would be so made as to be concluded to-morrow, and the Court thereupon adjourned, to meet at nine A. M. to-morrow.

DANGEROUS STABBING AFFAIR.

Arrest of the Perpetrator—Ante-Mortem Statement—The Victim Spirited Away.

On Monday night Philip Hammerer, living at No. 224 West Thirtieth street, and Henry Meyer, both Germans, became involved in a quarrel, during which the latter stabbed his adversary in the abdomen, right side, inflicting, it is feared, a fatal wound. Meyer was promptly arrested by the Twentieth precinct police and committed to the cells to await an examination by the proper authorities. Dr. Moeller, of West Thirty-ninth street, who was called to attend Hammerer, found him suffering from a stab wound on the right side of the abdomen (over the anterior superior spine of the ileum), the stab having passed inward, backward and slightly upward, probably entering the abdomen. Although Hammerer was in no immediate danger of death, Dr. Moeller thought it advisable that his ante-mortem examination should be taken. In compliance with the Doctor's request Coroner Keenan subsequently called at 224 West Thirtieth street, and, much to his surprise, found that the wounded man had been removed to a house in Twenty-ninth street, the number of which could not be learned. This looks very much as if Hammerer was less dangerously injured than was at first supposed.

DR. LIVINGSTONE.

[From the London Telegraph, July 4.]

Yesterday we were all children again, listening to the outlines of a tale of travel daring as Vasco di Gama's, solitary as Crusoe's, romantic as Masco Polo's. The story of Livingstone's marches through the heart of Africa's dark mystery was at last related in our columns, and by this time everybody knows broadly where he has been, what he has done, and how the enterprising American found him out at last, "stout, strong and undismayed," among the black faces of Ujiji. Such a narrative has seldom been heard even in the old times when the globe was young and unexplored; and before many generations have passed the planet will be so thoroughly traversed in all directions that the sense of novelty and strange revelations which makes this account so thrilling will have become a bygone possibility. Thus the public enjoyed yesterday a pleasure which our posterity can scarcely know—such a pleasure as Athens must have felt on hearing the "Euterpe" of Herodotus read; or Carthage, when Hanno came back in his galleys from outside the "Pillars of Hercules;" or the lieges of Ferdinand and Isabella, when the Spanish carvels sailed home with intelligence of the golden New World. The effect of reading so profoundly instructing a summary after the bare statement that our great traveller was safe and well, resembled that process in photography when the picture comes out upon the plate under the developing solution. We knew he was recovered to civilization with all the fruits of these long, anxious, hidden six years, during much of which the grave was not more silent to us than Livingstone. After many speculations, rumors, efforts and disappointments, we had heard authentic tidings; they grew clear and clearer—they were confirmed. He is safe, we said, and we shall have his story. What will it be? A little while longer, and out of the brief message grows up this complete picture, which will assuredly be placed in the gallery of history for ever. The mind delights to realize in imagination that glad moment when, after all sorts of perils, adventures and misadventures, the gallant and indefatigable Stanley won his way with a band which made up in noise for what they lacked in numbers to the outskirts of Ujiji town. We must all envy that American flag which was carried proudly at the head of the procession; and yet it happens seasonably just now in the hour of our agreement at Geneva that the "Stars and Stripes" should thus bring help to the lonely Englishman But will he be at Ujiji? Yes, there he is—"a pale-looking, gray-bearded white man, in a red woollen jacket, and upon his head a naval cap with a faded gold band." Stanley, at a glance, knows it is Livingstone, and Livingstone knows that Civilization has found him out, and brought aid, strength and security for all his harvest of toil and danger; but they are under the eyes of the grave Arabs, who judge men severely by "deportment." So England and America keep up their character demurely before Paganism, and not one excited word is spoken, though the Old and New World thus meet in a spot, as it were, outside the world. "Dr. Livingstone, I presume?" says Stanley, very quietly; and the Doctor smiles, and bows a calm assent; nor until hours after did the two men get together on the goatskins in the hut, where they could freely unpack their hearts, brimful of congratulations, human fellowships and eager questions and answers—with the news of all the world for six years past to tell on one side, and on the other the last secret of Africa to impart.

Mr. Stanley must some day tell us every sentence, every word of that memorable conversation; but, meanwhile, the gallant American communicates enough to furnish a sufficiently connected sketch of Livingstone's proceedings during the long period of his absence in the Libyan wilds. It was in March, 1866, that the Doctor left Zanzibar, and, following the left bank of the Rovuma River, made his way towards Lake Nyassa. All this region is well enough known by the expedition of search which Mr. Young led; for the traveller was traced step by step through Chibisa's country to the village of the fat King of the Lake, and was found, as all remember, to have gone on, well and hopeful, from the spot where the lying Johanna men gave out that he had been murdered. These fellows deserted out of fear of a Mazitu chief, and also through the bad behavior of Musa, from whom better things were expected. But Livingstone, as we had heard, got a fresh set of porters together, and struck off northward through the country, marked in the map with the name of Babisa, towards Lunda or Lucenda, and the Lake Tanganyika. In approaching Cazembe, which lies between the lakes, he crossed a thin stream, called the Chambezi, which is written on our maps under the name of the Lokanka, and represented as being tributary to the Zambesi. He followed this stream up and down with such pertinacity that the natives, we are told, thought he had gone mad, and said, "He has water in his head." But, nothing moved by their observations, he stuck to the Chambezi and satisfied himself that it had no connection with the great river of the similar name. He traced it through three degrees of latitude, and then made his way to Ujiji, whence he sent the last messages which were received. Again he started and explored the head of Lake Tanganyika, where he found the River Rusizi flowing into, not out of, the basin; and then, again returning to Ujiji, he seems to have crossed the Lake Tanganyika and to have travelled westward. Marching hence he entered a perfectly unknown land, that of "Manyema," and nearly perished of ulcers and a fever; but, recovering, he pushed on northwards and reached a broad lacustrine river called Lualaba, which he subsequently identified as the Chambezi by tracing them to a common point. Afterwards he followed this channel to within 180 miles of the Nile, as already explored. At this intensely interesting crisis his men deserted, and, having neither stores nor followers, he was constrained to make his way once more back to Ujiji, where he arrived only eighteen days before the brave American reached that spot.

Knowing all this, we can wonder no longer that Livingstone declines to come home to us. He has sent down his papers and collections; but on the 14th of March of the present year Mr. Stanley parted from the Doctor, leaving him indomitably bent on solving the question of those same tantalizing "one hundred and eighty miles," and also of "four fountains," said to supply a vast volume of water to the Lualaba, or Chambezi. And now, it will be asked, what is the upshot of these researches? The upshot—if Livingstone be right—is that the Chambezi is the Nile, and that the marvelous ancient river of Egypt flows from sources eleven whole degrees south of the Equator, instead of half a degree north of it! No maps existing will suffice to pilot the reader of this strange romantic story. Livingstone is a maker of maps—a writer of new names in the vast blank spaces of the Atlas, and, therefore, till we possess fuller descriptions and statistics, it is unsafe to draw any positive conclusions. But the general meaning of the narrative is, that the great traveller has found an important continuous stream which, rising as low south as Cazembe, runs steadily northward outside Tanganyika, and carries the explorer, as we suppose, in the direction of the Nyanzas and Uganda country of Speke and Grant—to the north, and apparently not only "to the Nile," but "by the Nile." If the interval which Livingstone has gone to explore connects the Chambezi and the known Nile, that amazing river runs through forty-two degrees of latitude, and the illustrious traveller has added nearly a thousand miles to its recorded course. In such a case it appears that the Victoria Nyanza must be regarded as but a tarn, and the Albert Nyanza a mere weir of the antique flood, whose veritable fountains run from far behind the mythical "Mountains of the Moon." But how does Tanganyika drain? and where is the watershed of the Rusizi? and what mountains are there in the Cazembe or Babisa land, where the new and suddenly important "Chambezi"—a mere conjectural streamlet hitherto on the map—has its origin? Such are the questions which geographers will burn to ask, and some of them will say that Livingstone may yet find his Lualaba going off eastward to the unknown, or northward to the Desert. If it should, indeed, turn out that this fearless and unconquerable man has really traced the very mother springs of the mighty river, what a glory for him, and what a crowning credit for the land of Park, Denham, Bruce, Speke and Grant! That the doctor should turn back from such a quest was impossible. Refreshed, reinforced, and put into communication with us by the gallantry of the New York reporter, he will finish his business with the Lualaba or Chambezi River; and, as likely as not, the next white man who sees his face will be "Baker Pasha," at present founding a new kingdom for the Viceroy of Egypt upon what, albeit so very remote, we can no longer call with confidence the "head waters of the Nile."

[From the London Morning Post, July 4.]

Far surpassing everything else in interest is the information which, through the courtesy of the representative of the NEW YORK HERALD in London, has been afforded to the English press respecting the discovery of Dr. Livingstone. Far surpassing everything else yet achieved in the way of journalistic "enterprise" is the discovery of the great African explorer, about whose fate, it may be said without metaphor, every civilized State has been painfully anxious for years past, by the special commissioner of a daily newspaper. We are accustomed to laugh on this side of the Atlantic at the rage for "big things" manifested by our American kinsmen, but it is not only with satisfaction but with a kindred pride we express our admiration at the wonderful undertaking not only conceived but carried to a successful issue by our New York contemporary. While governments were hesitating and ultimately refusing to grant the necessary supplies for an expedition in search of Dr. Livingstone, the proprietor of the NEW YORK HERALD took the matter in his own hands, selected a gentleman eminently fitted for the enterprise he was called upon to undertake, gave him carte blanche in all that regarded expenditure, and sent him into the unknown regions of Central Africa to find Dr. Livingstone, if possible alive, but if not, to procure authentic information respecting his fate, and to secure, if the man existed, the results of his labors. Mr. Stanley, the commissioner in question, has been completely successful. He found Livingstone not only alive and well, but so busily engaged in his explorations that he has voluntarily deferred his return for another year and a half. Nor is this all. Not only is the great traveller safe—his labors have been crowned with complete success. He has discovered the streamlet from which the mighty Nile takes its origin, and he remains behind to satisfy himself by personal examination of a hitherto unexplored break of 180 miles in length between the lowest point to which he followed the stream in question and the uppermost point to which the Nile has been traced.

Starting from Zanzibar at the head of a large caravan, organized by himself, Mr. Stanley reached Unyanyembe on the 23d of January, 1871. At this point his troubles and difficulties began. The King of a neighboring territory through which he intended to pass positively refused permission, and Mr. Stanley in an evil hour consented to join his forces with those of some discontented Arab chieftains and make war on the potentate in question. The first day's operations were successful, one of the villages of King Mirambo having been carried by the assailants and the inhabitants put to the sword; but a day or two afterwards, Mirambo having drawn the invaders into an ambuscade, signally defeated them and killed five of Mr. Stanley's armed escort. The commissioner, luckily for himself, had been compelled by an attack of fever to return the day before to Unyanyembe, and there he received the account of the disaster, and had the additional mortification of seeing his little band dissolve, leaving him with only an Englishman named Shaw, an Arab boy and six of his armed escort. King Mirambo, luckily, was contented with the thrashing he gave his enemies, and did not, as was apprehended, follow up his success by attacking Unyanyembe, for, had he done so, we fear the fugitives Mr. Stanley was enabled to collect and marshal under the American flag would have made an ineffectual stand against the forces of Mirambo, flushed with victory, and we might have been deprived of the pleasure of following Mr. Stanley further in his travels. The result of this brief campaign was to convert the HERALD commissioner to a policy of "non-intervention" in African disputes; and, leaving the Arabs to continue the war on their own account if they so pleased, he formed the plan of taking a different route, avoiding the territory of the warlike Mirambo. To this, however, his former allies, the Arabs, raised numerous objections, and succeeded in frightening a great number of his followers, including Shaw, into desertion. Not discouraged, however, by these losses, Mr. Stanley collected as many as were still willing to accompany him, and started boldly across a desert and through a country completely unknown to him or any of his followers. Of this journey, which occupied several months, we have no particulars in the present summary. He seems, however, to have met with more than the usual obstructions which befall travellers at the hands of petty potentates and the chiefs of savage tribes; but at length, on the 3d of November, he came within sight of the town of Ujiji. It seems to be the correct thing to enter an African town with as much noise and éclat as possible, so Mr. Stanley arranged his band in the most imposing manner, and the American flag being unfurled, and the armed escort being directed to discharge their firearms as rapidly as they could, the little band entered the town, where Mr. Stanley saw among the bystanders "a pale-looking gray-bearded white man, whose fair skin contrasted with the sunburnt visages of those by whom he was surrounded." That man he rightly conjectured to be Dr. Livingstone.

The summary of Dr. Livingstone's adventures and labors during the past six years is necessarily not so ample as we could have desired. When the story of his assassination, told some years since by the Johanna men who accompanied him on his expedition, was tested, the unanimous conclusion arrived at was that these men were simply desirous of concealing the fact that they had deliberately deserted their employer. This surmise is now proved in every particular to have been correct. Very shortly after his departure from Zanzibar in 1866 Dr. Livingston was abandoned by his followers, and he was compelled afterwards to rely exclusively on the assistance of natives. At the end of this year he crossed what is described as "a thin stream" called the Chambezi, flowing in a northerly direction, and the course of this river he steadfastly followed from the beginning of 1867 till March, 1869, and the results of his observations were, first, that this river was not, as some Portuguese travellers had affirmed, identical with the Zambezi, which flows from Central Africa in a southeasterly direction to the coast, and, secondly, that it was in truth the source of the Nile. Assuming this supposition to be right, the Nile rises in eleven degrees south latitude, and consequently attains the unparalleled length of 2,600 miles. In 1869 he returned to Ujiji and despatched letters, which have never reached their destination. In June of the same year he renewed his explorations and struck on a broad river—the Lualba—which he traced backwards until he found, as he conjectured, that it was the continuation of the Chambezi, and then, resuming his investigations, followed the river until he reached a point only 180 miles distant from the point to which the Nile has been already traced. Here he was again deserted by his followers and compelled once more to return to Ujiji. It was only some three weeks after his return to this town that Mr. Stanley arrived there; but so desirous is Dr. Livingstone of fully completing his labors with respect to the source of the Nile and its complete course, that he proposes once more to return to the banks of the river he quitted and follow it steadily up to the point already reached by Speke. That his conclusions are correct there can be no question, and it may now be taken as practically demonstrated that the Nile does not take its source in the lakes explored by Speke and Burton, but that the fountain stream is supplied many degrees farther south.

[From the London Daily News, July 14.]

Africa is fulfilling in a new sense her destiny as the nursery of lions. Mr Stanley, the correspondent of the NEW YORK HERALD, has won for himself fairly the title to be the freshest and most attractive lion of the society of Manhattan. The extraordinary narrative of his explorations in search of Dr. Livingstone, which he has just communicated to his journal and to the world, is one of the most exciting stories civilization has had since it chose to disbelieve the startling stories told by Bruce. We are willing to make every allowance for the strength of the effects naturally thrown in where a narrator is his own hero, and has reason to congratulate himself on the success of a daring and apparently hopeless enterprise. Mr. Stanley is a newspaper correspondent, detailing his own adventures for the benefit of the enterprising journal which sent him out. We may assume that he will put everything in the most picturesque light, and that he will not undervalue the successes or the difficulties of his own expedition. Still, the fact certainly remains that he found Dr. Livingstone; and not, as we think Sir H. Rawlinson conjectured, that Dr. Livingstone found him. Mr. Stanley made his way from the sea, over deserts and through fiercely hostile tribes, until, after adventures that almost seem incredible, he came upon the object of his search, communed with him, spent weeks and months with him, and has brought back to civilization a narrative of Dr. Livingstone's occupations, taken from the great explorer's own lips.

Little more than a year ago Mr. Stanley started from Zanzibar on his mission. He made his way, at the head of a large caravan organized by himself, to Unyanyembe. Thence he proposed to continue his journey to Ujiji, the village which has lately been made famous as the supposed resting place of Dr. Livingstone. To get there, however, was not easy. A King interposed his divine right. Mirambo, Sovereign of Ujowa, whose name it will be useless to seek in the "Almanack of Gotha," had become tired of foreign visitors and refused to allow a passage to any caravan across his soil. Mr. Stanley did exactly what Cortez would have done under the circumstances: he allied himself with some of the enemies of the King, and proposed to fight his way through. Some very spirited scenes of la petite guerre succeeded. In the first day or two the gallant correspondent and his Arab allies were victorious; but the American chief caught a fever and had to quit the scene of fight, and fortune for a while passed over to the banner of the churlish King. The latter, indeed, now displayed some military skill. He defeated the Arabs, killed some men of Mr. Stanley's own escort, and had very nearly spoiled the enterprise of the NEW YORK HERALD. Several of the correspondent's own men and nearly all his Arab allies deserted him; and the victorious Mirambo was advancing to attack Unyanyembe itself. Mr. Stanley, however, had by this time recovered from his illness. He rallied some hundred and fifty fugitives, put the town in a state of defence by barricading several houses and hung out the flag of the Stars and Stripes. Perhaps it was the defiant attitude of the village, perhaps it was the sight of the Star Spangled Banner, which awed the King of Ujowa. He paused in his march of conquest, took thought and retreated. Mr. Stanley, however, did not care to involve himself any further in the politics and wars of the region. He resolved on trying to reach Ujiji by a more northerly route which would take him out of the range and ban of the inhospitable Mirambo. In many a romantic story the hero who has lost his way and sees no chance of otherwise finding it again escapes from every difficulty by the simple process of throwing the reins upon his horse's neck and letting the sagacious animal go where he will. Apparently by some such appeal to chance or instinct, Mr. Stanley got along. The Arabs assured him that the northerly route was an impossibility, and succeeded in frightening many of his followers into desertion. But the intrepid American had made up his mind to go that way, and that way he went. His men fell off from him; he had the utmost difficulty in obtaining an escort, or bearers for his baggage; he had to traverse a district unknown to the Arabs themselves for hundreds of miles; he was in constant difficulty and danger from the rapacity and treachery of the chiefs of hostile tribes. It certainly is not easy to imagine an enterprise more full of toil and of peril than this strange journey of a lonely American, surrounded by a small and reluctant escort, through a trackless desert, or amid tribes whose very names and characters were utterly unknown. Mr. Stanley passed on, and succeeded On the 3d of last November he came in sight of Ujiji. He was resolved to enter with dignity. He formed his escort into as imposing procession as he could arrange on the spur of the moment. He displayed the American flag in the van. He ordered his escort to keep firing their guns and pistols as incessantly as though they were celebrating the Fourth of July. Thus the cortége entered Ujiji, the conquering hero himself coming last. The effect was tremendous. The Ujijians poured out in crowds, with shouts and beatings of their rude drums, to welcome and wonder at the unknown visitor. It is difficult, perhaps, not to smile at the thought of this triumphal march. It is wholly impossible not to admire the daring and perseverance which it crowned. Nothing more heroic and more ludicrous, more oddly suggestive of Pizarro and of Astley's, has been carried out and described in the history of modern adventure.

Mr. Stanley's grand success met him almost at the moment of his entering Ujiji. He saw in the crowd a pale-looking, gray-bearded white man, in whom he recognized the object of his search, Dr. Livingstone. Mr. Stanley's taste for dramatic description and action did not, even in that exciting moment, desert him. He at once reflected that any expression of emotion would lower him in the eyes of the Ujijians, and he, therefore, only accosted Dr. Livingstone with a distant and stately courtesy. We certainly could excuse the American correspondent if his feelings of delight and pride had been too much for him at such a time. He had done a great thing; he had made a complete success. He had waited until Dr. Livingstone and he were alone before he gave vent to his emotions. Naturally, there was much to be said between these two men. Mr. Stanley had to tell Dr. Livingstone the news of all the startling events over which Europe and America have speculated and wondered for years back. Dr. Livingstone is described as full of energy, courage and hope—with faith in his own work wholly undimmed, and with new and unexpected discoveries to supplement his past and cheer his future labors. He explained to Mr. Stanley the circumstances under which the famous Johanna men—creatures apparently well qualified to rival the fame of the ancient Cretans—came to send abroad the mendacious stories of his death. He explained the nature of the discoveries he has more lately made and of the tasks which he sets to himself as still to be accomplished, and which we are told are to occupy nearly two years more. Mr. Stanley spent several weeks in company with Dr. Livingstone. They travelled together to Unyanyembe, whence in March last the correspondent started for the coast, leaving the illustrious explorer to continue researches which are the appointed work of his life.

Such is the substance of the extraordinary narrative which has reached us. We do not stop to consider the value and importance of the geographical discoveries which are pointed to by Mr. Stanley as the fruit of Dr. Livingstone's later researches. The personal narrative will have just now the deeper interest for the public. The one fact, that at Ujiji Mr. Stanley found Dr. Livingstone alive, well and full of hope; that he conversed with him, and dwelt with him for months, and was allowed to share his projects—this fact alone will overshadow all other facts, conjectures and speculations for the moment. We have taken the narrative just as we find it. The central facts can hardly be open to any doubt or qualification of a serious kind. Mr. Stanley has conferred a great service on the world by rendering that at last a certainty which for many years had never ceased to be, to some extent, a matter of doubt—the safety of Dr. Livingstone. We are not disposed to quarrel with any little tendency to personal self-glorification over an exploit which was so successful. Few things in the romance of travel and adventure seem to us more striking than that first meeting with the long-lost explorer among the wild crowd in the African village. Perhaps it only wants a poet to render Mr. Stanley's first sight of Dr. Livingstone as impressive as Cortes' first glimpse of the far ocean from the peak in Darien.

"Dr. Livingstone, I presume?" said Mr. Stanley, slowly advancing, with a courteous bow. "Yes," was the laconic reply. And so, after years of uncertainty, the great traveller has been found. At Ujiji, a pleasant little spot somewhere in the interior of Africa, he has been interviewed by the "Special Commissioner" of the NEW YORK HERALD. The great qualities of the Anglo-Saxon race enabled both men to maintain their reserve—they did not fall weeping into one another's arms as two Frenchmen would have done. We have even reason to be thankful that they did not altogether miss one another as people often do in a ballroom, for want of a formal introduction. "A dignified Arab chief" was standing by, but he appears to have been painfully wanting in good manners, and the two perfect strangers were thus forced to make themselves known to each other in this quite unceremonious way. With the assured safety of Dr. Livingstone the occupation of the Royal Geographical Society may be said to terminate. So long as his existence remained uncertain he belonged as of right to that speculative body. The numerous, if somewhat untrustworthy, reports concerning his movements have for a long time formed their sole title to the world's attention. But, now when fiction has to be exchanged for fact, the great traveller passes into other hands. Henceforth Mr. Stanley will have the exclusive right to stand between the great traveller and the public. The work of the Geographical Society is complete, and in the joy felt at the Doctor's safety we are disposed to look charitably even upon such labors as theirs. But Mr. Stanley's attainment is substantial. He has not talked or reported. He has actually seen the great traveller and the news he brings will be everywhere joyfully received. It may be that with thankfulness at the discovery there may mingle some feeling of shame that the care of one who represents so well the enterprise of England should be left to the newspaper correspondent of a foreign paper.

[From the Manchester Guardian, July 4.]

A summary of despatches received from Mr. Stanley, the intrepid American who searched for and found Dr. Livingstone, appears in our columns to-day. A certain amount of mystery which the fuller publication will doubtless clear up hangs over the question why this information was not received before. Mr. Stanley left Zanzibar towards the end of June, 1871, and, after many delays and repulses, made his entry on the 3d of November into Ujiji, where the lost English traveller had already arrived. It might be supposed that the homeward route would be more expeditious than the outward one, and yet it is not until an interval of double the length—namely, nine months—has elapsed that authentic intelligence of the joyful meeting of the white men reaches the seacoast. All is well, however, that ends well. The adventures of the illustrious explorer during the time he was hidden from view seem to have followed pretty closely the course attributed to them by speculation. The chief contribution made to science by his latest labors appears to be the discovery that the River Rusiji, known previously to exist to the extreme north of Lake Tanganyika, flows into the lake instead of out of it, from which it is inferred that Tanganyika cannot be the source of the Nile. In place of this theory Dr. Livingstone advances the proposition that a stream called the Chambezi, which had been accounted by the Portuguese the head water of the Zambesi, but which he found to be flowing in an opposite or northerly direction, affords the true solution of the geographical problem of ages. Unfortunately, after following the course of this river for hundreds of miles, and when within 180 miles of that part of the Nile which has been already traced, our countryman was obliged by the desertion of his followers to turn back from the goal and retire to Ujiji. With indefatigable perseverance he remains in Africa to resume and complete the exploration of the district which he was compelled to leave unvisited, and gives himself sixteen or eighteen months for the task. It is somewhat remarkable that no mention is made of the subterranean road, with villages, the examination of which was stated in the earliest form of the information received from Mr. Stanley to be the principal object of Dr. Livingstone's stay in the country.

[From the Liverpool Post, July 4.]

The despatches of Mr. Stanley, the intrepid correspondent sent out at the sole expense of the proprietors of the NEW YORK HERALD to find Dr. Livingstone have been communicated in advance to the English papers. They will be found in extenso in another column. Singularly enough but a very short time elapsed between the time when Livingstone arrived, sick and destitute, at Ujiji and the entrance of Stanley into the same place. Dr. Livingstone appeared in Ujiji on the 16th of October, 1871, and the American entered on the 3d of November. The account given of the meeting is almost dramatic. "As the procession entered the town Mr. Stanley observed a group of Arabs on the right, in the centre of whom was a pale-looking, gray-bearded white man, whose fair skin contrasted with the sunburnt visages of those by whom he was surrounded. Passing from the rear of the procession to the front, the American traveller noticed the white man was clad in a red woollen jacket, and wore upon his head a naval cap, with a faded gilt band round it. In an instant he recognized the European as none other than Dr. Livingstone himself; and he was about to rush forward and embrace him, when the thought occurred that he was in the presence of Arabs, who, being accustomed to conceal their feelings, were very likely to found their estimate of a man upon the manner in which he conceals his own. A dignified Arab chieftain, moreover, stood by, and this confirmed Mr. Stanley in his resolution to show no symptom of rejoicing or excitement. Slowly advancing towards the great traveller, he bowed and said, 'Dr. Livingstone, I presume?' to which address the latter, who was fully equal to the occasion, simply smiled and replied, 'Yes.' It was not till some hours afterwards, when alone together, seated on a goat skin, that the two white men exchanged those congratulations which both were eager to express, and recounted their respective difficulties and adventures."

THE IRISH PRESS.

[From the Irish Times, July 4.]

We must concede to the spirit and enterprise of the late proprietor of the NEW YORK HERALD the honor of tracking out the course pursued during five long years by Dr. Livingstone, and of communicating the first full and trustworthy report of his discoveries to the world. It is not pleasant to know that while the British government, appealed to over and over again to send out an expedition in search of Livingstone, faltered, hesitated and ultimately refused, one of the representatives of the New York Press bravely penetrated into the vast depression of Central Africa, and found the famous traveller elate with his recent discoveries. From henceforth the names of Bennett and of Stanley will be combined in the history of this last and greatest of Livingstone's discoveries. The proprietor of an American newspaper found money, means and zealous men, when Mr. Lowe could not feel himself justified in expending £1,000 from the Exchequer to search for one whose name is a household word in all civilized nations.

Mr. Stanley, who had his own difficulties and dangers to encounter, caught the first glimpse of Livingstone at Ujiji, a town on the eastern side of Lake Tanganyika. Travel and toil had told on Livingstone. Stanley saw "a pale looking, gray bearded white man, whose fair skin contrasted with sunburnt visages of those by whom he was surrounded. The white man was clad in a red woolen jacket, and wore upon his head a naval cap, with a faded gold band around it." We can fancy the triumphant joy of Stanley and the quiet happiness of Livingstone. The latter had not been forgotten in his wanderings. The American flag, displayed by the shore of the great African lake, told him from what country these friends in the desert came.

The numerous and sometimes apparently well authenticated reports of Livingstone's death which from time to time excited such sorrow in these countries were all spread by his cowardly attendants, who fled from him and excused their treachery by falsehood. The difficulties experienced by Livingstone in this last exploration seem to have been greater than any which delayed his enterprise before. At one time he was compelled to lie up for six months through ulcers on his feet. When Stanley left him, however, full of hope and spirit, Livingstone was about to start to complete the greatest of all his discoveries.

Hitherto the statement iterated by the Portuguese, to the effect that the Zambezi and the Chambezi were the "same water," was generally assented to. Tracking the course of the Chambezi southwards, westwards and eastwards, as it wandered for many hundred weary miles, Livingstone has proved beyond all question that the Chambezi is altogether unconnected with the Zambezi. Further, he identifies the Chambezi with the Lualaba, and proves that the "mysterious and ancient Nile" is but the continuation of the united streams. The great secret of Africa, which, from the days of Herodotus down to our own time, has puzzled mankind, is at length solved. Only 180 miles of country remain to be traversed—that part, namely, which extends from the meeting of the Chambezi with the Lualaba to the nearest point of the Nile. Home, country, friends, rest, are as nothing to Livingstone in comparison with the thorough completion of the great object of his life.

THE AMERICAN PRESS.

[From the Council Bluffs (Iowa) Republican, July 12.]

Some of the papers have seen fit to doubt the authenticity and veracity of the reports touching the safety of Dr. Livingstone. But now trustworthy despatches have been received from Mr. Stanley, the leader of the NEW YORK HERALD expedition, which set at rest any doubts upon the subject. Dr. Livingstone is alive, though not in good health, and his son will accompany Stanley to England, bearing messages and letters from him. He remains in Africa to discover, if possible, the sources of the Nile, a Quixotic scheme, not likely at the best to prove of any value to the world. And yet we must admire the persistent heroism of this man, who defies, even in the prosecution of a worthless idea, all sorts of peril, and seems in his devotion to it to court death itself.

[From the New York Commercial, July 16.]

The press of the country is properly complimenting the enterprise of the HERALD in sending an expedition into the interior of Africa to discover Dr. Livingstone. The credit of this bold enterprise is due entirely to Mr. Bennett. It is the first, we understand, of several startling movements which he intends to inaugurate soon. The young man don't mean to be behind his father in every undertaking that will add to the greatness of journalism.

[From the Worcester Spy, July 16.]

The NEW YORK HERALD at last has comparatively full despatches from its Livingstone expedition, and is pardonably exultant over these proofs of its success. The latest date is March 12, of the present year, at which time Stanley was on his way to the coast, having left Dr. Livingstone about that time at Unyanyembe. The story of Stanley's journey and his meeting with Livingstone at Ujiji has been already told in a previous despatch. The present one gives a summary of Dr. Livingstone's hardships, adventures and discoveries, and his plans for future explorations.

[From the New Brunswick Fredonian, July 13.]

The correspondent of the NEW YORK HERALD, Mr. Stanley, who penetrated the interior of Africa in search of Dr. Livingstone, is on his way to London, accompanied by a son of the illustrious Doctor. Mr. Stanley is the bearer of letters from the great explorer for the British government as well as for the family and friends of the long-absent Livingstone. Mr. Stanley states that when he left the interior of Africa Dr. Livingstone was unwell, but he was nevertheless determined to proceed with his explorations, and will not return home until he has completed the great work of ascertaining the sources of the Nile. The enterprise of the HERALD in sending an agent, at an enormous expense and risks, in quest of the long-lost traveller, justly ranks as one of the greatest journalistic feats of modern times.

AQUATIC NOTES.

The Inter-Collegiate Regatta is the most interesting event in the boating line at present in prospective in American waters, and will take place, provided the elements do not seriously object, on Tuesday, July 23, on the Connecticut River, at Springfield, Mass. Three crews arrived at the course from Yale College on the 6th inst., and other crews have since made their appearance, and are now busy at work with the oars. Josh Ward has charge of the Massachusetts Agricultural crew (who won last year); George Price looks after the students of Bowdoin College, and John Biglin is the mentor of the Amherst representatives. A series of exciting contests are expected.

The Potomac Regatta, about which the oarsmen and press of Washington and Georgetown, D. C., talked so enthusiastically several months since, has been abandoned. We are assured that this is due solely to lack of energy on the part of the projectors, for the people of the capital manifested a disposition to subscribe liberally toward the object.

A rowing regatta came off recently on Lake Quanissoitt, Wakefield, Mass., several thousand persons assembling to witness it. The single scull race was won by L. Johnson, and the double scull by W. L. Coon and E. Edgecomb. This is the fourth time Coon has been one of the victorious pair.

The flat regatta fixed to take place on the Allegheny river at Pittsburg, on the afternoon of the 13th instant, was postponed until the 20th, because of a freshet in the river.

An amateur regatta is to come off at Pettaquamocot Cove, Narragansett Heights, on August 3. Prizes are offered for four-oared and single-scull races.

William Dagnall, of the Moorhead Club of Pittsburg, Pa., has challenged William Albertson, of the Clipper, to row in shells, for $150 a side, on the Upper Monongahela course. John Snyder, of the Beck Club, has also challenged Hen Deisenroth, of the Sheridan, to pull three miles, for $100 a side, over the same course. They had a tilt last summer.

William Thomson, a gentleman well known in commercial circles, and David McCleary, a member of the press, rowed a scullers' race, for $50 a side, in Toronto Bay, on June 29, the former winning by about half a length.

A new club has been organized in Toronto, of which Henry O'Brien is president.

Samuel Archer, a leading citizen of Hoboken, has been elected Vice President of the Atlantic Boat Club.

Five tub races afforded amusement to a large number of spectators at Wedge pond, Winchester, Mass., on July 6. Charles Buxton won the first prize in the first race and Fred. Shepherd the second. In the second contest the winners were Eugene Ayer and Fred. Steele; third, H. A. Hatch and Robert Windsor; fourth (heavy weights), Briggs and Charles Marble; scrub race, George Baker and O. A. Dunce.

A four-oared match, for $100 a side, was made between the Clipper and J. M. White boat clubs, of Pittsburg, on July 13. They are to row two miles, with a turn, on the Allegheny River, 20th inst.

The Shatemuc Boat Club, of Poughkeepsie, held their annual review and regatta on the Hudson a few days since. The main event was a single-scull race, which was won by George Van Vliet, G. S. Burnap second, John Grubb third, T. R. Roosevelt fourth and John Reynolds fifth. A tub race followed, and was won by J. Whitehouse.

On the 6th inst. George E. Cooper and George Johnston, of Toronto, rowed from Tinning's wharf to Parkinson's Hotel, on the bay, for $100 a side, Cooper winning by half a dozen lengths.

The citizens of Sacramento, Cal., who interested themselves in the programme of amusement for the celebration of the Fourth of July, wisely appropriated money for a rowing regatta on the river. For a week before friends of the different parties who were to contest in the races discussed their merits to the exclusion of almost all other topics of conversation; and, as the time drew nigh, nearly the whole population of the city felt an interest in the matter. The first race of the day was for Whitehall boats, and it had three entries:—J. C. Green and W. A. Betts in the Minnie May; Chris. Johnson and Billy Rogers the General Lee, and Considine and "Brock" the Fashion. The General Lee won the race by several lengths. The second event was a skiff contest. Three boats appeared—the Joe Willett—crew, McDowell and Tea; the Old Rags—crew, McClain and Dougherty, and the Sudden Jerk—crew, J. C. Green and W. A. Betts. The Willets came in winner by twenty lengths. The third and big event was the four-oared shell race. Entered for this were the Bessie of Stockton—C. Baldwin, stroke; R. H. Dykman, William Daily, J. Murray, bow; the Challenge, of the Capital Club—James Denny, stroke; Hugh Denny, Peter Denny and John Denny, bow; the Neptune, of the Pioneer Club, of San Francisco—E. Nelson, stroke; John Coyle, M. Nelson and C. Lynch, bow; the Alpha, of the Undine Club—C. T. Patriarche, stroke; W. C. Clark, J. C. Chesley and S. C. Scoville, bow. After a most exciting contest the Challenge came home the winner and the Alpha second. Matches and regattas have already grown out of this race, and the boating gentlemen of the Pacific slope are in great glee.

Mark Addy, the well-known Manchester (Eng.) sculler, saved a young girl of sixteen, who had fallen into the River Irwell, from drowning, on June 24. The rescue was accomplished with great difficulty, Addy being much exhausted, and the members of the Manchester Nemesis Rowing Club are endeavoring to obtain the Royal Humane Society's medal for him.

Joe Sadler, champion sculler, is, we learn, making preparations to visit America again this season, as there is no likelihood of any one coming forward on that side of the water to dispute his right to the title, and there's more money to be picked up at regattas here than on the Thames and Tyne. He is having a shell built by Robert Jewett, of Dunston, and will, it is understood, put up at Josh Ward's, Cornwall, N. Y., during his stay. He may expect a cordial welcome from the oarsmen of the States and Canadas.

The Newcastle (Eng.) Chronicle of recent date says:—"The splendid white wood skiff built especially in New York for the use of Mr. Smith, of the Atalanta crew, at the recent Henley Regatta, has been purchased by Mr. James Taylor, of the Trafalgar Inn, Newcastle, on behalf of Major A. S. Stevenson, the President of the Tynemouth Rowing Club. The boat is now on inspection at Mr. James Hall's, the Elswick boathouse, and will, we understand, be used by Mr. William Fawcus and James Taylor in forthcoming engagements.

Single scull match between Robert Fulton, of St. John, and George Brown, of Halifax, rowed 12th of July, 1872, over a four-mile course, straightaway, at Digby, N. S. Brown rowed the Spanish cedar shell John Coney; Fulton the Spanish cedar shell A. C. Smith. Brown won. Time, 32 min. 12 sec.

YACHTING.

Bayonne Yacht Club Regatta—The Course, the Prizes and the Entries for To-Day's Contest.

The yachting event of to-day, should the weather prove auspicious, will be the sixth annual and fifth union regatta of the Bayonne Yacht Club. The contest is open to any yachts belonging to duly organized yacht clubs in the United States, and the list of entries below embraces some of the acknowledged fast vessels of their respective classes. The contest to-day will be for the following

UNION PRIZES.—First, a prize for all cabin sloop yachts over 45 feet long on water line; second, a prize for all cabin sloop yachts under 45 feet long on water line; third, a prize for all yachts (open boats) over 24 feet and under 32 feet long, mean length; fourth, a prize for all yachts (open boats) over 18 feet and under 24 feet long, mean length.

CLUB PRIZES.—Two prizes for each class of yachts—one to be sailed for on time allowance and one (the Flag Officer's prize) to be awarded to the first yacht home, regardless of time allowance. No yacht shall win more than one club prize; if the yacht winning the Flag Officer's prize also wins the club prize on time allowance the same shall be awarded to the next yacht on time allowance.

The following are the entries for the regatta:—

FIRST CLASS SLOOPS.

Meta, Commodore G. A. Belling, Brooklyn Yacht Club.
Captain, Joseph Ellsworth, Brooklyn Yacht Club.
Kate, Rear Commodore R. Dillon, Brooklyn Yacht Club.
Qui Vive, Captain Clapham, Brooklyn Yacht Club.

SECOND CLASS SLOOPS.

Undine, Dr. Vondy, Jersey City Yacht Club.
Nettie B., A. C. Bush, Brooklyn Yacht Club.
Mary, S. P. Hill, Jersey City Yacht Club.
Watson, John H. Ellsworth, Brooklyn Yacht Club.
Sophia, C. M. Felt, Brooklyn Yacht Club.

FIRST CLASS SLOOPS.

Meteor, A. C. Bush, Brooklyn Yacht Club.
Jeannette, H. B. Pierson, Brooklyn Yacht Club.
Maud, W. A. Morris, Brooklyn Yacht Club.
W. T. Lee, C. M. Felt, Brooklyn Yacht Club.
Annie Mack, P. McGiehan, Brooklyn Yacht Club.
Blossom, E. R. Timson, Jersey City Yacht Club.

FOURTH CLASS SLOOPS.

Edith, J. Van Pelt, Stapleton Yacht Club.
Comet, Captain Ketchum, Jersey City Yacht Club.

THE COURSE.

For First Class—From the anchorage off Robin's Reef to and around the Lightship, rounding it from northward to eastward, and return to stakeboat off the Club House. Second class—From the anchorage off the Club House to and around the monument on Romer Shoal, rounding it from northward to eastward, and return to stakeboat off the Club House. All yachts to pass to the eastward of West Bank buoys Nos. 11, 13, 15, and to the westward of Fort Lafayette and monument on Romer Shoal, going and returning. Third class—From the anchorage off the Club House to and around Fort Lafayette, rounding it from northward to eastward, and return, sailing over the course twice. Fourth class—From the anchorage off the Club House to and around the Robin's Reef buoy, rounding it from northward to eastward, and return, sailing over the course three times. All yachts to turn home stakeboat from northward to westward.

The yachts will take up positions as follows:—Sloops, first class, in line to the westward of Robin's Reef Lighthouse. The second, third and fourth class sloops will start from an anchorage off the Club House. All yachts are to be in position before eleven o'clock on the morning of the regatta.

Should the wind be favorable to-day it is expected that the regatta will prove the most spirited in the annals of the club. In accordance with the custom of the Bayonne yachtsmen the termination of the day's sport will be celebrated by a grand ball at the hotel.

Yachting Notes.

The schooner yacht Josephine, N.Y.Y.C., Mr. Phœnix, which was capsized during a squall on Monday, between Bedloe's Island and Robin's Reef, was raised yesterday by one of the floating derricks, and will be towed into dock for repairs to-day. She sunk with her canvas all spread, and stood yesterday morning upon an even keel. Her club and private signals were flying from the fore and main all day, about ten feet above water, and attracted not a little attention from persons passing on the bay. The Josephine went down in about ten fathoms of water. Beyond the springing of her mainmast the vessel does not seem to have suffered much damage, exclusive of the natural effects of water soaking and the injury to her furniture and interior decorations.

The yacht Dauntless, N.Y.Y.C., Commodore Bennett, arrived yesterday morning, at eight o'clock, from Cowes, after a severe voyage occupying thirty-two days. She took the regular European steamer passage, and experienced almost continuous head winds after leaving the Scilly Isles, with occasional very rough weather, in which some of her light running rigging was carried away.

The sloop yacht Kingfisher, late Fanny, Mr. Perry Belmont, arrived at Newport from New York yesterday.

The schooner yacht Resolute, N.Y.Y.C., Mr. Hatch, is lying off the South ferry, Brooklyn.

The schooner yacht Halcyon, N.Y.Y.C., Mr. Smith, arrived at Newport, R. I., yesterday from New London.

The new sloop yacht Vision, N.Y.Y.C., Mr. Alexandre, is lying at Upper Quarantine, Staten Island. This vessel presents a rather peculiar outline, which has made her the subject of much comment in yachting circles. Her dimensions are as follows:—Length over all, 68 feet; breadth of beam, 20 feet; depth between decks, 6 feet; draught of water, 5 feet; length of keel, 47 feet; length of mast, 71 feet; topmast, 30 feet; main boom, 63 feet; gaff, 34 feet; tonnage, 60 tons. She was built at South Brooklyn by McGarrick and is a centreboard yacht, and has a very broad stern, with great overhang. There are very few yachts of her class and tonnage that carry such a spread of canvas as the Vision does, and her captain, Frank Baker, formerly of the Gracie, Addie and Tidal Wave, thinks she will show considerable speed. She has not yet made her appearance in any regatta, but in one or two impromptu spurts with the Meta and other fast sloops she has displayed good sailing qualities and good time.

A STRANGER KILLED BY A RAIL CAR.

On Monday evening, about half-past seven o'clock, a man, whose name is unknown, while attempting to jump aboard an emigrant car attached to a dummy engine belonging to the Hudson Railroad Company, corner of West and Jane streets, slipped and fell before the wheel, which passed over his neck, completely severing his head from the body. The remains were gathered up and sent to the Morgue to await the result of an investigation before Coroner Keenan. Deceased was about forty years of age, and dressed in dark clothes. The witnesses to the occurrence are John Lynch, of 528 West street, and Officers Fitzgerald, Doran and Miller, of the Ninth precinct.

THE COURTS.

Interesting Proceedings in the New York and Brooklyn Courts.

Bankruptcy Cases—The Butler-Weigel Perjury Suit—A Distillery Libelled—Judge McCunn's Will—Sentences and Criminals in the General Sessions—Decisions.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Bankruptcy Cases.

Judge Blatchford called the calendar of bankruptcy cases yesterday in the United States District Court and set them down for hearing.

The General Butler-Weigel Perjury Suit.

Weigel, who was a lieutenant on General Butler's staff during the occupation of New Orleans by General Butler, and who was the principal witness in the case of Tilden against Butler, lately disposed of in the United States Court and who now stands charged with perjury, was to have renewed his bond yesterday to answer to the charge at the October Term. In this he failed. By consent of the District Attorney the renewal was dispensed with, and the present bond, furnished at Baltimore, where Mr. Weigel was arrested, allowed to stand accepted.

An Illicit Distillery Seized.

Collector Blake, of the Thirty-second district, seized yesterday an illicit distillery in full operation, with all the necessary tools and two thousand gallons of mash, at 238 Front street. It was libelled in the United States District Court and taken in charge by the Marshal.

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONERS' COURT.

Commissioner Osborn has adjourned the case of the seaman Greig, charged with stabbing Captain Richmond, of the bark Sunshine, while on the high seas. Greig says he did not use the knife until the captain had wounded him three times with a pistol. The examination will be resumed on Friday.

Pendleton vs. Lyman.—Motion granted.

SURROGATE'S COURT.

Judge McCunn's Will.

Before Surrogate Hutchings.

Yesterday the will of the late Judge McCunn was presented before Surrogate Hutchings for probate. The will devises property to legatees in Ireland, and there are consequently six weeks' citation of witnesses to appear. It is unofficially understood that the will directs that his remains shall be interred in the family vault in Ireland. The bulk of his real estate in this city he leaves to his widow. His estate in Ireland he devises to his two brothers in equal shares.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

A Notorious Thief Sent to the State Prison for Ten Years.

Before Recorder Hackett.

The first case disposed of yesterday was an indictment for robbery against John Landis. William Connors testified that early in the morning of the 9th of June as he was going out of a liquor store in Twenty-third street he was attacked by Landis and other men and robbed by him of $10 and a pair of sleeve buttons worth $10.

Michael Cannon and Timothy O'Connor were arrested hours after the robbery by a police officer simply because they were found in the company of Landis. As there was no evidence that they were with Landis when he robbed the complainant the jury rendered a verdict of not guilty.

Landis Brought Up Again.

William Ginan was tried upon a charge of grand larceny, the complainant being Samuel Miller, who, on the 3d inst., had stolen from him $193 in English gold coin and $40 in bills, at the corner of First avenue and Fifteenth street. There was no testimony against the accused, and by direction of the Recorder the jury promptly acquitted him. John Landis, who pleaded guilty to another charge, was brought out of the prison box, and Miller positively identified him as the man who stole his money.

The Recorder suggested to the Assistant District Attorney the propriety of trying Landis upon this charge, remarking that such a dangerous man ought not to be let off with five years' imprisonment.

John Landis, through his counsel, tendered a plea of guilty of grand larceny upon the complaint of Miller.

His Honor promptly sentenced the prisoner upon the first plea to the State Prison at hard labor for the period of five years, and directed that at the expiration of that term of sentence he be further incarcerated for five years.

The prosecuting officer stated that there was another charge against this prisoner, so that it will be seen that the Recorder has done the community a service by putting a notorious thief out of the way for ten years.

A Shoplifter Sent to Sing Sing for Ten Years.

Charles Williams, alias Samuel Phillips, a well known shoplifter, was tried for stealing a package of lace valued at $51 from the store of Herman Weckerlin, 110 Grand street, on the 17th of May. The porter of the store met the prisoner on the stairs, who dropped the package and ran away. He was pursued by the porter, and caught and delivered into the custody of an officer, from whom he escaped. He was rearrested a month after and positively identified. The indictment was for the second offence. It was shown that on the 20th of December, 1866, he pleaded guilty to an attempt at grand larceny, and was sentenced by Recorder Hackett to Sing Sing for two years and six months. The accused, who appeared to be very ill with consumption, went on the stand and positively denied having stolen the lace. He swore that on the 16th of May he was taken with hemorrhage of the lungs at his home in Grand street, Brooklyn, and was confined to his bed for three days. Mr. Stewart, in his address to the jury, exploded Mr. Williams' "hallibi," and urged for the conviction of this professional shoplifter, who was well known to the police.

The jury rendered a verdict of guilty without leaving their seats, and the Recorder sentenced him to the State Prison for ten years, the punishment authorized by the law on conviction of larceny for the second time.

Felonious Assault.

Robert Kelly, charged with firing a loaded pistol at Robert Griffiths, on the 25th of June, with intent to do bodily harm, pleaded guilty.

The Recorder said that every man who felt aggrieved at the use of opprobrious epithets uttered by another and used his pistol, he (the Recorder) was going to teach a lesson by imposing a severe penalty in this case. Kelly was sent to the State Prison for five years.

Forgery of an Order for Catawba Wine.

William Walsh and Walter Brodhead, indicted for forgery in the third degree, pleaded guilty to the fourth grade of that offence. It appeared from the complaint that the defendants on the 14th of June forged an order upon Messrs. P. Leak & Co., 180 Broadway, for three cases of quarts and pints of Catawba wine. They were each sent to the State Prison for two years.

Another Stabbing Case.

John K. Mortimer was tried for a felonious assault and battery. Frank Smith, the keeper of a lager beer saloon at 41 Bowery, testified that on the 4th of May the prisoner entered his place, and conducted himself in such a disorderly manner as to necessitate his being ejected. He threatened that he would get square with Smith, and shortly after returned to the saloon, and, when being put out the second time, stabbed Smith in the chest and in the groin, inflicting dangerous wounds. The jury convicted Mortimer of an assault, with intent to do bodily harm, and, by direction of the Recorder, he was remanded to give him an opportunity of finding out whether mercy could be extended.

Alleged Homicide—Acquittal of the Accused.

Late in the afternoon James N. Carroll was arraigned upon an indictment charging him with killing Thomas Perry by striking him on the head with a hammer, inflicting a wound that proved fatal. The widow of the deceased, who lived in Harlem, proved that the prisoner and her husband were friends, and that on the 13th of February Carroll used abusive words to her, whereupon Perry called him to account. They had a quarrel, and during the wrangling the defendant drew from his pocket a small hammer used in his trade of bell hanging and struck Perry in the temple. She did not believe he meant to do him any harm.

Thomas Nugent, who witnessed the occurrence, testified that Perry followed Carroll, who endeavored to retreat and defended himself by using the hammer, in a very excited manner.

Dr. Gregory was called and testified that he attended Perry, who died on the 4th of March, of inflammation of the lungs.

Mr. Hummell, who defended Carroll, called no witnesses.

The Recorder instructed the jury that there was no evidence against the prisoner, who was thereupon declared not guilty and discharged.

Larceny of a Watch and Chain.

Margaret and Rosa Smith, two "unfortunates," were tried for stealing a watch and chain, valued at $200, from Charles Baur, at a disreputable house in Hester street about a month ago. There was no legal evidence implicating Margaret and she was discharged. Rosa was found guilty and sent to the State Prison for one year. The Frenchman was fortunate enough to recover his watch and chain.

Other Larcenies.

George Adams and John W. Ridgeway pleaded guilty to an attempt at grand larceny, the charge being that on the 18th of June they stole a watch worth $74 from Alfred Harris. They were each sent to the State Prison for two years and six months.

George Balfe pleaded guilty to petty larceny from the person in stealing a silver watch from William Cartland on the 2d of May.

Spencer Ludlow, indicted for burglariously entering the premises of John J. Bragg, 22 Desbrosses street, on the 6th of June, pleaded guilty to an attempt at burglary in the third degree.

Balfe and Ludlow were each sent to the State Prison for two years and six months.

BROOKLYN COURTS.

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONERS' COURT.

Arrest of Liquor Dealers.

Before Commissioner Winslow.

Three retail liquor dealers—J. Flynn, of 116 Columbia street; John McNeil, of 111 Atlantic avenue, and William Grant, of 301 Remsen street, E. D.—were arrested yesterday on the charge of being engaged in business without paying the special tax required by law. They were held to bail by the Commissioner to appear for examination.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM.

A Flatbush Contested Election Case.

Before Justices Barnard and Tappen.

In April, 1870, James H. McKinney was elected Collector of Taxes for the town of Flatbush, and in the month of January, of the same year (which was, of course, previous to the election), the Legislature extended the terms of office of the Collectors of all county towns three years. The act took effect on the 22d of April. Peter Williamson claimed that on the 4th of April, 1871 (a year afterwards), he was elected Collector in McKinny's place, having received 15 votes, and subsequently he obtained a temporary injunction from Judge Gilbert, of the Supreme Court, restraining the Supervisors from giving the tax book to McKinney, alleging that the act of the Legislature was unconstitutional. Judge Gilbert afterwards dissolved the injunction and McKinney continued in the discharge of his duties. Williamson then brought a quo warranto suit and Judge Gilbert again decided against him.

An appeal was taken to the General Term, which convened in Poughkeepsie in May last. The General Term has just rendered a decision sustaining the Court below.

Decisions.

By Justices Barnard, Gilbert and Tappen.

Raymond vs Wright.—Judgment affirmed with costs. Opinion by Justice Tappen.

Brown vs. Leigh.—By the Court—The case of Borst vs. Levy seems to be a direct adjudication of the Court of Appeals governing the question of costs in this case. Ordered that plaintiff have costs of motion only in the Court of Appeals, with stay of proceedings, if this decision be taken to that Court for review.

In the Matter of the Application of the Port Chester Railway to Take and to Value Lands, &c.—Order affirmed, Judge Tappen not sitting.

Cornell vs. Cornell.—Order affirmed. Justice Gilbert not sitting.

Carpenter vs. Black Hawk Mining Company.—Judgment reversed, with costs to abide event. New trial ordered at Special Term. Opinion by Justice Barnard.

Fosdred vs. Seamen's Savings Bank.—Judgment reversed. New trial ordered. Costs to abide event. Opinion by Justice Barnard, Justice Tappen not sitting.

Matter of Will of Mary McCord, deceased.—Decree of Surrogate affirmed, with costs to the respondent to be paid out of the estate. Opinion by Justice Tappen.

Holdame et al. vs. Doyle.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Justice Barnard.

Boland et al. vs. Robertson et al.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Justice Gilbert, Justice Barnard not sitting.

Sherman vs. Brown.—Motion to open default denied; $10.

Roe et al. vs. Sanger.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Justice Barnard.

Randall vs. Elwell et al.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Justice Gilbert.

Barclay vs. Quicksilver Mining Co.—Order affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Justice Gilbert.

Executors of Zachariah Smalley vs. Hopkins et al.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Justice Gilbert, Justice Barnard not sitting.

People vs. Collector of Flatbush.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Justice Tappen, Justice Gilbert not sitting.

Reilly vs. Newman, executor.—Judgment reversed and new trial ordered. Proceedings remitted to Surrogate; the question of costs is reserved under the statute. Opinion by Judge Tappen.

Williams vs. Anderson.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Judge Tappen, Judge Barnard not sitting.

De Grove vs. Metropolitan Insurance Company.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Judge Tappen.

Dutcher, assignee, vs. Chatham National Bank.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Judge Gilbert not sitting.

Loretz vs. Lucius Hart Manufacturing Company.—Judgment reversed. New trial ordered. Costs to abide event. Opinion by Judge Barnard, Judge Gilbert not sitting.

Lawrence vs. Kiernan—Two actions.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Judge Tappen.

Cocks vs. Travis et al.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Judge Tappen, Judge Gilbern not sitting.

Mutual Benefit Savings Bank vs. Sheldon et al.—Order affirmed, with $10 costs. Judge Gilbert not sitting.

Executors of Daniel Quimby vs. Tompkins.—Judgment affirmed, with costs.

Boylston vs. Wheeler.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Judge Barnard.

Markham vs. Supervisors of Suffolk County.—Judgment affirmed, with costs.

Worrell vs. Munn et al., Executors, &c.—Judgment affirmed, with costs.

COURT OF SESSIONS.

Receiving Stolen Property.

Before Judge Moore and Associate Justices.

John Strauss, a Flushing avenue liquor dealer, was placed on trial for receiving thirty gallons of alcohol and a number of demijohns, which he knew had been stolen. Strauss asserted that when he bought them he believed they belonged to the person who offered them for sale. The jury convicted the prisoner, and the Court deferred sentence.

Burglary.

William Jackson, alias "No Toe Charlie," pleaded guilty to burglary in having broken into Michael Rimmalt's grocery store, at Miller and Fulton avenues, East New York. A young man named Williams was arrested on the charge of being implicated, but Jackson stated that he had nothing whatever to do with the "job," nor did he know anything about it, although he was arrested near the place. Williams was accordingly discharged, but Jackson was remanded for sentence.

A Nuisance.

Patrick Synett, Thomas McManus and Thomas Kingsley were tried yesterday for maintaining a nuisance in the shape of a piggery in Dean street, near the city line. They were convicted, and Judge Moore allowed them thirty days to abate the nuisance.

WALL STREET, }
TUESDAY, July 16—6 P. M. }

On 'Change to-day wheat was quiet and flour active and firm. The cotton market was heavy.

MONEY THREE PER CENT.

Money was easier, and the closing dealings were at three per cent, with more offered at the same rate. Earlier in the day some borrowers paid four per cent on stocks, and a number of renewals were made at that figure. The banks and private bankers are abundantly supplied with money from out of town depositors, and, as indicated in the bank statement on Saturday, there is a steady influx of money, chiefly national bank notes, from the out of town banks, which threatens to create the

of paper money at this centre. The effect of this increased supply is witnessed in the lower ruling of rates on call yesterday and to-day. Prime paper is quoted 5 a 7 per cent discount. Foreign exchange was not so firm. In the first place the advance in gold checks the buying of bills, and secondly serves to make a better supply of commercial bills. The weakness, if the change amounted to so much, was more perceptible in sixty-day than in sight sterling, and is attributable also to more

ACTIVE MONEY IN LONDON,

consequent upon the introduction of the new French loan, particulars of which ought to reach us by the cable this evening. The amount marketed is said to be 500,000 francs at 82 per cent, equivalent to about £17,000,000, a sum that ought not to occasion any prolonged activity or disturbance of the money market in so wealthy a place as London. Still, the Bank of England lost heavily last week and continues to lose, inspiring a belief that may be raised next Thursday. So far as our bonds are concerned they were steady on the other side all day, but dull, which latter they would be naturally pending the diversion of attention to the new French loan. Sixty-day bills were freely offered at 109⅝, and cannot be quoted at better than 109¾ a 109⅞, while sight sterling was only steady at the quotation 110⅜ a 110½. There is furthermore good evidence that some small amounts of new railway loans have been recently negotiated in Europe.

GOLD STRONG—114⅜ A 114½.

The gold market was strong, and advanced two points more—viz., from 114⅜ to 114⅝, closing quiet and steady at 114½, which was so exactly the final quotation that it was the asking price "regular way," and the bid price "buyer three." There was not much doing at the advance, the pool seeming to content themselves with their forenoon work of putting the figure up a quarter, and then quietly supporting the market at 114½, keeping their

the smaller operators and dealers, and noting carefully the temper of the outsiders and the street and public generally. There is no doubt that more strength would have been developed to-day had the steamer taken out specie and the engagements for to-morrow been larger. In explanation it was said that to-day's steamer was not liked by shippers, and that the Cunarders demand too much freightage charge for specie consignments. As it is for to-morrow foot up $856,000, of which $550,000 is gold. The Sub-Treasury paid out $225,000 on account of interest and $37,000 on account of redeemed five-twenties of 1862. The course of the market is shown in the table:—

GOVERNMENTS STRONG.

The foreign quotations for our bonds being no lower, and gold having advanced ⅛ a ¼ per cent, the government list improved in the same proportion as the gold market, although business was dull and transactions were confined chiefly to small dealings at the counter. The following were the closing quotations:—United States currency sixes, 114⅝ a 114⅞; do. do., 1881, registered, 115½ a 115⅝; do. do., coupon, 117⅜ a 117⅝; do. five-twenties, registered, May and November, 115⅝ a 115⅞; do. do., 1862, coupon, do., 115⅝ a 115⅞; do. do., 1864, do. do., 115⅝ a 115⅞; do. do., 1865, do. do., 115⅞ a 116⅛; do. do., 1867, registered, January and July, 114½ a 114¾; do. do., 1865, coupon, do., 114½ a 114⅝; do., do., 1867, do. do., 115¼ a 115⅜; do., do., 1868, do. do., 115 a 115⅛; do., ten-forties, registered, 111⅜ a 111⅝; do. do., coupon, 112¾ a 112⅞; do., fives, 1881, registered, 113⅝ a 113⅞; do. do. do., coupon, 113⅝ a 113⅞.

SOUTHERN SECURITIES LOWER.

The Southern State bonds were heavy for some reason not readily given, unless it be the recent heavy floods throughout the South and the damage to the crops and property they involved. The Tennessees were only steady, Virginia consols and North Carolinas were lower, and the South Carolinas weak at a considerable decline, the July issues having fallen to 27¾. The market was at the same time quite dull, it being difficult to get any close quotations for other bonds on the list than those above referred to. The following were the

STOCKS DULL AND STRONG.

The stock market continued very dull, and was only relieved from utter stagnation by the coincident activity in Erie, Pacific Mail and Northwestern—a trio of stocks to which the business of the summer so far has been chiefly confined. An improvement in Erie had the effect of communicating strength generally, especially as it was fully rivalled by an advance in Pacific Mail. The better feeling in Erie was due to the important measures adopted by

of Directors at their meeting this afternoon. The proposed abrogation of the scandalous contracts, by which the railroad was made the instrument of enriching corporations organized or controlled by the late Erie Ring, was the most important of these measures as affects the price of stock, and its suggestion, as well as all the good intentions expressed to-day by the new board in their resolutions, would have had more influence did not the fact underlie all that the present administration of Erie was the selection of the

party, whose interests cannot be in human nature secondary to those of the Erie road. This is the cloud which overshadows Erie, despite the excellent material in the new direction. We give in an adjoining column a faithful and detailed account of all that was done at this interesting meeting, the proceedings of which will doubtless be read with avidity on both sides of the Atlantic. The advance in the stock was about one per cent as compared with the average price of the previous day. The rise in Pacific Mail for to-day was nearly as much, and excited considerable curiosity as to its cause, the fact being generally known that were not doing anything of any extent, and were rather disposed to await the return of the fall activity before resuming operations. The story about a further stock dividend on New York Central to raise the capital to $100,000,000 was revived, the additional stock to be awarded to present stockholders and marked fully paid for a consideration of only 40 per cent cash. On the other hand came the discouraging report that within three days the road would be in the hands of the Sheriff unless the tax due the government on the scrip dividend was by the end of that time duly liquidated.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.—Receipts, flour, 9,650 bbls.; wheat, 11,340 bushels; corn, 21,119 do.; corn meal, 600 bbls.; oats, 39,250 bushels. The flour market ruled steady under a moderate demand—in part for export—at our quotations. The sales foot up about 8,500 bbls., including 225 bbls. of Southern and 50 bbls. of superfine rye. Corn meal was in better demand and about steady. Sales 550 bbls. at $3 85 for Brandywine and $3 25 for Western yellow. We quote:—

—Wheat was quiet, but with limited offerings the market ruled steady. The sales were about 29,000 bushels at $1 53 for No. 2 Milwaukee spring afloat, $1 77½ for new amber Tennessee afloat, $1 75 for small lots of amber Michigan and $1 75 for small lots white Michigan. Other descriptions were nominal. Corn was rather firmer, owing to light receipts. The sales were about 67,000 bushels at 61c. a 64c. for steam and sail mixed, 64c. a 65c. for yellow, 68c. a 70c. for white. Southern remained nominal at previous figures. Oats were firmer and in good demand. The sales aggregate about 67,000 bushels at 45c. for Western afloat, 44c. for No. 2 Chicago in store, 45c. a 46½c. for white and 45½c. for Milwaukee afloat. Barley and rye were inactive and nominal in the absence of transactions.

FREIGHTS.—The market was very firm for accommodation by vessels on the berth, and rates were firmer, especially for grain, although but little was accomplished, owing to the scarcity of room and the high rates asked. A moderate chartering business was consummated at rates strictly in owners' favor. The engagements were:—To Liverpool, by steam, 15,000 bushels grain relet, at 9½d. a 9¾d.; the regular asking rates were 9¾d. a 10d. The charters comprise:—A Norwegian bark, 3,200 quarters of rye, to Hamburg direct, at 7s. 3d.; a bark, hence to Dunkirk, 3,400 bbls. crude petroleum, at 6s.; a British brig from St. Martin's to New York, salt, on private terms.

GUNNIES.—The market since our last has been dull for all descriptions, and, with the exception of small jobbing orders being filled, nothing has transpired of interest. We quote:—Native cloth, 14½c. a 15c.; domestic do., 16c. for prompt delivery and 17c. for future; bags, 14½c. a 15c. for light to heavy.

HEMP AND JUTE.—The market has been quiet and unchanged for all descriptions of hemp. Manila quoted at 12c., gold. Jute was also quiet, but steady at 4½c. a 6½c., gold. Jute butts sold moderately at 2⅞c. a 3c. currency.

HAY AND STRAW.—The demand has somewhat slackened off, and large arrivals are shortly expected, which has caused an easy market, although we make no particular change in our former range of quotations; quoted at $1 15 a $1 20 for shipping hay, $1 40 a $1 60 for retail qualities, 95c. a $1 for salt, 80c. a 85c. for clover, $1 10 a $1 15 for long rye straw, 85c. a 90c. for short do., 70c. a 75c. for oat, and 60c. a 65c. for wheat.

HOPS.—There has been a pretty fair demand for prime hops since our last; but this quality of domestic is nearly, if not quite, exhausted, and foreign hops have been resorted to instead. Old hops have also been in rather better request, but the transactions were of no special importance. Former prices were current.

LEATHER.—The market for hemlock sole remained without noticeable change. The demand continued fair, especially from manufacturers, and former prices were current. The receipts have been small for the past week, but the stock is well assorted. Oak was in light stock and the demand somewhat in excess of receipts; full prices were readily obtained. We quote:—Hemlock—Buenos Ayres, heavy, 28c. a 29c. per lb; do., middle, 28c. a 29c.; do., light, 27c. a 27½c.; California, heavy, 27c.; do., middle, 27c.; do., light, 26½c.; Orinoco, &c., heavy, 26c. a 27c.; do., middle, 26½c. a 27c.; do., light, 26c. a 26½c.; good damaged, all kinds and weights, 23c. a 25c.; poor do., do., 18c. a 20c.; in the rough, 30c. a 33c. Oak—Slaughter, heavy, 32c. a 38c.; do., middle, 34c. a 38c.; do., light, 37c. a 40c.; cropped, heavy, 37c. a 38c.; do., middle, 38c. a 42c.; do., light, 37c. a 42c.; in the rough, heavy, 31c. a 38c.; do., middle, 31c. a 36c.; do., light, 32c. a 35c.; bellies, 17c. a 19c.

METALS.—Copper has been in better demand, but generally the market has remained quiet. Sales have been reported of 100,000 lbs. of lake at 33c. a 33½c. Tin, iron, spelter and other metals have been quiet and without reported change in prices.

MOLASSES.—The market remained dull and without any new feature to note. Prices were unchanged but more or less nominal. We quote:—

	Old Crop.	New Crop.
Cuba—Centrifugal and mixed	19c. a 20c.	20c. a 25c.
Clayed	22c. a 28c.	28c. a 32c.
Muscovado, refining	23c. a 30c.	30c. a 33c.
Muscovado, grocery	30c. a 35c.	34c. a 38c.
Porto Rico	25c. a 40c.	30c. a 60c.
English Islands	— a —	30c. a 45c.
New Orleans	30c. a 45c.	40c. a 90c.

NAVAL STORES.—For spirits turpentine the market was rather less active, but prices were a shade firmer without being quotably higher. The sales have been 150 bbls. at 47½c., 30 bbls. in lots at 47½c. a 48c., 50 bbls. to arrive at 47½c., and 100 New York bbls. at 48½c. Rosin was in limited request. Strained quoted steady at $3 a $3 10. We hear of sales of 10 bbls. strained at $3 10, 200 bbls. No. 1 at $4, 174 bbls. low pale at $4 25, 50 bbls. pale at $4 50, 275 bbls. do. at $4 50 a $4 75, 50 bbls. do. at $5 37½, 176 bbls. do. at $5 50, and 21 bbls. black at $2 65. Tar was in better demand, with sales reported of 30 bbls Wilmington rope at $3 25 and 100 bbls. Washington at $3 75.

OILS.—No particular change has occurred in this market since our last report. Linseed has sold moderately from crushers at previous figures, but for other oils the market has been very quiet. We quote:—Linseed 83c., in casks; crude whale oil 70c. a 72c., natural winter do. 78c.; crude sperm $1 40, bleached do. $1 63 a $1 68, crude cotton seed 50c. a 51c., Menhaden 42½c. a 44c. for prime and 40c. a 42c. for interior.

PETROLEUM.—The market for refined remained dull and more or less nominal in the absence of transactions; quoted for spot or balance of month at 22c. a 22½c. Crude in bulk was held with considerable firmness, but we learned of no transactions; held at 12½c., but the best bids were not above 12c. Case oil was quoted steady, although nominal, at 27c. a 27½c. Naphtha remained entirely nominal at about 14½c. At the Creek the market was quiet and unchanged; quoted at $3 50 on both roads. The Philadelphia market was easy, but not quotably changed. We learn of sales of 2,500 bbls. standard white for first half of August at 22 3-16c., and 4,000 bbls. do. seller last half of do. at 22⅜c.; quoted for spot or remainder of month at 21⅞c.; also in New York, 500 bbls. crude in bulk at 12⅛c.

PROVISIONS.—Receipts—Pork, 50 bbls.; beef, 25 packages; cutmeats, 1,342 do.; lard, 1,102 bbls. and tierces. The market for mess pork exhibited but little animation, yet prices were about steadily held, although there was little disposition shown to operate; round lots quoted at $13 75 for July. In jobbing lots about 300 bbls. changed hands at $13 80 a $13 87½. Bacon met with fair inquiry, but the scarcity of freight room prevented exporters from operating; sales 125 of light, long clear at 7¼c.; quoted for the range of light to heavy at 7¼c. a 7¾c. Dressed hogs were steady and in moderate demand; quoted at 5⅝c. a 6c. for heavy to light. Beef sold to the extent of 72 bbls. in jobbing lots at from $8 a $10 for mess, $10 a $12 for extra do., $12 a $14 for prime mess in tierces, and $17 a $20 for India mess do. Beef hams sold in small lots at from $22 a $23 50 for Western and Texas. Cut meats—Smoked meats were in fair request at full prices. Pickled meats were also in moderate demand and firm. Sales 250 boxes bellies at 7½c. for 12 lb. We quote:—Smoked hams, 15c. a 17c.; do. shoulders, 6¾c. a 7c.; pickled bellies, 7c. a 7¾c. for boxed or loose; do. hams, 12c. a 13c.; do. shoulders, 5¼c. a 6¼c. Lard—The market for Western was quiet, but without essential change in prices. Sales 250 tierces for August at 9⅝c.; spot and month quoted at 9½c.; 100 tierces new for immediate delivery at 8⅝c., and 250 tierces of city at 8⅛c.

RICE.—The market to-day has been less active, but prices remained firm. Sales were reported of 30 tierces Carolina at 8½c. a 9¼c.; 125 bags Patna at 7½c. a 7⅞c., and 200 bags Rangoon at 7c. a 7¼c.

SUGAR.—The market for raw exhibits but little animation; still there was a limited business transacted at about previous figures. The sales aggregate about 730 hhds. of refining Cubas at 8¾c. a 8⅞c., and 1,440 boxes centrifugal at 10c. Refined was in moderate request and steady at 11⅜c. for A, and 12⅜c. a 13c. for bonds. We quote:—Cuba—Refining, inferior to common, 7¾c. a 8¼c.; fair to good fair, 8½c. a 8¾c.; good to prime, 8⅞c. a 9c.; grocery, fair to good, 9⅛c. a 9⅜c.; prime to choice, 9½c. a 10c.; centrifugal, hhds. and boxes, 9¼c. a 10¼c.; molasses, hhds. and boxes, 7½c. a 8½c.; melado, 4½c. a 6¾c. Havana—Boxes, Dutch standard, Nos. 7 to 9, 8c. a 8¾c.; do., 10 to 12, 9c. a 9½c.; do., 13 to 15, 9¾c. a 10½c.; do., 16 to 18, 10⅝c. a 11⅝c.; do., 10 to 20, 12c. a 12⅜c.; white, 11½c. a 12½c. Manila—Superior and extra superior, 7¾c. a 8⅝c.

STEARINE.—The market was firmer, with sales reported of 150 tierces at 10c. a 10⅛c., closing at the latter price.

TOBACCO.—There has been a moderate business consummated for the past three days in all descriptions at about former prices. Kentucky especially was in good demand, chiefly from the home trade. We note sales of 100 cases of old crop, sundries, at 20c. a 40c.; 100 cases new crop, State, at 11c. a 14c.; 450 cases do. Ohio, at 10c. a 15c.; 175 cases do., Wisconsin, part at 9¼c.; 200 bales of Havana at 95c. a $1 15, and 560 hhds. of Kentucky at 8¾c. a 15c.

TALLOW continued in fair demand at full prices. We hear of sales of 100 hhds. city at 9¼c. a 9 5-16c.

WHISKEY.—Receipts, 1,088 bbls. The market was steady at 92½c., with sales of 250 bbls. at that price.

WOOL.—The general market is reported as being quiet, but firm, although some dealers have had considerable trade, and consequently report more inquiry and activity. Fine wool has chiefly been in demand, and there was also a moderate inquiry reported for sheepskins. We hear of sales since our last of 20,000 lbs. pulled at 65c. a 72c.; 5,000 lbs. fleece, 68c.; 5,000 lbs. English Noils, 72c.; 3,000 lbs. East India, 78c.; 4,000 lbs. medium fleece, 72c.; 5,000 lbs. THE ERIE RAILWAY.

The First Meeting of the Newly Elected Directors—The Extravagances of the Past to be Looked Into and the Investigations to Go On.

The new Board of Erie Railway Directors held their first meeting yesterday forenoon at the Grand Opera House. The meeting was held with closed doors, the reporters for the press not being allowed to enter the sacred council chamber until the deliberations had come to an end. The entire Board was present, with the exception of General Dix, G. Talbot Olyphant, Frederick Schuchardt and W. R. Travers.

President Watson presided and Mr. Otis acted as secretary.

The following committees were appointed, the President being ex officio member of each committee:—

Executive Committee—Messrs. Diven, Duncan, Morgan and Barlow.

Finance Committee—Messrs. Cisco, Lansing, Babcock and Travers.

Committee on By-Laws—Messrs. Barlow, Pruyn and Johnston.

Mr. W. Watts Sherman resigned the office of Treasurer, and the election of a successor was postponed.

The following resolutions were adopted:—

Resolved, That in view of the extravagance which has characterized the legal expenses of this company for a number of years past, that all appointments of counsel and attorneys now existing be terminated, and that Messrs. Barlow, Laroque and McFarland be appointed the counsel and attorneys of the company, at an annual salary of $10,000, and that any further appointments or expenditures in respect to legal business of this company be made by the President and Executive Committee of this Board.

Resolved, That in all cases where bonds or undertakings in behalf of the company are necessary to be given in legal proceedings or otherwise, that the treasurer for the time being be and he is hereby authorized under the authority of the Executive Committee to use any of the securities or moneys of the company to the extent necessary for such purposes, as an indemnity and security for the execution of any such bonds or undertakings by the sureties, and that any securities thus used be reported to this Board.

The following preamble and resolution offered by Mr. Duncan were also adopted:—

Whereas the late Board of Directors of this company were diligently engaged from the 11th day of March last to the end of their official term, in an investigation as to the management of the affairs of this company under the previous so-called Gould administration; and whereas, from such action and investigation, this Board has reason to believe that during the period last referred to a large number of fraudulent, burdensome and unjust contracts were nominally imposed upon this company which are voidable at its election; therefore,

Resolved, That the Executive Committee be requested to forthwith examine and inquire touching all such contracts with any person or corporation made before the 11th day of March, 1872, and in regard to the force and validity thereof, and that they report their conclusions to this Board.

The meeting then adjourned.

THE ORANGE PARADE—CARD FROM GRAND MARSHAL M'GEE.

NEW YORK, July 14, 1872.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

SIR—In reply to a letter, signed "An American," in your issue of to-day, allow me to correct a misstatement in it. The Orangemen of New York did not parade for the purpose of proclaiming their adherence to the British government, for the simple reason that they do not owe allegiance to the British or any other government other than the United States of America. We are sworn as Orangemen and citizens of this great republic to support the Union, and not by any act of ours to bring disgrace on our country or the colors which we wear. Should the services of American citizens ever be required to defend our country it will be found that the Orangemen will be the first in the field and last to yield. WILLIAM MCGEE.

THE BROOKLYN BRIDGE.

The Caisson Filled In—Work Under Water Finished—The New York Tower—Present Condition of the Enterprise.

The New York Bridge Company has progressed in their enterprise to the point of commencing the erection of the stone work on the tower above high water mark on this side of the East river, at the place where it was left off when the caisson was sunk to its permanent location. Monday afternoon, at one o'clock, a body of masons commenced to labor at this branch of the great work, and it is the intention of the engineers to prosecute it vigorously and lose no time in having Brooklyn and this city connected by a wire cable roadway, which will be in fact when completed one of the greatest engineering successes of the time. This week will see the last of the work under water finished. There only remains a space of six or seven cubic yards now to be filled up at the foundation, and the two open shafts, eight feet in diameter, used for communication from the surface are to be at once closed up and made solid like the surrounding structure. The air-pumping machinery, consisting of thirteen engines, each of twenty-horse power, are to be removed without delay, their services being no longer required. The two large engines employed for hoisting the débris from the bottom of the river were removed on Saturday last. All that will be retained is the machinery for hoisting and handling the material to be used for building the tower. The wharves are to be immediately cleared and arranged for the rapid prosecution of the mason work. Derricks are to be placed in position, car tracks laid, and the most expeditious means adopted for landing the granite as it arrives from the coast of Maine. The Brooklyn bridge is now in a fair way towards completion.

THE TOWERS.

Now that the New York tower is about to rise above the waters of the East River the people of the two cities will acquire increased confidence in the early realization of a work considered essential to their mutual prosperity. The tower on the Brooklyn side has reached the height of 105 feet above high water mark and rests upon a solid foundation. The work has made more progress there owing to delays in obtaining possession of the property at the foot of Roosevelt street, and also on account of the directors not wishing to incur the expense of duplicating the machinery required in sinking the caissons. At a point fifteen feet above the present height of the tower in Brooklyn will be the level of the road bed of the bridge, and from this upwards will be erected a structure 150 feet high of solid masonry, divided into three columns and two arched openings. The wire cables are to run over the columns and be stretched at a point 120 feet above the water. The same arrangement will exist on the New York side.

WORK UNDER WATER.

To such of the general public as might imagine that an inconsiderable amount of work has only been done on the New York tower, Mr. Roebling, the Chief Engineer, states that the quantity of masonry and concrete laid on the foundation under water is equal to the entire masonry of the Brooklyn tower visible to-day above the water line. Active operations were commenced late in December in the way of excavations at the bed of the river. In the month of May, before a satisfactory foundation was reached at a depth of seventy-eight feet below mean high water, the borings had been confined only to the small area covered by the old pier 29, but were extended over the remaining portion of the foundation as soon as the adjacent ferry slips were vacated. The results showed an extreme difference in the level of the bed rock of twelve feet, the hole of the least depth touching rock at eighty feet below high water, and the deepest at ninety-two feet. The immediate river bed consisted of logs and loose dock stones followed by a sticky black clay. Next came gravel and quicksand, the latter varying from fifteen to twenty feet, until the solid or rock foundation was reached.

THE CAISSON.

In September last the caisson was towed from the Atlantic basin to its final resting place. While at the basin seven additional courses of timber and concrete had been built upon it. All the after seams were caulked and protected by felt, tin and creosoted sheating. The various pipes, shafts and locks were also carried up the necessary height. When the caisson was brought over it was twelve feet thick on which ten feet of woodwork, as stated, was afterwards built. Under it was a chamber ten feet high, making the entire height thirty-four feet. It contains twenty-two feet of timber as solid as ship carpenters' tools can make it, above the roof of the air chamber, seven courses more than the Brooklyn caisson. It is twice as strong as its Brooklyn brother. At a depth of seventy-eight feet and a load on its back of 55,000 tons, not the slightest sign of weakness has been discovered. In this connection it may be remarked that there is nothing better established in engineering than the durability of wood under water. It is removed from the action of air, and, unlike stone, is not subject to disintegration.

THE FILLING IN.

But now the air chamber is filled with material that will stand the test of centuries. Hydraulic cement, composed chiefly of sand and gravel, together with stones, have been crowded into the space, which is 172 feet long by 102 wide and nine feet high. The concrete for filling the chamber was all mixed above and let down through the supply shafts, ready for distribution below. No brick pillars were used, as under the Brooklyn caisson, the bearings of the frames being so wide as to be equal to all contingencies when once uniformly packed under with concrete. The stones, earth and sand left in the caisson during the sinking were sufficient to fill one-third of the space. At one time there were four gangs of men, sixty each, employed under water. Yesterday the number so engaged was only three men, and their work will be closed up to-morrow or after.

DEATHS AMONG THE LABORERS.

The deaths that have occurred among the laborers engaged at work in the caisson have been frequently referred to by the press. As many as 600 men have been employed at one time, and out of this number, in the course of seven months, five died. The effects of the compressed air on the men, it was known at first, would be serious, and only a few hours labor were required to be performed. A physician was engaged and medical remedies kept at hand to be used in case of necessity. It is claimed by the engineers, Colonel Paine and Mr. Collingwood, who superintended the work below, that only in two instances was death caused by the pressure, but enough is known to make it certain that persons not possessing sound constitutions were exposed to imminent danger while working under water. Scarcely any man escaped without being somewhat affected by intense pains in his limbs or bones, or by a temporary paralysis of arms and legs; but they all got over it, either by suffering for a few days outside or by applying the risky mode of returning into the caisson at once as soon as the pains manifested themselves. All this is now over, and the very remarkable matter of men working forty feet under the bottom of the river will totally cease before the week closes. Ordinary street gas, manufactured on the wharf, was used for illumination, and an ingenious mechanical telegraph, contrived by Colonel Paine, proved of great assistance in keeping up communication between the upper and lower world. The masons, who commenced work on Monday, will lay four feet of granite each week over the entire tower. It will be 120 feet high exclusive of superstructure.

VANDERBILT'S BROTHER-IN-LAW INDICTED.

Crawford's Shooting at Henderson, the Police Detective—Indictment Found Against Him—He Is To Be Tried at General Sessions for Assault With Intent to Kill.

The Grand Jury yesterday had under consideration the case of Robert L. Crawford, brother-in-law of Commodore Vanderbilt. It will be remembered that Crawford, on the night of the 25th of May, discharged a pistol at Detective William Henderson, of the Fifteenth precinct, in the course of a quarrel arising out of a difficulty consequent upon the arrest of Commodore Vanderbilt's colored coachman for a supposed assault upon a white woman. An alarm was given to the police by some citizens on the night in question, apprising them that Mr. Vanderbilt's coachman had dragged a woman into the stables in Waverley place, she screaming and resisting with all her might. The coachman was arrested and taken to the Fifteenth Precinct Station House, in Mercer street. Mr. Robert L. Crawford went round to the police station and demanded the coachman's release in rather a boisterous manner. By direction of Captain Byrnes, Crawford was expelled from the station house by Detective Henderson. A few minutes afterward Henderson also went out. He was met on the corner of Amity street and Mercer by Crawford, who at once produced a pistol, and, pointing it at the police officer, called to Mr. Albert Guerin, of No. 4 Clinton place, who happened to be passing at the time, saying—

"WAIT UNTIL YOU SEE ME KILL THIS FELLOW."

Henderson, seeing his danger, jumped at and grappled with Crawford. They rolled over on the sidewalk, and while both were struggling on the ground Crawford shot Henderson through the thigh. The ball after passing through Henderson's leg entered the knee of Mr. Guerin, who was still standing near. Henderson lingered for several weeks, but finally recovered, and yesterday appeared to testify before the Grand Jury. The other witnesses were Mr. Albert Guerin and Sergeant McClintock, of the Fifteenth precinct. The Grand Jury came into court at two o'clock, and presented an indictment against Crawford, charging him with felonious assault on William Henderson, with intent to kill the said Henderson. It is probable that the case will be tried toward the end of the term.

SUICIDE OF A LUNATIC.

Shortly before twelve o'clock on Monday night Philip Gertner, a German, thirty-two years of age, who is believed to have been insane, while in the hallway of the tenement house 1,128 Second avenue, committed suicide by shooting himself in the mouth with a heavily loaded pistol. Captain Gunner, of the Nineteenth precinct, had the body sent to the Morgue and notified Coroner Young to hold an inquest.

SARATOGA RACES.

The Great Day of the July Meeting.

HARRY BASSETT BEATS LONGFELLOW

IMMENSE CROWD—ENTHUSIASTIC INTEREST.

Scenes at the Pool Room, in the Village, at the Stables and on the Track.

Catesby the Winner of the Saratoga Stakes, Harry Bassett the Saratoga Cup, Gray Planet and Buckden Make a Dead Heat in the Dash of One Mile and a Half, Dividing the Purse.

SARATOGA, July 16, 1872.

Half the republic is here in spirit to-day. The two finest horses of the age have as many partisans as the two candidates for the Presidency, and the result of their second competition makes as much intense feeling as the great election to be decided after the fall State elections, of which the race at Long Branch was the equine counterpart.

SARATOGA ON THE CUP DAY.

The Saratoga "Cup" is a myth. There is no cup. In England, where fortunes abide and plate is an heirloom, a piece of silver is the honorary part of every great field contest. Here the plate is generally commuted, and the cup meant to-day the draught of elixir in $1,600, offered as the joint prize of the premium of the association and the sum of the entering fees for all the horses which originally desired to run. Before the Grand Stand, on the race course, a pedestal is erected to hold such occasional cups, but to-day the cup is less a breach than an observance; they give its value and wink at its omission.

FOREGROUND INDICATED.

Before we give the recital of the extraordinary race between the kings of the turf to-day, wherein the proud testimonial reclaimed at Long Branch was wrested from the noble horse which, in the judgment of the multitude, will carry it off again, let us briefly jot down the surroundings of the spot where the race occurred.

The little village is full of praise for the money now being spent in it. They are driving the nails in the trial stage of Judge Barnard in the new Town Hall, which has just cost $110,000. The two morning journals are disturbing the peace of visitors by dull and pointless village abuse over the question of who shall be Postmaster for the next four years. The new spire of the great Methodist church is waiting for its bells. They are throwing out a mountain of mud from the old High Rock spring to tube it again. The upholsterers wrestle with the new Grand Central House, to fit it for company. The fine new depot lies silent and abandoned between trains, and at train time is a pandemonium. The town is crowded, and the races are the cause of it.

POOL-ROOM TALK ABOUT BASSETT AND LONGFELLOW.

A very large crowd was assembled at the pool room, on Morrissey's grounds, Monday evening, probably above four hundred persons, coming and going, of whom nearly one-half occupied chairs in an irregular semi-ellipse, around Underwood, the pool-seller, who waxed warm in his shirt sleeves and perspired about the collar, but kept up that sustained, even and good-humored form of rapid auctioneering which despatched a great deal of work and stunned nobody's sense of hearing.

With the names of the horses chalked up on a blackboard for each of the three races and the treasurer and tally-taker about a table below, Underwood had under his eye all the varieties of the sporting man: here a horse partisan who would stick to a particular nag, as Bassett, the whole season through, taking the best odds he could get, but determined to recover the money lost at Long Branch by sustaining the same gallant chestnut on which he had made it the previous summer; here a cool, indifferent wagerer, whose superstition or judgment had got the better of his sympathies, and who now offered odds greedily on Longfellow against the colt which had for a whole year enriched him; again, a novice or poker player, with an eye to human mutations, fond of betting upon anything that came along, whether a horse or an election, and willing to lose something for the remote consideration of winning very much. Some timid people, always betting upon certainties, were listening around for suggestions; others, with means enough and time enough to make wagering a necessity of human enjoyment and a stimulation for the ennui of looking even at such a race, bet for the benefit of their spirits on the morrow. We little know in the ordinary professional and methodical courses of life how much of human nature finds employment in these forms of hazard.

SCHOOLS OF TURF PEOPLE.

Yonder were the great patrons of the turf looking on—Belmont, Cotterell, Sanford, Hunter, Morris, Travers, Jerome—taking little apparent part; yonder the heavy stockbreeders and exchangers—McGrath, Carroll, Walden, Withers, Doswell, Bacon and Donahue; again the boyish and wiry jockeys drawn to the spot by wistful curiosity; further on that knot of genial horse-loving Irishmen and stablemen who follow Underwood around, hopeful of an opportunity to improve such means as they may possess; yonder Babcock, the owner of Helmbold, still sullen under Morrissey's denunciation of Saturday; on the outskirts the cappers and the creatures of the faro houses looking in for victims or excitement; behind all, at the bar, smoking his cigar, Morrissey, whose horse Defender is to enter the lists for the Saratoga Cup with the two great rivals; and finally, the old Virginian, McDaniel, head of "the McDaniel Confederacy," and proprietor of Harry Bassett, with Roe, the light and wiry boy rider of that splendid young Lexington colt, close at his side, as ever; and Old John Harper, quainter and more provincial still, the owner of the favorite Longfellow, attended by that cheery-faced black waif who rides the great five-year-old to victory. Politicians lurk around, as Jimmy O'Brien, the "Big Judge" Connolly and Harry Genet; a few Western and Southern Congressmen, and perhaps a Senator, watch the proceedings; and then we have the Kentucky crowd of Confederate officers; the Maryland school, led by Governor Bowie; the New Orleans turfmen, the Canadians who travel with the steeple-chasers, and that overdressed swarm of New York liverymen, fanciers and sale stablers who seek ideas, odds and holiday.

PROGNOSTICATIONS ON THE HORSES.

The betting was nearly three to one on Longfellow against Bassett. Mr. Morrissey's horse Defender gets very little encouragement at the pool room—say $1 in the pools to Longfellow's $100.

"What did Morrissey put in that slow five-year-older for?" asked one. "About all he ever did was to come in well along behind once or twice. Did he ever win any race?"

"Oh! Morrissey says he put him in to help Mac (Daniel) along. He'll help him along as a coach dog helps a coach—by staidly running behind."

"What's Morrissey want to help McDaniel more than John Harper for?" said the new arrival, fresh in horsemongery.

"You know ever since last year, when he won so largely on Helmbold by Longfellow's defeat, Morrissey has been betting on Bassett, and by this course he lost $10,000 at Monmouth Park at the last meeting. But he is obstinate and sticks by his favorite!"

At this point a sporting reporter comes up with news.

"McDaniel says it will be no 'walk over' to-morrow, and that John Harper isn't running this time against a sick horse, as he was a fortnight ago."

"Now, that means something. Does old John feel confident?"

"John says if Bassett beats his horse it will be only one to one and no finality, and that they must run again."

"That is what the public will say. A single beat this season won't settle the matter. It's the popular idea that Longfellow is the best horse alive in the world, and that, except under suspicious circumstances, such as took place last year, Bassett can't outrun him."

"Do you think Longfellow can beat any horse on the English turf?" says the novice to Mr. Cotterell, the Mobile stockowner, who is betting on Bassett.

"I should like to see him over there or Bassett either. Yes, I believe that they are both superior to the best running champions of England."

THE SECTIONAL ATTITUDE OF THE BASSETT-LONGFELLOW RACES.

If we were in the relative equality we occupied before the civil war the series of contests between Bassett and Longfellow would take the form of a hot sectional rivalry between the North and the South, like the great race between Eclipse and Henry, fifty years ago. In that instance a race took place at Washington city between Charles and Eclipse, and Charles broke down, whereafter the sectional sportsmen met at a hotel, and the South closed a match to beat the Northern horse next year, on the Long Island course, with a Southern horse to be named at the post on the day of the race. Eclipse was considered a distinctively Northern horse, having been raised on Long Island and sired by Duroc, who was of the direct stock of Diomed, the winner of the first English Derby, in the year 1780. At the appointed time Colonel Johnson came East with Betsy Richards and Henry, and named Henry as the Southern champion at the post. The feeling was extraordinary, and the Southern people, not consulting their judgment, bet wildly on their favorite. Henry won the first heat and Eclipse won the race. The Southern people, full of emptiness and fury, went home hating the Northern men, and never afterwards allowed them to race South on terms of equality. At least so said the authorities of the pool room.

THE PAST OF BASSETT AND LONGFELLOW.

Although Harry Bassett and Longfellow were foaled within half a mile of each other Bassett is now a New Jersey horse, belonging to McDaniel's stock farm at Paterson, while Longfellow's stable is in Kentucky. The South and Southwest regard Longfellow as their exponent; the Northern sporting populace predicted last year that Bassett would beat Longfellow in the former's fourth year, there being the difference of a year in favor of John Harper's champion. Bassett has been a more valuable horse in the way of winning money than Longfellow, and has run above double the number of races. Longfellow has run a half score times and been twice beaten. The actual value of Longfellow, however, as a swifter, stronger and more reliable animal—never yet strained nor even out of temper—was supposed to be greater than that of Bassett, and the betting last night, alack for many! showed this to be the general impression. Longfellow was estimated to be worth $50,000, and it was thought that after the present season he would never appear upon the track, but be used for stock purposes. Longfellow had made his mile in 1:40, ahead of any time. Bassett had run under 110 pounds weight two miles in three minutes and thirty-five and one-half seconds. His career last year was remarkable and excited the liveliest apprehensions of his capacity to transfer the honors of the turf from Kentucky to the East. He "walked away" from Helmbold, Preakness and Regards and beat the former tough and matured galloper in the four-mile contest at Baltimore. The worsting of Longfellow by Helmbold at Saratoga last August was by many imputed to dark and treacherous work on the part of outsiders. All waited for the opening games of this season, but Bassett's expected triumph was ended at Long Branch amidst the greatest excitement of the kind in one period, and the present struggle has been regarded as of high, though minor interest, as giving the young and defeated son of Lexington one more chance to take the ascendant. He gallantly closed up with the chance and carried it off. As to Kingfisher, opinions differ. Some say he is merely veneered and will go down in a year. His owner, who paid $15,000 for him, as it is said, is still proud of his favorite. Helmbold, also, hurt himself at Mobile, so that we have nothing on the turf approaching the champion and his young challenger who to-day became champion.

THE STALL BY NIGHT.

While this gaming and bluffing goes on in the hotels and club rooms of Saratoga, the mind of the quieter spectator can wander off to these secluded stables among the pines of the race track, one mile out of the lighted village, where carefully watched all night, as Mammon might watch impounded Pegasus, the beautiful subjects of all this speculation and barter sleep upon the straw. No stranger may venture near. A footstep startles the watch dog. The owner lies sentinel over groom and jockey; for bribery and violence take devious or desperate paths. The thin plates which are to replace the horse shoes, as a pair of pumps in a human runner replace his boots, are already fastened upon the young stallions. The mighty shoulders and haunches of the black champion are stretched in the clean litter as he dozes out the night in forgetfulness of his strength and beauty. The more capricious Bassett stirs oftener and starts sometimes to his feet, as if he knew the morrow's work; while Longfellow indifferent, may be supposed to think the day sufficient for the victory thereof. Such are life and morals when the speed and splendor of horses become subjects of the gamester's commerce, and the horse grows nobler at the contrast of the human selfishness his nobility provokes.

BASSETT'S FATHER.

A gentleman recently in Kentucky told me that he had seen the grand old sire of Bassett, that parent of our noblest stock, old Lexington, who ran four miles in seven minutes and nineteen and three-quarter seconds, and is now twenty-three years of age, past the measure of equine length of days.

"He was wrapped up in a linen coverlet," said my informant, "and we could only see his ears, eyes and legs, and he moved off in a field so friskily that I said, 'What trotting mare have you got there?' Just as if he knew that we were talking about him. The old veteran at this gave a neigh, threw his legs in the air, and executed a flourish, like a colt."

BETWEEN POOL SELLING AND RACE MORNING.

At ten o'clock John Chamberlain, the Morrissey of Long Branch, and, as some say, a more prosperous gamester than Morrissey, and the chief spirit of the race course there, arrived at the Grand Union Hotel and joined his friend, McGrath. At the same hotel were such opposite spirits as Judge Barnard, who has taken a cottage on the hotel premises and is to appear to-morrow to defend the charges on which the Judiciary Committee have impeached him. The Peruvian Minister Garcia and his handsome wife were at the same hotel, and across the street, at the Congress, were Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Hartley and hundreds of others prominent in society, politics or commerce.

Mr. Breslin, at the Union, told me that 1,000 guests slept under his roof that night, and probably ten thousand strangers were in Saratoga on the eve of the races.

Tuesday morning opened hazily and with signs of rain, but before nine o'clock the sun was shining brightly and the day grew warmer than on any preceding morning of these meetings. The pool room was again crowded, and a rival and more democratic pool room under the Marion Hotel also did a fair trade in the possibilities of the next three hours.

A lunatic made the streets lively by parading in red, white and blue priestly vestments, with an enormous hat and a tremendous banner full of texts from Scripture. A band of music announcing a horse trot somewhere, made the air heavy with bum-bum-bumming. The marble walks of the streets were full of promenaders, and all the many shops exposed their gorgeous goods upon the sidewalk. Carriages stood in long rows along Broadway, and at an early hour pedestrians moved in long lines out of Union avenue, past the handsome brick and brown stone Club House, the Indian camp and the circular railway to the race track. There again the pool selling continued under the Grand Stand, and as the people filled the long lines of seats the air blew down from the Green hills of Vermont and feebly swayed the piny woods about the gates. Boys were peddling programmes of the races; carriages drove up and filled the field; grooms at the park stables, without the grounds, were walking the animals to be raced to and fro. It was the noisiest day of the meeting, and sufficiently animating to interest the oldest man of the world.

INCIDENT.

"Will it be a fair race? Now, tell me," said an incredulous belle, surrounded by gallants and a too doting father. "Are horse races ever fair? Don't they make them up beforehand and get people to bet the right way and then take their money by riding the wrong horse best?"

"Oh, no; not in such races as this. The reputation of the horse is worth more than the profits of swindling. These horses are owned by the most honorable and conservative men on the turf."

"Then I'll bet. Let me see, who will bet with me? Pa, I guess you must."

Pa looks shy at this; but brightens up with the reflection that any closeness on the money hint may affect his chances to get this lady off upon some of the admirers aforesaid.

"Well, what do you bet, Pet?"

"I'll bet you $100 on Harry Bassett. That's the prettiest name, and he ought to win."

"Not even, Miss Perichole," says a malicious young man; "the odds are three to one against Bassett. If you win the Colonel loses not $100 but $300."

The Colonel is gently grim. The young lady feels assured now, more than ever, that the pretty name will win the race.

THE GRAND STAND.

At eleven o'clock the stage is full of Greeley fans and morning dresses, programmes and pretty feet, parasols and white felt hats, handkerchiefs wiping away perspiration and people walking down in the quarter stretch, cutpurses, governors, invalids, professional men, the kaleidoscope of the human world.

The first race has many contestants, and they are all colts—two-year-oldsters, of no discretion—so that it takes about one hour to start them off and the people grow impatient, and over all the enormous length and depth of that great stand there is a decent beating of feet. As the colts finally get off we look back and see one of the most immense and orderly assemblages of people ever congregated at an American race, and before our astonishment at this multitude is done the three-quarters have been run, and we see that a negro boy rides in the winner. This relieves us. Anything would.

THE TALK AGAINST BASSETT.

Just before the horses started for the first race a partial revulsion took place concerning the second and great race of the day. I mention it to show how the best laid plans go a-gley.

"I anticipate no sport," said one authority. "Last night Colonel McDaniel was offered 100 to 30 on Longfellow, and he replied that such was not fair—that 100 to 20 would be more equitable. Now," said this gentleman, "if the owner of a brag horse, like Bassett, stands that way on ten per cent, what are we to think, who must take sides?"

"Yes," said another, "I would have preferred to see a race between Abdel Koree, Monarchist and Alroy, and, perhaps, Defender—a close, equalized contest. This race to-day will be an easy triumph for Longfellow, and the nag Defender will make it ridiculous."

At this time old Colonel David McDaniel, with his slow, dragging walk; white hair, large red nose and big stature, came by the Grand Stand, and around him were the members of "the McDaniel Confederacy," Bassett, Brewster, Hubbard, Joe Daniels, &c., all supposed to be owners of shares, more or less, in Harry Bassett. That good steed might say, "They have parted my vesture among them and for my raiment they have cast lots." McDaniel has bought grounds adjacent to the track at Saratoga and put up comfortable stables and lodgings, evidently designing to stand siege yearly. He is a man of observation, of wide experience, without strict education, but of far higher intelligence than John Harper, and is a better trainer.

"McDaniel," said the editor of a well-known sporting journal, "has been too sanguine. He thought he had a world-beater in Bassett, and relied too little upon patient work. Some say that his horse was strained at Baltimore in the four-mile heats, and that four-mile heats kill three-year-oldsters; but his horse has made better time since than before. It is work—patient, skilful work which conquers, other things being nearly the same. Bassett could run better two weeks hence than at present, for he is not now in condition."

The prophets were destined to come to grief on this day, although, possibly, their ultimate judgment upon Longfellow will be sustained. Within one hour and a quarter Harry Bassett, riding neck and neck with Longfellow, passed the two mile and a quarter pole, won the mythical Saratoga Cup, won $1,600, won enormous odds in pools and wagers, and, had his backers shown faith, they might have won scores of thousands of dollars.

WEIGHING THE TWO RIDERS.

The scene under the judges' stand at the weighing of the jockeys at a quarter to twelve o'clock was picturesque and interesting, about twenty little urchins, white and black, carrying saddles and bags of weights upon their arms, clad in parti-colored suits and skull caps of light colors, each the livery of some celebrated stable, waited their turn to mount the scale with all their haberdashery upon them. There, successively, the little heirs of danger and poverty stood, engineers of these vital locomotives, with no other education than pluck and habit give, and the avoirdupois weight of each—his only biography of human consequence—was recorded in a book, none speaking to him any word of encouragement, and he indifferent to any. The average jockey is of the newsboy and the shoeblack class, with his attention transferred from a boot or a pile of papers to a horse, possessing native faculties and confidence for either, as his lot may be. The two most marked urchins among these were Roe, the rider of Harry Bassett, and the negro boy who rides Longfellow.

Young Roe is a lean, sharp-chinned, large-eared lad, with a black, piercing eye, quiet and listening manner, a skin broken out with pimples—perhaps from thinness of the blood—and prettily booted; on the whole, a fine, wiry specimen of the fighting urchin, without vanity or assumption of any kind. He is the very apple of McDaniel's eye.

The negro who rides Longfellow has a light mulatto skin and a cherry-shaped face, with bulging flesh under each eye, and bright, radiant negro eyes. He said nothing, like the boy Roe, but waited his turn and studied the situation. Neither was above thirteen years of age. Some of these little whiffets weigh no more than seventy pounds. One boy of the lot was pointed out who had reduced his weight three pounds in eighteen hours. He had wrapped himself to his ears in blankets and walked till that amount of moisture percolated through his pores, and appeared to-day sickly and weak as a new-mother cat. Upon each of these little fellows hundreds or thousands of wagered dollars depended. They were pursued to the weighing spot by a dozen still littler whites or negroes, who peeped in admiringly at the gorgeous vestments and burned to ride and reign like these.

THE GREAT RACE.

Just before one o'clock the sky to the north was full of gold and leaden clouds, lying on the angular mountains there like discolored balloons. A fresh breeze blew the whole length of the main stand, but on the well harrowed track the sun was hot, and the pool-bidders and uneasy strollers on the homestretch carried umbrellas to be comfortable. "It's a noble day to get speed from a horse," was the general exclamation.

A minute or two later a large horse, swaddled in coarse, worn gray and blue blankets, appeared on the track, moving sluggishly, and there was a great wave of involuntary applause. It was Longfellow. All knew his quiet movement, his white hinder feet, his white nose and that unsuspecting, docile look, so admirable in strength or beauty—the unconsciousness of it. Stripped in a few minutes he was mounted submissively by the aforesaid negro, clad in a dirty yellow jacket and a dirty yellow cap. John Harper is evidently no man milliner. Next a common looking sorrel stood on the track, exciting no curiosity—Defender—and then there dashed past, well mounted by the cleanly Roe aforesaid, the changeful chestnut Bassett, swinging his head and neck and looking ugly, like a fair-haired woman under family discipline.

> Do they think they have shorn thee of strength,
> Strong maid with the light yellow hair?
> Their thrones thou shalt topple at length,
> And the kings of the earth shall beware.

Nobody noticed any difference between these horses when they were stripped and ridden, except that Longfellow has the most method, regularity of speed, length and beauty of body and worked with apparently less effort than his light and ardent rival. A literary man might say that they ran this race like Goethe and Schiller, the poets—the one qualified by broad powers, natural and acquired, the other with the fiend spirit of one more desirous and less confident. They had to start a quarter of a mile up the track. They passed the stand with Bassett leading a length, both jockeys quiet, and Longfellow galloping as steadily as the hand of a clock, his brilliant brownish-black color giving him a fine relief to the reddish tint of his junior. They passed up by the half-mile pole with Longfellow apparently a half a length behind; so close were both, indeed, that we could only distinguish them by the black jockey pulling back and the white jockey on Bassett sitting straight. They kept the same unchangeable place till they returned down the quarter stretch, and then the first articulate sounds escaped the people.

"See how Bassett holds his own!"

"The black boy will let Longfellow out in the last half mile!"

Still like parts of the same machine, the fierce contention grew. Nothing could be distinguished from nothing; it was only a ravelled horse's shadow against the eye.

"Bassett wins!" said a reporter, who had been steadily looking through a glass. "Longfellow can't catch him. Bassett wins! Yes! He will win! He does win!"

By this time nothing was to be seen but the run down the homestretch. There was a long belief that the black horse would pass. His rider climbed up in the stirrups and flogged him. He never winced, but did his noblest, methodical, gallant and ineffectual as before. The shout from the stand was that of distress rather than of joy, as Bassett passed the pole and the white jockey turned maliciously round and grinned in the negro rider's face, even under the line which was the boundary of victory.

Description is inadequate. A few caps were in the air. The great mass were in that state described by Sairey Gamp when she said she was "confuged."

THE RACING.

The morning was foggy and clouds obscured the sky, indicating rain; but the curtain was withdrawn and the sun shone brilliantly before noon. The track was very fast, as much labor had been bestowed on it during the morning by the harrow and scraper. Longfellow and Bassett were expected to make great time, and Mr. Wheatly was determined to give his aid by having a fast track for them; and at the start a more favorable prospect never presented itself to horsemen. The racing was all good, but the favorites were beaten and the big betters were heavy losers at the end of the day.

Three races were on the card—the Saratoga Stakes, a half mile dash by two-year-olds; the Saratoga Cup, two miles and a quarter, and a mile and a half dash by three-year-olds.

The entries for the Saratoga Stakes numbered forty-two, twelve of which came to the post. Two of the original entries were made void by the death of James S. Watson. The value of the stakes was $3,000. The starters were Hunter & Travers' chestnut colt Reviler, by Censor, dam Jennie Rose; Hunter & Travers' chestnut colt Saturn, by Planet, dam Jennie H.; John Coar's bay filly The Nurse, by Australian, dam Zone; A. Belmont's chestnut colt Count d'Orsay, by Kentucky, dam Lady Blessington; A. Belmont's chestnut filly Electra, by Kentucky, dam Bernice; F. Morris' chestnut colt by Eclipse, dam Mollie Jackson; D. Swigert's chestnut colt Springbok, by Australian, dam Hester; D. McDaniel & Co.'s chestnut filly Cora Linn, by Lexington, dam Dolly Carter; M. A. Littell's chestnut colt Fellowcraft, by Australian, dam Aerolite; R. W. Walden's chestnut filly Minnie W., by Planet, dam Edina; Leonard Jerome's chestnut colt by Australian, dam Weatherwitch, and O. Bowie's bay colt Catesby, by Eclipse, dam Katie. Springbok had the call in the betting. He did not, however, come up to the expectations of his backers, as he was slow in getting away, and never showed to advantage in the race, being eighth at the finish. Mr. Bowie's Catesby, a colt little thought of in the betting, won a capital race very easily, going through the others on the last quarter as a race horse should, and won by a length and a half, to the great astonishment of the backers of the others. Morris' colt was second; Electra third. The time was good—1:17½, the fastest two-year-old time ever made.

The second race was the great race for the Saratoga Cup, in which there were originally twelve entries, but the night before the race nine of them declared out, leaving Longfellow, Harry Bassett and Defender the only ones willing to struggle for the trophy. Why Defender ran was a puzzle to all who knew his racing capabilities, and they have not solved the question yet. Longfellow was pronounced in faultless condition by his trainer when he appeared on the track, and Harry Bassett was said by Colonel McDaniel to be a much better horse than he was at Long Branch. Longfellow was the favorite in the outside betting at one hundred to thirty-five, and, in some instances, one hundred to thirty. Harry Bassett won the race, Longfellow breaking down in the struggle. He pulled up so lame at the finish that it was with difficulty that he got back to the stand. The cheering that took place after the race exceeded anything we ever heard. This is the fastest race ever run in this country, being two seconds and a half faster than Kentucky's race, when he beat Captain Moore and Rhynodine over the same course on the 8th of August, 1865, which was run in 4:01¼. Harry Bassett won in 3:59. Longfellow will never run again, as the cord running over the joint of the near fore ankle appeared to be severed entirely. He is a broken down horse and will now retire to his home in Kentucky, where he will be given a chance to repeat himself in his posterity.

The third race was for three-year olds, a mile and a half, for which there were four starters, consisting of Hunter & Travers' imported bay colt Buckden, by Lord Clifden, dam Consequence; A. Belmont's gray colt Gray Planet, by Planet, dam Eagless; H. P. McGrath's bay filly Jury, by Lexington, dam Roxana, and T. B. & W. R. Davis' bay colt Piedmont, by Asteroid, dam Fairy. Buckden was a great favorite over the field. Gray Planet made a dead heat with him in 2:42¼. It was not run off, Mr. Belmont and Messrs. Hunter & Travers, the respective owners of Gray Planet and Buckden, concluding to divide the purse and not punish their colts with another trial to test their superiority.

The field	65	100	100	110

THE RACE.

The youngsters gave considerable annoyance to the spectators by their fractiousness in not getting in line. Nearly an hour was wasted before the flag fell. When they were despatched, however, Jerome's colt had the best of it, Reviler second, Electra third, Count d'Orsay fourth, Morris' colt fifth, the others close together. As they ran up the fractional track they raised the dust to a cloud, and shut themselves entirely from view in it, and they were not seen until they came in the regular track beyond the half-mile pole. Then Electra was leading, Jerome's colt second, Reviler third, Morris' colt fourth, the others in a bunch. Those named kept their places around the lower turn and into the homestretch, coming up which many changes took place, Catesby coming to the front one hundred yards from the finish. He won the race by a length and a half; Morris' colt second, one length ahead of Electra; Minnie W. fourth, Count d'Orsay fifth, Reviler sixth, Jerome's colt seventh, Springbok eighth, the Nurse ninth, Cora Linn tenth, Fellowcraft eleventh. Time 1:17½, the fastest time by two-year-olds.

THE WINNER.

Catesby is 15.3, a dark bay, well formed, with a racing appearance. He was sired by Eclipse, dam Katie, by Two Bits; granddam Glen Mary, by Steele; great granddam Ninon d'Enclos, by Thorton's Rattler—a very well bred colt, running back through the good old Virginia strains. He will be a race horse or his look belies him, as his style of running is vigorous and untrammelled, and his stride immense.

THE SECOND RACE.

THE SARATOGA CUP, for all ages; $50 entrance, play or pay; $1,000 added; two and a quarter miles.

D. McDaniel's ch. c. Harry Bassett, by Lexington, dam Canary Bird, 4 years old; Roe	1
John Harper's br. h. Longfellow, by Leamington, dam Nantura; Sample	2
John Morrissey's ch. c. Defender, by John Morgan, 5 years old; Gilpatrick	3

Time, 3:59.

THE BETTING.

Longfellow	$300	610	775	340	400	620
Harry Bassett	100	200	250	100	100	200
Defender	10	12	20	12	27	27

THE RACE.

When Longfellow and Harry Bassett appeared, they were received with applause from the stand, and as the former galloped up in front of the stand the cheering was resumed. The assemblage were very nervous, but there was no delay in getting the horses away. They soon moved down to the quarter pole, and at the first attempt were despatched to a capital start. Harry Bassett soon took the lead, and as he came rattling up the homestretch to the stand he led one length, Longfellow three lengths in front of Defender. The time of the first quarter of a mile was twenty-five and a half seconds. Going around the upper turn, Longfellow went up to Bassett's saddle girth, but at the quarter pole they were nose and tail. Time of the half-mile, 52¼ seconds. Defender at this time was out of the race and not worthy of further notice. Going down the backstretch Longfellow again went up to Harry's saddle girth, but at the half-mile pole fell back again. The three-quarters of a mile were run in 1:16¾. Harry Bassett led half a length around the lower turn and at the three-quarter pole. The time was 1:45¼ for the mile. Longfellow then ran up to Bassett as they came up the homestretch, and, passing under the wire, they were both doing their best and running at a tremendous rate of speed, head and head. The mile and a quarter was run in 2:08½, which is the fastest time ever made for that distance. They did not relax in their flight around the upper turn, Longfellow gaining gradually until he reached Bassett's shoulders at the quarter pole, the mile and a half being run in 2:35¾. Leaving this point Longfellow faltered, and he had to be urged. It was here, it is supposed, that Longfellow's near ankle gave way, but still he ran up again without flinching, and was at Harry's saddle girth at the half-mile. Longfellow ran up closer, and was at Bassett's shoulders on the lower turn and as they passed the three-quarter pole, finishing the two miles in 3:30, the fastest two miles ever run. A bullet fired at one jockey would have hit the other, so near together were the horses. Coming up the homestretch the contest was close until near the furlong pole, where Longfellow began to succumb, and his jockey commenced using the whip. The horse struggled on, but could not keep up with Harry Bassett, and the latter passed under the wire a winner by a length, making the two miles and a quarter in the fastest time ever recorded, 3:59. Defender was beaten nearly a quarter of a mile.

THE WINNER.

Harry Bassett is four years old, by Lexington, dam Canary Bird; second dam, Panola by imp. Ainderly; third dam, imp. Sweetbriar by Recovery; fourth dam, imp. Primrose by Comus; fifth dam, Cowslip by Cockfighter; sixth dam, Brown Javelin by Javelin; seventh dam, Young Maiden by Highflyer; eighth dam, Maiden by Matchem; ninth dam, Mr. Pratt's celebrated mare by Squirt; tenth dam, Lot's dam by Mogul; eleventh dam, Camilla by Bay Bolton; twelfth dam, Old Lady (Starling's dam) by Pullein's chestnut Arabian; thirteenth dam by Rockwood; fourteenth dam by Bustler. In color Harry is a darker shade than was his grandsire old Boston, though he resembles him more than any of his descendants. He has two white heels and a star, is 16½ hands high, but so symmetrical in his build that a person would not think him over 15½ hands, until standing beside him. He has that wonderful depth of chest which so characterized his grandsire, also the same flat or "slab-sided" barrel and large hips, with powerful loins, stifles and thighs, the muscles being well let into large, strong hocks. He is closely ribbed up, and, unlike Boston, is a handsome horse, being highly finished, with a fine head, well set on a pretty tapering neck, and with gamecock throttle and jaws wide apart. He was bred on the Alexander farm at Woodburn, Ky., and purchased for Colonel McDaniel for $315.

HIS PERFORMANCES.

LONGFELLOW'S CONDITION AFTER THE RACE.

I have just returned from the stable of John Harper and have seen the broken down horse Longfellow, and gathered all the facts possible about his defeat. Harper told me that as his horse wheeled to start in the race he struck his foreleg with the hind one on the heel and grabbed the plate, which, he says, nearly threw Longfellow down, but seeing him run on rapidly afterwards without showing any signs of injury, he supposed that nothing material had occurred.

When the horse stopped at the end of the contest he was very lame and came near falling at every step as he hobbled to the stand and thence to the stable, where it was discovered that his plate was doubled up under his foot and that his ankle was sprained and the back sinew broken. The horse had the mark of the hind foot on his quarter at the heel an inch and a half in length—enough to have cut half of the heel off—and the ankle was swollen to an immense size. Longfellow would not put his foot to the ground, but held it up as if in great misery, the muscles of the forearm being in constant agitation. The horse, in the opining of horsemen, is irretrievably ruined as a race horse and will never again be able to contend on the turf.

THE THIRD RACE.

PURSE $600, for three-year-olds; one and a half mile; winner of Belmont, Ladies' or Travers' Stakes excluded. Colts, 110 lbs.; fillies, 107 lbs.

A. Belmont's g. c. Gray Planet, by Planet, dam Eagless, Gradwell	0
Hunter & Travers' b. c. Buckden, by Lord Clifden, dam Consequence, McAdams	0
H. P. McGrath's b. f. Jury, by Lexington, dam Roxana, Combs	3
T. B. & W. R. Davis' br. c. Piedmont, by Asteroid, dam Fairy, Henry	4

Time, 2:42¼.

THE BETTING.

Buckden	$300	530	600	600	870	650
Gray Planet	105	185	240	280	375	390
Jury	40	75	100	105	120	150
Piedmont	65	100	120	115	225	130

THE RACE.

Buckden was first away, Piedmont second, Jury third, Gray Planet fourth. As they passed around the lower turn Buckden showed the way, Gray Planet second, Piedmont third, Jury fourth. At the three-quarter pole Piedmont had his head in front, Buckden second, Jury third, Gray Planet fourth, his jockey having taken him in hand to make a waiting race. The three leading horses were abreast as they ran up the homestretch, and passing under the string Buckden led by a neck, Piedmont and Jury head and head, eight lengths in front of Gray Planet. Going around the upper turn the leading trio were parallel, eight lengths ahead of Gray Planet. They were in line at the quarter pole, Gray Planet far behind. Going down the backstretch there was not the slightest advantage between Buckden, Piedmont and Jury, but here Gray Planet began to shut up the daylight, which he gradually accomplished. At the half-mile pole the three were still running head and head, Gray Planet four lengths behind. As they entered the lower turn Buckden began to show his head in front, and Gray Planet shut up all the daylight while going to the three-quarter pole. As the leading trio swung into the homestretch Gray Planet made a dash, and his jockey seeing there was room between Buckden and the inside fence pulled his horse in there, and in less time than it takes to tell it was on even terms with Buckden. A fierce and exciting struggle ensued, whip and spur were freely used, and after a brilliant race they landed at the wire head and head—so parallel that the judges decided a dead heat. Jury was half a dozen lengths behind them, and about as far in front of Piedmont.

THE FOURTH DAY'S RACING—POOL SELLING ON THE EVENTS.

There will be three races to-morrow, the first a mile dash, with three entries, in which Kingfisher is the favorite, selling for $400, Alarm bringing $225 and Fadladeen $50.

The second is a selling race, which has five entries. Buckden sold for $210, Sanford $100, Mary Louise $60, Cadence $55, Allie Hunt $10.

The third race will be a dash of two miles. Tubman sold for $500, Lochiel for $225, Susan Ann for $75 and John Merryman for $40.

TROTTING AT SARATOGA.

Huntress and Topsy the Winners—Capital Time on a Half-Mile Track.

SARATOGA, July 16, 1872.

Two trots came off this afternoon at Glen Mitchell, the first between Alden Goldsmith's bay mare Huntress and Peter Manee's bay stallion W. H. Allen, mile heats, best three in five, in harness, for a purse of $500. Four heats were trotted, Huntress winning the first, second and fourth heats in capital time on a half-mile track.

The second trot was a match of $200, mile heats, in harness, between Topsy and Young Thorn. Topsy won the race.

THE CLEVELAND RACES.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 16, 1872.

The second annual meeting of the Cleveland Club was to have commenced this morning, but heavy rain set in early in the forenoon, and showers prevailed all the afternoon. At one o'clock the following notice was issued by the President of the Club, Mr. John Tod:—

"The races of this day are postponed until Wednesday, the 17th inst.; those of Wednesday postponed till Thursday, 18th inst., and the races of Thursday postponed to Saturday, 20th inst., at ten o'clock A. M. precisely. Goldsmith Maid, American Girl and Lucy will positively trot on Friday, the 19th inst."

There was a large crowd at the track and considerable disappointment was felt. There is great interest in the races for Friday. Most of the railroads have issued half-fare tickets for that day, and a large attendance is anticipated from all parts of the country. Goldsmith Maid, Lucy and American Girl are here in fine condition.

TURF NOTES.

The Utica Park Association has completed its mile track and buildings, which are second to none in this country. The track is an admirable grade, and situated about a mile to the east of the city, on a broad plateau rising to the south of the valley of the Mohawk, commanding an extended view of its magnificent scenery. The grounds are approached by street cars and by steamboats on the Erie Canal, in twelve minutes from the centre of the city. The association is composed of some of the most prominent gentlemen in the central portion of the State, whose names are a guarantee that its meetings will be conducted in a high-toned manner, and free from the objections that are occasionally met with on the track. Utica being situated midway between New York and Buffalo, on the New York Central Railroad, not three hours distant from Saratoga and one hour only from Sharon, Richfield, Vernia and Chittenango Springs and Trenton Falls, promises a large attendance at what, in the future, must be one of the most popular racing associations of the State. Entries for the large purses offered, aggregating $33,000, will close on the 27th instant. Nominations must be addressed to Alexander Buell, Herald Buildings, Utica, N. Y. The meeting takes place August 13, 14, 15 and 16.

Jackson's bay gelding Mystery and Sammis' bay gelding George Gillett are matched to trot two miles and repeat, in harness, this afternoon, at the Prospect Park Fair Grounds.

REVIEWING THE AWARDS.

Meeting of the Contract Commissioners—John Bryan's Stowe Pavement Contract—Was the Ordinance Forged, and Who Committed the Forgery?

Ex-Judges Sutherland and Hooper C. Van Vorst and Mr. D. R. Jaques, the Commissioners appointed to pass upon the awards made by the Mayor and Commonalty of the city by virtue of chapter 580 of the Laws of 1872, resumed their investigations yesterday afternoon, at half-past four o'clock, in the rooms of the Board of Aldermen. At the opening of the session Commissioners Sutherland and Van Vorst were in attendance. Mr. Jaques entered a few moments later and the session was formally opened. The first call on the calendar considered was John Bryan, who claims an award of contract for paving with the stone pavement, White, Fifteenth, Twenty-sixth, Twenty-seventh, Twenty-eighth, Thirtieth and Fortieth streets, bids for which were opened November 23, 1870.

The argument in the case was resumed by Mr. Shepard, counsel for property owners. He quoted from the law, which, he said, provides for advertising in all the corporation newspapers, and declared that the ordinances were not published at all. The law requiring the advertising of bids must be published ten days before the giving out of the bid. Counsel asserted that the law had not been complied with in this particular.

The counsel for the Comptroller declared that there was no legal advertisement of the ordinance. If not properly advertised, under the ruling in the Douglas case, there was no ordinance at all.

Judge Sutherland stated that he was free to say that he thought the advertising of the ordinance amounted to nothing. The question we are to discuss is whether there was fraud in the award. The city cannot retreat from an award, and the spirit of the law is that the city must fulfil the obligations assumed by its officers.

Mr. Calvin, counsel for Bryan, stated that if the case was reopened he was prepared to put in further evidence, although they had submitted the case upon its merits.

Mr. Jaques stated that the question now raised in this argument was whether there was an award at all.

Mr. Shepard denounced the job as a fraud, inasmuch as it was not advertised in all the papers. It was a Guy Fawkes fraud of the Common Council to deceive the property owners. The evidence of the Mayor showed that the ordinance contained a forgery, and that this is not the ordinance he approved. Therefore a forged ordinance is not an ordinance, and there can therefore be no ordinance. The counsel continued his argument at great length, but his effort seemed to have little influence upon the Commission, who frequently interrupted him and corrected his misconception of their powers in the premises.

Mr. Colvin, counsel for Mr. Bryan, said that a complete misrepresentation of facts in regard to the evidence of the Mayor on the subject of the alleged forgery of the ordinance existed. The Commission were visibly pleased when the argument closed, and soon after adjourned.

A COFFEE CONSPIRACY.

Two Employes of a Coffee Warehouse Employ a Drummer and Sell the Stock on Their Own Account—A Very Quiet Operation.

On Friday last Charles Vattier, a Frenchman in the employ of Marshal S. Driggs, 278 to 290 South street, noticed the foreman of the establishment, James Boardman, removing the marks from a number of bags of coffee and then sending them down the elevator to the walk. Vattier asked what the marks were removed for, and if the coffee had been checked on the books. The foreman answered that it was all right. The coffee was placed on the cart and driven off. Vattier mentioned the circumstance to Mr. Driggs, who examined the books and found no record of it. When the cartman, James Meehan, returned he was asked where he left the last load of coffee. He answered that he was directed by the foreman to take it to the house of Fisher & Lansing, corner of Duane and Greenwich street. Messrs. Fisher & Lansing were then visited, and said that they had bought the coffee from a man named Dennis Shay. They received ten bags, or 1,896 lbs., and paid him $388 68 for it. They bought it from sample. Messrs. Fisher & Lansing also stated that they had been in the habit of buying coffee from the said Shay. James Boardman, the foreman, and Richard Reading, the coffee cleaner and sampler of the house, who was also concerned in the shipping of the ten bags, were arrested by Detectives Shalney and Jarboe, of the seventh precinct, who also secured Dennis Shay. They were all brought before Judge Scott, at Essex Market Police Court, yesterday. Shay, who is a junk dealer at 75 Henry street, admitted selling the coffee to Fisher & Lansing by sample, but said he was employed by a broker named Hays. Mr. Driggs stated to the Judge that he thought it was only one of a long series of similar operations. Judge Scott held them all for trial.

THE WHISKEY MEN STARTLED.

Raid by Supervisor Dutcher's Officers—Capture of a Still and Its Effects in the Fourth Ward.

The energy displayed by Mr. Silas B. Dutcher, Supervisor of Internal Revenue, has been the means of putting a complete stop to illicit distillation in Brooklyn; and the fact of such vigilance on his part in the City of Churches has emboldened the operators in "poteen" to try their luck in New York, with a prospect of more success. Yesterday morning, having received intelligence that a still was in operation in the Fourth ward, Mr. Dutcher detailed some of his force to visit the neighborhood of Dover and Roosevelt streets, one of the worst parts of the Fourth ward. The efforts of the officers were crowned with success. At 286½ Front street, rear building, was found the following property, which was at once seized by Marshal B. Blake, Collector of the Thirty-second street district—viz., one large copper still, firmly enclosed in brickwork, running whiskey at the rate of forty gallons an hour; about two thousand gallons of molasses mash ready to be charged into the still, four barrels of rum, five barrels of molasses and all the tools and accoutrements necessary to produce liquor.

The building in which these operations were conducted is a four story edifice, and, judging from the complete manner in which it was fitted up, it is fair to presume that the owners had located themselves with a view to permanency.

Under section 44 of act of July 20, 1868, the real estate and building are liable to confiscation, as well as the distillery property captured therein. The United States Marshal has already taken possession of the seized effects, and the District Attorney will at once commence proceedings for forfeiture. The following officers of Mr. Dutcher's force assisted at the above seizure:—Assistant Assessors J. B. Wass, David Irish, John H. Clyne, F. L. Tucker, Alfred Vanderwerken, Robert Hunt and William H. Whitlock.

BRUTAL MURDER IN CANADA.

A Sea Captain Murders a "Crimp" with an Axe—Excitement of the Populace—Great Efforts Made to Lynch the Assassin.

QUEBEC, July 16, 1872.

A horrible murder was committed here to-day by Captain Pelletior, of the bark Rivoli. The Rivoli is lying off the city, and the captain, wishing to land, was rowed ashore by two of the seamen belonging to the vessel. When they landed the men were approached by "crimps." An altercation arose, and one of the sailors being struck, the captain seized an axe, and with one blow almost severed the head of James Dillon, who was not the assailant, from his body. The wounded man died in less than twenty minutes, being taken immediately to the nearest police station.

The murderer was at once secured, and it was with difficulty the constables were able to prevent the crowd from lynching him. An inquest was held forthwith, and Pelletior, being declared a murderer by the Coroner's jury, was lodged in jail.

LORD CARNARVON'S OPENING ADDRESS

Lord CARNARVON in his opening address said he need make little preface in stating what were the objects and history of this Conference Its object was to obtain information, to compare the different prison systems of different countries, to discuss the principles and details upon which those systems were based, and to arrive if possible at some general conclusions. Its history was the history of a remarkable agreement by the peoples and governments of many civilized countries on a subject which had been most justly considered of the highest importance The difficulties in the way of such an agreement being come to were proverbial, for there were the prejudices and difficulties of race, language, institutions, character and climate, but with all these difficulties facing them he did not despair of attaining on the part of those present some general agreement in respect to the subject upon which they had met He was encouraged in this hope because nations widely different in general characteristics had thrown themselves heartily into this discussion Almost every European State had given the Congress its support France, embarrassed by a thousand difficulties, had given her assistance Italy, true to the history of her own great jurists, took her part Belgium had, among others, accredited one of her most distinguished statesmen to the Congress Holland with the sound sense which the English were delighted to believe was a common quality to both countries, was interested also in the Conference Switzerland, Denmark, all inquiring and all embracing Germany, and, lastly, the United States—a country which, by numberless experiments, had already contributed so much to the common knowledge, drawing with them to the other side of the Atlantic the South American States—were all represented, and had accepted England as the place of meeting The government had refused the Congress assistance and recognition and, he understood, had even refused official information He was bound to express his regret at this refusal, and still more at the grounds upon which that refusal was made. He denied that this Congress was to be classed with ordinary voluntary associations, and he was of opinion that there was a precedent for government support in the vote given to the Statistical Conference The recognition of this Congress would have been a graceful acknowledgment to those governments which had spared neither time nor money to send information on this subject, but, much as he regretted the absence of governmental or official recognition he should not regret it if it were to be taken as an illustration of the sturdy English independence of official control in the same way as our prisons were managed by unpaid magistrates, our semi criminal industrial schools by persons interested in them, and as the Discharged Prisoners' Aid Societies were managed—upheld by private liberality and support Though the government reaped the fruits of these labors they were given none the less ungrudgingly, and if the foreign guests would only accept the refusal of the government to work in this Congress in this view he would give them a hearty though unofficial welcome He hoped that when the visitors returned to their own country they would carry with them some not unpleasing recollections of their stay, and whatever might be the results of the conference on prison discipline and criminals he hoped one result of the gathering would be to strengthen the ties of comity and good will which ought to bind together the whole commonwealth of nations. He proceeded to say that while thus bidding them welcome he could not pass over in silence the name of one who would be missed there, a man whose name and long experience gave his name more than an English reputation Many were present whom all were rejoiced to see, many were absent who could be spared, but in the death of the late Recorder of Birmingham was lost one who would have received from all Englishmen, whether they came from any part of this or the other side of the Atlantic, an honored reception. The noble chairman then passed in review the subjects to be considered in the Congress—criminal law, criminal procedure and preventive police, &c. He said that in matters like these he knew it was an invidious task to suggest a limitation of subjects and points to be discussed, but he would say this—the more diffused such investigations were the less likely they were to be fruitful in practical results, and, therefore, he urged that this Congress would act wisely in restricting rather than in enlarging the scope of their inquiries. He then proceeded to enter upon the subjects of punishment and the repression of crime in a very long and eloquent speech, in which he dwelt upon the attention which the British people and the British colonies had given to the subject of the management of the prisons. He referred to the measures passed by the British Legislature in 1864-65, and later still, and he said that while, on the one hand, our prisons were not what they were when Howard commenced his labors, they were not palaces, as Voltaire had described them They had passed through the two extremes, and now, while they gave the essentials for health and life, and facilities for the exercise of moral and religious duties, they gave that disagreeable punishment which it was intended the criminal should suffer He spoke as to the necessity of uniformity of practice in our jails, and complained that there was a shortness of official inspection in regard to them—a point which the Legislature ought to remedy, for it should know that it was not sufficient to make good laws, but it should provide for the enforcement of those laws by giving the requisite machinery (Cheers) In this country we pretended to control nearly two hundred jails scattered over England Scotland and Wales by only two inspectors and if there were shortcomings it was owing to the want of machinery to do the work (Hear hear) He referred to the endeavors now being made to stop criminality at its source by means of industrial schools and went on to express his opinion of the uselessness of repeated reconvictions to prevent crime He pointed to the case of Liverpool, where 32 persons were last year committed and these had been in prison no less than fifteen times each These he said belonged to the hopelessly incorrigible class for whom the prison had lost its terrors and to those crime was a natural atmosphere The only way to deal with these was by imprisonment for life, and however hard it might sound he believed that would be the proper way to deter persistence in a criminal life He hoped that Congress might find time to discuss the subjects connected with reformatories, penitentiaries discharged prisoners' aid societies Entering into the question of prison punishments he urged that authority should be given for exercising unquestionable severity of punishment and also that means should be given for the moral improvement of the prisoner, the one was a duty to society the other a duty to a fellow creature He urged too, that the work given to a prisoner should not be selected for its profitable character to the prison or because it was pleasing to the prisoner, but that work should be selected which was really a punishment Above all the prisoner should not be allowed comforts which an honest laborer could not obtain by hard work, he should be debarred from all enjoyments of any kind and should under all circumstances be made to feel that he was suffering punishment The noble lord resumed his seat amid loud applause

LORD HARROWBY'S SPEECH—FIRST DAY'S BUSINESS

Lord HARROWBY said it was only a short time before that he was informed that he was expected to take part in this proceeding and he had to take upon himself the laborious task of giving a welcome—cordially welcoming, as it were, to those eminent men from many different countries, who had honored Englishmen by coming among them (Cheers) The part that Englishmen had to take on this occasion was a difficult one. They could not give that greeting to their visitors which would have been accorded to them in other countries Any other country would have given a national reception to the visitors in a manner worthy of the work they had in hand but Englishmen had to stand as humble apologists and ask their visitors to kindly overlook the official coolness of those islanders who were worthy followers of the inhospitable Britons of old (Laughter) This was no new reputation for we were so often called barbarous Englishmen that we were used to it (Laughter) Perhaps however beyond the official skin would be found a warmness of heart and during their stay the visitors might find some feature they liked in the English character but impressions were not easily removed When it was seen that in Italy a royal commission had sat since November on this subject that France had delegated fifteen members of the Assembly to consider it and they had sat twice a week for four months, and that every continental country except Portugal, with America, South America, even Chile, had worked in the matter and had done something it made England very much ashamed to find that the State had done nothing (Hear) He then spoke of the great improvements in prisons in his recollection, and expressed the hope that the Congress would have the effect of still further diminishing crime His lordship concluded by moving That the delegates from the Courts of Quarter Sessions benches of magistrates, visiting justices public societies and institutions and the English members of the Congress generally beg to offer their sincere welcome to the official delegates and other foreign members from the various countries of the world who are present on this occasion and to congratulate the Congress on the completeness and importance of the official representation from nearly all civilized States "

Sir CHARLES ADDERLEY seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously.

Baron VON HOLTZENDORFF, in response said that England had the hospitality to give shelter to expelled kings and republicans and was firm enough to protest against having expatriated outcasts thrown upon her shores He went on to say that the first feeling of a foreigner on coming to England was that he was alone—that he was afloat on the ocean by himself, but he no sooner came into contact with England s people than that feeling was wholly dissipated He thanked the English for their reception

The Hon Mr CHANDLER, of the United States, then addressed the meeting, and said that he was told beforehand that he was to speak but he no sooner came into that fine old hall which was associated with the history of his family than his thoughts vanished He proceeded to speak of the interest taken in the subject of prison treatment in his State

Mr BERDEN also spoke in response to the vote of welcome

Mr G W HASTINGS then moved a vote of thanks to the Benchers for the use of the hall, and took the opportunity of saying that the government had given some information, though scanty but it had shown an interest by sending Captain Du Cane, and Mr Bruce would himself attend one day

Lord LICHFIELD seconded the motion which was carried and was acknowledged by Mr J ANDERSON, Q C

Dr MANNING proposed, and His Excellency M VAN DE WEYER seconded a vote of thanks to the chairman

Mr HIBBERT M. P , interposed with some remarks upon the absence of government control and he thought this was a subject of congratulation. He hoped to see some of the members of the government present but only on an equality with their fellow Englishmen. And while he acknowledged that we had much to learn from foreigners, they might learn something from us.

The vote was carried and was acknowledged

The meeting then adjourned until this morning.

THE FRANCO-GERMAN CONVENTION.

Terms and Mode of Payment of the Remaining Indebtedness of France to Germany.

The following is a translation of the text of the convention, signed on Saturday, the 29th ult , between France and Germany —

The President of the French Republic and His Majesty the Emperor of Germany having resolved to settle by special convention the execution of the third and fourth articles of the Preliminary Treaty of Versailles of February 26, 1871, and of the seventh article of the Treaty of Peace of Frankfort-on the Main of May 10, 1871, have appointed for that purpose, as their plenipotentiaries, the President of the French Republic, M. Charles de Rémusat, Minister of Foreign Affairs, and His Majesty the Emperor of Germany, Count Harry von Arnim, his Ambassador to the French Republic who, having come to an agreement upon the terms and mode of payment of the sum of three milliards due from France to Germany, and also as to the gradual evacuation of the French departments occupied by the German army, and after having exchanged their full powers, which were found to be in good and proper form, have agreed as follows —

ARTICLE 1 —France undertakes to pay the said sum of three milliards in the following manner—1. One half milliard of francs in two months after the exchange of ratifications of this present convention 2. One half milliard of francs on February 1 1873. 3. A milliard of francs on March 1, 1874. 4. A milliard of francs on March 1, 1875 France may, however anticipate the payments falling due on the 1st of February 1873 1st of March 1874, and 1st of March, 1875, by paying instalments, which must amount at least to 100 000 000 but which may extend to the total amount of the sums falling due at the periods before mentioned In the event of any payment by anticipation the French government shall inform the German government one month previously

ART 2.—The provisions of the third line of the seventh article of the Treaty of Peace of May 10 1871, as also those of the separate protocols of October 12 1871 remain in force for all payments that may be made by virtue of the preceding article

ART 3—His Majesty the Emperor of Germany will cause his troops to evacuate the Departments of the Marne and the Haute Marne fifteen days after the payment of one half milliard the Departments of the Ardennes and the Vosges fifteen days after the payment of the second milliard, the Departments of the Meuse and Meurthe et Moselle, as also the arrondissement of Belfort, fifteen days after the payment of the third milliard and of the interest remaining due

ART 4.—After the payment of two milliards France reserves to herself the right of furnishing to Germany for the third milliard financial guarantees, which in conformity with article 3 of the Preliminaries of Versailles, shall be substituted for territorial guarantees if thus accepted and recognized as sufficient by Germany

ART 5—The interest of five per cent upon the sums mentioned in the first article payable from the date of March 2 1872 shall cease in proportion as the said sums shall have been paid either at the dates fixed by the present Convention or prior to those dates, according to the provisions in the first article The interest upon the amounts remaining unpaid shall continue to be payable on March 2 of each year The last payment of interest shall be made at the same time as the payment of the third milliard

ART 6—In the event of the number of the German troops in occupation being diminished as the occupation becomes successively limited, the cost of maintenance of the said troops shall be reduced proportionately with their numbers.

ART 7—Until the complete evacuation of the French territory the departments successively evacuated in conformity with article 2 shall be neutralized in a military sense and must not receive any other bodies of troops than the garrisons which shall be requisite for the maintenance of order France shall construct no new fortifications in them nor extend those already existing His Majesty the Emperor of Germany on his part engages not to construct in the occupied departments any other fortified works besides those now existing there

ART 8.—His Majesty the Emperor of Germany reserves to himself the right of reoccupying the evacuated departments in the event of non-execution of the engagements undertaken by the present Convention.

ART 9—The ratifications of the present treaty by the President of the French Republic on the one part and by His Majesty the Emperor of Germany on the other shall be exchanged at Versailles within the space of ten days, or sooner if it be practicable

In faith of which the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the present document and affixed to it the seal of their arms.

Done at Versailles, June 29, 1872. REMUSAT.
D'ARNIM.

There were 103 cases on the calendar of the Special Sessions Court yesterday morning, all of which were disposed of by Judges Hogan, Ledwith and Scott in the usual expeditious manner. Of these cases 58 were for assault and battery, 9 for cruelty to animals, 15 for violations of the Health code, and 28 for petty larceny.

The Gold Market begins to show signs of the usual summer rise in the premium, be it this time more or less. Yesterday the price touched 114⅝, or within a trifle of the highest in nearly a year. The movement is this time helped by a wealthy clique, whose existence and intentions have already considerably agitated the placid Mr. Boutwell. So far his resistance has been only a silent watching of the scheme.

American Talent in London.—A cable despatch informs us of the appearance of Miss Clara Louise Kellogg on Monday night at Her Majesty's Opera, Drury Lane, in the opera of "La Traviata." Her success was so great that she was recalled five times before the curtain, and received the warmest congratulations of the Prince and Princess of Wales. Such honors rarely fall to the lot of a prima donna, and conclusively show that American talent is bound to make its way to the foremost ranks in art as well as in everything else.

Our Australasian Despatches.—The news from Australasia, telegraphed to the Herald from San Francisco, is quite interesting and reassuring of a solid, substantial, healthy colonial advance. Valuable mines of copper had been discovered, the yield of gold was fair and the wool trade remunerative. There were politics and official aspirations and party manœuvres inevitably; but the governments control a people who are still young in the exercise of the franchise, and consequently able to bear a good deal of that sort of thing without injury to the general interest.

Comments of the English Press on the Herald Livingstone Expedition.—We publish on another page of this morning's issue the comments of the British press on the discovery of Dr. Livingstone at Ujiji by Mr. Stanley, the Herald's African Explorer. With characteristic British fairness, the principal journals of the English metropolis acknowledge the grand work achieved by Stanley in carrying out the mission entrusted to him in the finding of Livingstone, and in furnishing the intelligence that the brave old man still lives and still labors to solve the problem which for centuries has baffled the scientific skill of the savans, the explorers and the travellers who made the source of the Nile the study of their lives.

Revolution in Fiji.—The Australasian mail at San Francisco brings intelligence that the Fiji Islands are "undergoing incipient revolution," and that the existing government is powerless against it. The despatch does not state whether the anticipated change applies to the matter of the every-day dietary of the natives or whether it is merely political and of an anti-dynastic tendency. This is a very serious omission on the part of the news reporter. If the trouble of the Fijians is merely gastronomic or of a homely culinary nature, we have nothing to do with it. If it is for freedom, independence, democracy and self-rule, we, of course, sympathize with its promoters, and the American government will, no doubt, accept accomplished facts should the people win, notwithstanding the executive embarrassment which may ensue in Washington on account of our having already a treaty of amity and friendship with King Thakambou—who may be deposed by this time, for all we know to the contrary—confirmed by the signet of the great whale's tooth which is duly suspended in the State Department.

The North Carolina Election—Its Probable Result and the Effect on the Presidential Contest.

The State election for Governor and Legislature which will take place in North Carolina on the 1st of August will be the first gun of this Presidential campaign, in being the first election after the final shaping of the Presidential contest between the supporters of the administration and the opposition elements of the country. The March election in New Hampshire, the April election in Connecticut and the more recent election in Oregon all indicated in their results that General Grant was still strong among the people; but these elections will not apply to the actual political situation, because within a week it has been wonderfully changed. The democratic party, in union with the liberal republicans, with republican candidates for President and Vice President, and with the Cincinnati resolutions for its platform, has indeed taken a new departure, and a departure, too, which cuts loose the party in its future policy from the dead issues of the past and brings it into the foreground upon the living issues of the day.

Accordingly the results of none of the State elections of this year preceding the late Baltimore Convention will apply as indicating the strength of General Grant against the general opposition ticket of Greeley and Brown. Neither can the approaching North Carolina election be regarded as a test between the rival republican candidates, inasmuch as the nominations of both political parties in that State were made before the acceptance of Greeley at Baltimore and without regard to the union that has since taken place between the liberal republicans and the democracy. The situation is the same as it would be if New York were called upon to vote to-morrow on candidates for some local offices who had been put into the field respectively by the democratic and republican parties before the Presidential nominations had been made and without reference to the division in the republican ranks. It is possible that the votes of some republicans might be controlled by consideration of the more important Presidential issue in the future; but the probability is that the party would adhere to their nominees for local offices without reference to their subsequent action in the Presidential contest. Nevertheless, as General Grant represents the regular republican organization, and is the standard-bearer of that party, it is of vital consequence to him to carry the North Carolina election, and hence we find the administration party working with a degree of industry and liberality in its electioneering appliances seldom witnessed in a mere State election since that in Pennsylvania of 1856, upon which it was known on all sides in advance the issue of that Presidential contest depended. In 1868 General Grant carried North Carolina by nine thousand majority; in 1870 the democrats recovered the State by five thousand majority. In 1871 they lost the State again, by a majority of over nine thousand against them, upon the question of a constitutional convention, which involved, as it was understood, the overthrow of the whole work of the reconstruction of the State in the event of the success of the democrats. Hence their defeat. Now all this is changed, and with Mr. Greeley as President no man can fear the overthrow of Southern reconstruction or of any of the fixed facts of the situation as accepted by the democratic party.

The chances of the election, however, are all in favor of the success of the regular republican ticket next month. The administration is using its power energetically to influence the result, and the State is being canvassed very thoroughly on that side, while the democrats appear to be singularly apathetic and almost disposed to suffer the election to go by default. The republican candidate for the Vice Presidency, Senator Wilson; the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Boutwell, and other prominent administration politicians, are engaged in stumping the State, and all the employés of the national government are at work on the same side. The unusually large amount of money appropriated for certain federal purposes in North Carolina just at this moment excites the suspicion that eloquence will not be the only means used to influence the voters; and the people of the State are miserably poor under the policy to which they have been subjected since the close of the rebellion. The census of 1870 shows that there were then nearly four hundred thousand negroes out of a population of a little over one million, and the colored citizens are relied upon, almost to a man, to vote for the republican State ticket against the straight-out democratic candidates, whatever may be their action in the Presidential election, when the fight will be between two republicans. The result can, therefore, scarcely be regarded as doubtful, and it is only a matter of surprise that the administration republicans should evince the doubt and apprehension manifested in the extraordinary precautions they are taking to escape defeat. Their anxiety no doubt arises from the conviction that a single overthrow in the skirmishes preceding the battle would render their defeat almost a matter of certainty. Probably the apparent apathy of the democrats is owing to the absence of a similar feeling of responsibility, since no one would regard the defeat of the straight-out democracy in this State contest as destructive of the Presidential chances of Mr. Greeley, this local battle having been joined on old democratic candidates and issues before the meeting of the Baltimore Convention.

There is one feature of this North Carolina canvass which, unfortunately, threatens to disfigure the whole Presidential campaign—the apprehended attempt to combine the negroes together in a solid mass as men whose interests are adverse to those of the white citizens of the State. In North Carolina the negroes number two-fifths of the whole population of the State, there being six thousand white to four thousand colored inhabitants. In some of the Southern States the negroes are actually in the majority, while in others they are numerous enough, with the help of a fraction of the whites, to control the elections. The South is thus threatened with the political rule of freedmen not released from bondage a sufficient length of time to have enabled them to obtain education and to become intelligent electors, united with the worst class of white citizens—the men who for political purposes would excite a conflict of races in the South. The Herald condemns such a selfish and unpatriotic policy, no matter by what party it may be attempted, and it is to be hoped that Senator Wilson, Secretary Boutwell and the other Presidential orators who are now stumping North Carolina will refrain from any exciting appeals to the colored voters as a class in their efforts to induce them to adhere to the republican party. The negroes are a simple-minded and confiding people, and they should be taught that their interests are identical with those of the whites in securing an honest and efficient State government. It is as impolitic and unchristian as it is unnecessary to keep alive in their breasts the old prejudices against their former masters; it is as dangerous as it is false to tell them that their white fellow citizens are prepared, at any moment they may have the power, to strip them of the freedom and the privileges conferred upon them by the war and to reconsign them to a state of servitude. The attempt to set race against race is even more reprehensible than those proscriptive Know Nothing tenets of whose mischievous tendency, it is to be hoped, Senator Wilson has long since become convinced. The appeals Greeley and his friends are making to the Irish as a distinct nationality are bad enough, but are less objectionable than the effort to control the negro vote of the South by exciting the fears and passions of the colored race, inasmuch as the Irish are natural politicians and are shrewd enough to follow their own judgment, while the Southern blacks are ignorant, inexperienced and credulous and their prejudices may be worked upon to a dangerous extent.

There is, besides, no real necessity for any such questionable policy to aid Grant in the South. The Southern blacks are well disposed toward the administration and have a reverence for the profession of which General Grant is the acknowledged head in merit as well as in rank. The probability is that they will vote the administration republican ticket without persuasion, and their united support in North Carolina, joined with the strength of the federal office-holders in that State, the efforts of the stump orators, and, probably, an open-handed liberality toward the voters, cannot fail to carry the election. The wisest policy General Grant could pursue would be to refrain from any extraordinary effort to influence the negroes, to prohibit any interference of the civil or military authorities with the canvass or the polls, and thus to foreshadow by his action in that State a complete change of treatment for the entire South. The people of the Northern States have made up their minds that whatever may be the result of the Presidential election the next administration shall give peace and entire freedom to the white citizens of the South, and shall extend the protection of the constitution over the whole Union. They will no longer suffer the Southern States to be paralyzed and their white citizens to be degraded to help any political party. If the President, recognizing this fact, would rid himself of his present political advisers—stump orators, carpet-baggers, office-holders and all—and adopt toward the South such a generous and noble policy as he pursued toward the vanquished soldiers of Lee's army and foreshadowed in his famous report to President Johnson, he would not only ensure the success of the republican State ticket in North Carolina next month, but would sweep the whole Southern States in November. Such a triumph would be more valuable and more honorable than any victory won by political trickery or by the dangerous expedient of creating a hostile feeling between the white men and the negroes of the South.

Longfellow's Accident—A Game Horse.—It will be learned with extreme regret by the large class interested in sporting matters that John Harper's great horse, Longfellow, was disabled from racing, it is feared for life, by an accident at the Saratoga course yesterday. That this took place in a race which saw two and a quarter miles accomplished in three minutes and fifty-nine seconds—the fastest time on record—will make the accident the more regretable, when, too, it is learned that Longfellow only lost the race by a length. One of his plates became twisted in the running and cut the other foot and leg badly, but the heart of the horse never weakened. He ran gamely as ever to the end, and was led off limping and bleeding to the stable. There seems something in this of pluck, almost heroism, which man arrogates entirely to himself; but two miles and a quarter on little better than three legs and in such time will challenge admiration the world over. It will be remembered that he recently beat his successful rival of yesterday, Harry Bassett, at Long Branch, in a two and a half mile race, by about one hundred and fifty yards, in four minutes, thirty-four seconds.

The Bratton Abduction Case.—The Bratton case was brought up in the Court at London, Ontario, yesterday. Our readers will remember that Dr. Rufus Bratton was abducted from Canada on the 6th of June, and that he reappeared subsequently in South Carolina. The case has caused considerable excitement, as it seriously involves principles of international law. It appears that Bratton arrived in Ontario on Saturday last, but that he purposely concealed himself until the opening of the Court yesterday. According to Bratton, Cornwall, who is charged with the abduction, laid violent hands on him in Waterloo street: handcuffed him, with the help of a cab driver, and forcibly placed him in the cars. Bratton says he protested to the last and yielded only because he relied on British justice to sustain him in the end. The case was further remanded. This is a curious case, and it seems to us that it will lead to some strange developments. It is but little likely to set the St. Lawrence on fire; but it may furnish us with a sensation of some interest in these dull times.

A United States Protectorate of a portion of the South Sea Islands has been, as we are informed by telegram from San Francisco, formally assumed by an American naval officer on board one of the national war vessels. We presume his action is all right.

The Alabama Claims Arbitration.—The members of the Court of Arbitration for the settlement of the Alabama claims assembled in session in Geneva yesterday. The meeting was of very brief duration, an adjournment having been had within the space of thirty minutes. A variety of printed matter was handed in by the national agents. Our telegram report indicates that the progress is quite harmonious so far, and that the entire proceedings may be, perhaps, closed at an early day.

The Question of Trial by Jury.

The not unlooked-for result of the jury trial in the case of Stokes furnishes strong evidence of the little reliance that can be placed on the proper administration of justice under the present system. So many experiments of the same nature have been tried with a like result that the public conscience is not so much affected as might be expected or even desired. Still there is abroad a general dissatisfaction that some conclusion has not been reached by the twelve men who were obtained with so much trouble to try this case. The main facts of the charge against Stokes were admitted by the defence, and it only remained for the jury to decide what was the nature of the act which Stokes committed when he shot and killed Fisk. To the ordinary mind the issue seemed a plain one; but, as the evidence of motive in such cases is always of a most conflicting nature, it is natural to expect that different men would take different views of the responsibility incurred by one man in shooting down another. Where important evidence of a conflicting nature is certain to be presented and requires to be carefully weighed and analyzed, it is of the first importance that the men to decide on its relative value should be of superior intelligence. It is not enough that they should be honest and unprejudiced; they ought to represent the highest intelligence of the community. The interest of the prisoner, no less than that of the public, demands this; yet the law as at present interpreted tends to exclude from the jury box the only class whose presence could give weight and authority to that ancient but much overrated institution.

There can be no question that the present ruling in relation to the selection of jurors is made rather after the letter than the spirit of the law. It is evident that the framers of the law never intended that the intelligent portion of the community should be driven from all practical share in the administration of justice. The intent was to protect the citizen from the malevolence of personal enemies, and the challenge was meant to meet the case of personal prejudice which might endanger the life of the accused. No reasonable man will attempt to maintain that intelligent legislators deliberately passed a law with the intention of making the life of the citizen dependent on the stolid stupidity of men who, from their sheer want of intelligence, form no opinions on events that agitate the whole community. This position is too absurd to be maintained, and yet the judges in our Courts constantly ignore the evident intent of the law and give force to its literal interpretation, without a word of comment or protest. But the vast mass of the people are becoming tired of the judicial farces which are constantly being enacted in our midst, and the desire for the adoption of some more logical mode of procedure has grown to be universal, at least among the classes who do not care to indulge in the amusement of shooting down their fellow beings. No doubt the rowdy element will look with disfavor on any change in the present system, which practically places at their mercy the lives of the peaceable inhabitants.

It is scarcely just that all the protection of the law should be afforded to those who, setting all law at defiance, make their own wills the only guide, while the victims of their violence are deprived of all protection. If this state of things continues it will be the interest of every one to defy the law, and we may look forward to the execution of summary vengeance for real or fancied wrong as a regular item of daily intelligence. If judges and juries are to be assembled, at some expense to the general purse, simply to tell us that they do not know whether or not killing is a crime, the sooner we dispense with the farce of holding courts of justice the better. Two ways suggest themselves of curing the present evil, and we think the moment has come when the remedy should be applied. The adoption of a rule which would make a two-thirds majority sufficient to secure the conviction of a criminal would undoubtedly give a real guarantee for the administration of justice. In addition, the present interpretation of the Jury law, which excludes the intelligent classes from the jury box, ought to be modified so as to apply only to such cases of prejudice as might be held to interfere with a juror's returning a true verdict according to the evidence. This was certainly the intent of the framers of the law, which legal sophistry has so distorted as to convert what was meant to be a safeguard for the innocent into a powerful shield for the guilty. With the introduction of these reasonable changes into our code we might hope to see abated, if not entirely suppressed, the murderous ruffianism which is a blot on our city and on our civilization.

Gambetta and President Thiers.

In his speech at La Ferté-sous-Jouarre on July the 15th M. Gambetta praised the republic as the embodiment of the principles of self-government, order and prosperity. He denounced the conservative party—that is, the monarchical majority in the Assembly—and in terms the most flattering complimented President Thiers, pronouncing his administration a grand success. President Thiers a few days ago surprised his conservative friends by declaring for the republic, and now Gambetta surprises many by declaring for President Thiers. After Thiers Gambetta is unquestionably the most powerful republican civilian in France. In the event of the death or retirement of Thiers Gambetta is the man to whom republican France would look. It is a good sign for the republic that two such men are agreed. It does not mean, however, that France has yet seen the end of the troubles begotten of the late war. A general election is hourly becoming more and more a necessity; but no living man can tell what would be the result of a general election in the peculiar circumstances in which France now finds herself. The pear is ripening.

Too Late—Colonel Blanton Duncan, of Kentucky, straight-out democrat, and Mr. Horace H. Day, of New York, Vice President of the Labor Reform League, in their efforts for a joint stock national convention, in view of a straight-out democratic and labor reform Presidential ticket and party for this contest. It is too late now for a third party, for the masses of the people, of all parties, have already made up their minds for Grant or Greeley. If Colonel Duncan could do nothing for a third party at Baltimore in July he will not be able to do much at Louisville in September.

A Blessing Not in Disguise.

Thanks to that Divine Providence which watches over the fall of a sparrow, New York has clean streets. The abundant dashing showers of Monday, pouring their torrents upon the three hundred miles of our paved streets, have conferred upon us a boon for which we have long looked in vain to the well-paid contractor. Clean streets for once we have, and are grateful. Fierce sunrays during the past fortnight, in spite of the exertions of Captain Thorne's broom brigade, had developed smells that threatened disease. We now have nothing which could offend the most sensitive nostrils, and the air of yesterday, though at full summer heat, was as wholesome and pure as that which sighs through the mountain passes of the Adirondacks or crests the waves at Long Branch. Nature taught us in her copious flooding the true way to secure a clean and healthy city. The practical water-cure is upon us, and our filth is buried in the ocean tides at our feet. Shall we never learn the lesson and wash our streets with the abundant water which surrounds us?

New York can easily and cheaply become the cleanest city in the world, and the healthiest. Just now the death rate of Philadelphia, where there has lately been a slight scarcity of water, has advanced beyond our own. We have had no lack of that inestimable blessing, pure Croton water, and should thank the wise prudence of those who provided it for us in such unstinted measure. With clean streets and abundant water rightly used we shall have little cause to fear epidemics as a result of summer heats.

Cuban Affairs—The Departure of Valmaseda.—The most notable event mentioned in our budget of Cuban news this morning is the departure of the late Captain General Valmaseda yesterday from Havana, en route for Spain. It appears that an immense concourse assembled on the occasion to bid him farewell, and we presume that there was more a feeling of gladness than of sorrow among the assembled multitude in witnessing the departure of the man whose cruelties against the Cuban insurgents constitute his most conspicuous claims to distinction. We cannot doubt that the government of King Amadeus in this matter has acted in deference to the general opinions from the public press of the civilized world, touching the savage policy adopted and pursued to the last by Count Valmaseda in his efforts to suppress the Cuban rebellion; and from the high character of General Ceballos, the newly appointed Captain General of the island, we are confident that a more humane and enlightened policy will now be tried against the insurgents than that of Valmaseda, which has so signally failed. In short, abandoning the policy of extermination, we expect General Ceballos will do what he can to deserve success in adopting the policy of amnesty and conciliation.

The International Prison Congress.—The last English mails brought the report of the first day's sitting of the International Prison Congress in London. All the European governments, with the exception of Portugal, were represented on the opening day. America, both North and South, was also well represented. Earl Carnarvon, in his opening speech, welcomed the delegates, but expressed his regrets that the British government when applied to refused to aid financially the scheme of reform contemplated. The warm welcome of His Lordship to the foreigners who had gathered together for so worthy a purpose outweighed the other consideration, and there is no room to doubt that the Congress, even without British support, will accomplish all its promoters intended it should achieve.

FISH AND THE CATACAZY PAMPHLET.

WASHINGTON, July 16, 1872.

Secretary Fish arrived here this morning, expecting the President to be here also, but for some reason the latter did not reach here. The Secretary is very much annoyed over the publication of Catacazy's defence. At the time the original document was prepared allusion was made as to its purport in these despatches. Mr. Fish then endeavored to obtain a copy from Chief Justice Chase, but failed. Since Catacazy's return to Europe he has consoled himself with the statement in a letter from Minister Curtin that the causes of differences between this government and Catacazy should not be the subject of further publicity. Silence was maintained until Catacazy's successor, Baron Offenberg, was received by the President. On that occasion the usual exchange of courtesies in the way of complimentary notes was marred on our part by an unnecessary allusion to the "late unpleasantness." The President's reply to the address of every Minister received is prepared at the State Department. In harmony with the declarations of the new Plenipotentiary, and as Baron Offenberg had only renewed considerations of the highest regard, &c., the Russian government regarded the reply of the President as uncalled for. It was this that gained for Catacazy permission to expose the alleged duplicity of the Secretary of State.

THE WEATHER.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER,
WASHINGTON, D. C., July 17—1 A. M.

Probabilities.

The lowest barometer will probably move eastward over northern New England on Wednesday, with westerly winds from New York to Virginia and westward. Cloudy weather, with possibly light rain, continue from Pennsylvania to Kentucky, but clearing away during the day; rising barometer and northwest winds prevail from Lake Erie northwestward.

No material change is indicated for the Southern and Gulf States.

The Weather in This City Yesterday.

Yesterday was rather a day of comparative relief from the excessive heat of the passing season. The forenoon and early afternoon were sultry as usual, but in the evening a cooling breeze set in which did much to reduce the temperature to endurable closeness. Judging from the freshening rains of the day previous and yesterday's pleasant change, there is still some hope that the hottest part of the season is not yet to come. There was one case of sunstroke yesterday, Edward McCusker, a poor street sweeper, who succumbed while at work in the Fourth ward, and who lies at the Park Hospital almost a hopeless case.

The following record will show the changes in the temperature for the past twenty-four hours in comparison with the corresponding day of last year, as indicated by the thermometer at Hudnut's Pharmacy, Herald Building:—

	1871.	1872.		1871.	1872.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 16, 1872.

Senator Schurz arrived home to-day. It is not yet announced but it is understood that he will make his opening campaign speech here next Monday night.

EGYPT.

The Shooting Affray Between Americans in Alexandria.

Investigation of the Case—Major Campbell Dangerously Wounded—Consul General Butler Away from the City.

TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

ALEXANDRIA, July 16, 1872.

A military commission is now sitting to inquire into the circumstances and facts connected with the shooting affray which occurred between a party of Americans in this city on the 11th instant. The affair, as will be recollected from the first despatch to the Herald, was between the United States Consul General, George A. Butler, and Mr. Wadleigh, his Secretary, on the one part, and General W. W. Loring, Colonel J. M. Reynolds and Major William P. A. Campbell, who had served in the American Confederate forces, and have been recently employed in the army of His Highness the Khedive, on the other.

Generals Loring and Reynolds and Major Campbell testify to circumstances which, in their judgment, clearly show that the affray was premeditated by Butler and his friends and that their purpose was to take the life of Major Campbell.

The latter is dangerously wounded.

Butler left Alexandria in the mail packet steamer this morning.

The Cashiered Officers.

BRIGADIER GENERAL W. W. LORING.

A soldier from his fifteenth year, the General served with great distinction in Florida, on the Plains, in the Rocky Mountains, in Mexico (where he lost an arm) and as a division commander in the Confederate armies. Though yet in the prime of life he has probably been under fire more frequently than any officer now in active service in any country. It was remarked by a spectator of a great military pageant at Alexandria, in which Loring took a part, that his empty sleeve conferred on him more dignity and more honor than all the stars, crosses and gewgaws with which the well-padded breasts of the Egyptian pachas, generals and other officials were profusely covered. General Loring was a chief of corps, with his headquarters in the old Strangers' Palace at Alexandria, his command extending over the whole delta up to Cairo.

COLONEL A. W. REYNOLDS

was chief of staff of General Loring's Egyptian corps. He is a graduate of West Point. Colonel Reynolds served with distinction in the United States armies in Florida, on the Plains and in Mexico. Returning to Virginia, his native State, at the outbreak of the civil war, he distinguished himself as a brigadier general in the armies of the Confederacy, but particularly at the battle of the Gauley, in West Virginia. Colonel Reynolds was commissioned a general by the Egyptian agent in New York, but consented, on his arrival at Cairo, to be cut down to a colonelcy, with the promise of speedy promotion; but that promise had not been fulfilled.

MAJOR WILLIAM P. A. CAMPBELL.

Major Campbell is a fine type of the American sailor and officer. A Tennesseean by birth, he entered the United States Navy in 1847. In 1861 he resigned and reported for duty to the Confederate government and was ordered to Florida to organize the defences of that coast. At the request of Commodore Tattnall, of Merrimac memory, he was ordered to report to that officer, and served with him in and around Savannah. He was then detailed to proceed to England to superintend the building and take command of a steamer similar to the Susquehannah. It was he who suggested and planned the cruise in the North Pacific, which proved so destructive to the American shipping in that quarter, and he was selected by Admiral Maury especially for that work. He built and equipped his ship and got safely to sea; but a serious accident to her machinery compelled him to seek a port for repairs, and, permission being previously obtained, he ran into Calais, where his ship was detained, by order of the French government, to the end of the war. He was now connected with the heavy artillery, and was chief of staff to General Sibley, who is in command of the Khedive's artillery.

THE ALABAMA CLAIMS.

The Geneva Arbitration Board in Session Yesterday—A Variety of Matter Submitted to the Court—Speedy Work and Amicable Progress Anticipated.

TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

GENEVA, July 16, 1872.

The Board of Arbitration met to-day.

A large quantity of printed matter was submitted to the members and exchanged by the agents of Great Britain and the United States.

No other business was done, the Court adjourning after a session of less than thirty minutes duration.

There is no reason to anticipate further delay in the proceedings, nor is any lengthy controversy expected.

ENGLAND.

American Artistic Triumph in Opera—A New Peer of the Realm—Roman Catholic Movement in Support of the Holy See.

TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

LONDON, July 16, 1872.

Miss Clara Louisa Kellogg achieved great success in "Traviata" on Saturday, being recalled five times. The London journals unanimously concede her perfection in "Violetta." She has received the congratulations of the Prince and Princess of Wales.

A PEER OF THE REALM.

ROMAN CATHOLIC MOVEMENT IN SUPPORT OF THE CHURCH.

An influential meeting of Roman Catholics was held in this city last night, the Duke of Norfolk presiding.

Resolutions were adopted protesting against the action of the Italian government towards the Papal authorities and condemning the recent law passed by the German Parliament proscribing the Jesuits.

UNITED STATES NAVAL FLAG

Admiral Alden's Fleet About to Leave England.

TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

LONDON, July 17—5 A. M.

Admiral Alden, United States Navy, who has been visiting this city, yesterday rejoined his fleet at Spithead. The fleet will sail for Antwerp and Hamburg.

A WATERSPOUT IN COLORADO.

The Spout Empties Itself Over a Carriage and Drowns Two Persons.

DENVER, July 16, 1872.

A remarkable waterspout occurred on the Central City stage road, four miles above Golden City, on Sunday afternoon. The torrent of water struck a carriage containing G. Vierden, his wife, her sister and a girl named Blood, who reside five or six miles up the cañon and were returning home. The two latter were drowned. The body of Miss Vierden was found some three miles below the scene of the disaster, covered with sand and debris. The road was badly washed out and rendered impassable.

Heavy storms of thunder and lightning, accompanied with rain, have visited this region and towards New Mexico during the past four days. The telegraph line south of Trinidad was not working yesterday.

ARRIVAL OF THE YACHT RAMBLER.

BOSTON, Mass., July 16, 1872.

The yacht Rambler, Captain H. Crocker, which sailed from Boston last spring for a trip to the Azores, arrived at this port this afternoon, having left Santa Cruz, Teneriffe, on the 21st of June. She has as passengers Mr. J. M. Forbes, owner of the Rambler; his sister, Mrs. Francis Cunningham; Miss Alice H. Forbes, Miss Sarah C. Jones and Miss R. L. Dabney. The trip has been highly enjoyed by all on board.

NORTH CAROLINA.

A Great Liberal-Conservative Ratification Meeting at Raleigh.

SPEECHMAKING AT MORDECAI'S GROVE.

Remarks by Senators Doolittle and Tipton, Governor Walker, of Virginia; Ex-Senator Miller, Governor Graham and Others.

RALEIGH, N. C., July 16, 1872.

This was a great day for Raleigh. It witnessed the grandest and most important political gathering since 1860 in point of numbers, enthusiasm and in the distinguished character of the speakers. At an early hour the streets were thronged with country people, and by ten o'clock, when the procession was formed in front of the Yarborough House, there were as many as ten thousand people in the neighborhood. The following was the order of formation:—

Oak City Brass Band.
Marshals.
Carriages containing distinguished speakers.
Honored guests in carriages.
Citizens in carriages and on horseback.
Citizens on foot.

The procession reached Mordecai's Grove at half-past ten o'clock. W. G. Mason, chairman of the Liberal Republican State Executive Committee, called the meeting and announced for President Hon. D. M. Barringer, of Wake, who, in taking the chair, delivered a short, well timed address, after which he introduced Hon. James R. Doolittle.

SENATOR DOOLITTLE'S SPEECH.

The Senator came forward amid much applause. He said he thanked God he was permitted to speak to North Carolinians as fellow-citizens; that years ago it was his pleasure to receive instruction from his venerable friend, Dr. Mason, of Raleigh, who had on this occasion petitioned the throne of grace, when Professor in New York College, and it was indeed a pleasure to be here to-day. He spoke at length in regard to the centralization of the powers of government towards which the present administration drifted, and warned people of the dreadful results that would inevitably follow should the administration succeed in the coming election. He spoke of the law allowing federal troops at the ballot box in cities, of the attempt to secure by legislative enactment control of the telegraph, with power of the Executive to suspend the writ of habeas corpus and other acts, as clearly and positively indicating the tendency of the party towards centralization. He denounced in unmeasured terms the many flagrant acts of usurpation and constitutional violations by the dominant party. In referring to past differences between the people of the North and those of the South, he believed it was intended by our forefathers the States should remain in the Union, and that they should have equal rights and priviliges; that they intended these States should never be deprived of these blessings by secession and dissension. Now that this question was forever settled, let us and come together as one man to defend and protect the liberties of the people. He knew well the cause of dissension between North and South; he knew how the people of the South had suffered; knew their losses and, for one, could appreciate their sufferings. He had buried his eldest son who had fallen in battle fighting for the same principle of constitutional liberty that the Southern people thought they were fighting for and for which they fought desperately in earnest. He believed the power of centralization equally as dangerous as secession, and thought a union of all the States necessary that the citizen of one State may enjoy the rights and privileges of all other States. He read extracts from Mr. Greeley's letter of acceptance, in which he planted himself firmly in opposition to the acts which he had referred to, and which was the main plank of the administration platform. He then addressed the colored men present, and told them of the folly of voting in solid platoons against the moral and intelligent citizens of the South. Though they might continue to do so Greeley would be elected in November beyond the possibility of a doubt. He would carry enough Northern States, without the aid of a single Southern State, and then have fifty odd votes to spare. He briefly referred to the celebrated epistle of Greeley, saying that in the final consummation of the rebellion he was in favor of charity to all and malice toward none; that this position then assumed had never been given up, but he sacrificed his personal popularity and sustained great (pecuniary) losses. He concluded his eulogy of Greeley by saying he has the largest head, the kindest heart and the most extensive information of any man in the country. In referring to General Grant the speaker said he did not wish to abuse or speak unkindly of him. He was well known to the people; his life, his acts, his administration speak for themselves, and he would in charity draw the veil. He briefly referred to Lincoln, saying that but for his assassination, for which act the perpetrators alone were responsible, the same state of affairs would have existed in 1865 that we now see coming; that Lincoln would have inaugurated the same plans of peace and restoration that will occur in the administration of Greeley. In concluding he urged upon the people of the South to be guilty of nothing in the campaign that radical papers might magnify as outrages; to behave quietly and peaceably, but to work.

SHAKE HANDS OVER THE "BLOODY CHASM"

REMARKS OF EX-SENATOR MILLER.

Ex-United States Senator Miller, of Georgia, was next introduced, who entertained the audience for an hour in a brilliant and forcible speech. He reviewed briefly the general shortcomings of Grant's administration, but his speech was directed almost exclusively to the reconstruction laws and the finger Grant had in the matter. His rebukes and references to the "powers that be," were scathing and sarcastic. He, too, paid a glowing tribute to the life and character of Mr. Greeley, and promised to carry the State for him in November. Senator Doolittle earnestly desired a stenographic report of this speaker's remarks for a campaign document in the North.

GOVERNOR WALKER ON THE PLATFORM.

A recess was taken to enjoy a barbecue, which was bountiful. Afterwards Governor Walker made a speech of forty-five minutes, urging the people of North Carolina to throw off the yoke of radicalism in August, and set an example that Virginia will follow. His remarks were eloquent and earnest, and he created a most favorable impression by his fine looks, genial face and polished manners.

SENATOR TIPTON NEXT FOLLOWED

in an earnest speech, making direct charges against the administration and exposing the acts of the radical party at Washington, which had caused the organization of the liberal republican party. He said Senator Wilson, who had belonged to the liberals, had been bought over by the candidacy for Vice President.

He was followed by able remarks from ex-Governor Graham, of North Carolina, who said that the close of the war was really the commencement of the quarrel, and that the Cincinnati nomination was now

THE OLIVE BRANCH OF PEACE.

He was willing to meet more than half way his liberal republican friends. Next followed Judge Fowler and General W. R. Cox, of Raleigh, and Colonel Masten and Captain J. T. Davis, in enthusiastic remarks. The meeting throughout was enthusiastic and much good feeling prevailed.

There is speaking to-night in Tucker Hall and a torchlight procession in the streets.

THE VOTE IN 1868.

At the April election the republican State ticket was elected by an average majority of 19,000. In November of that year Grant's majority for President was 12,000. In August, 1870, the only State officer voted for was Attorney General, and the democrats elected their candidate by a majority of 4,996 votes, and carried the Legislature by an overwhelming majority. In 1871, on the Convention bill of the democratic Legislature, which was opposed by a great many democrats and was a very unpopular measure, the vote against it was 9,245 votes. This was considered a triumph by the republicans, but the democrats deny that it was a fair test of the strength of the two parties.

THIS WAS THE LAST ELECTION

held in the State, and it is, therefore, the latest data to judge from of the probable result of the present contest. But now the democrats are generally united, and it is predicted that the State will go democratic in August by from four to five thousand. This is the lowest estimate. Others claim a much higher majority. The democrats are sure of securing a majority in the Legislature, and will certainly elect five, and possibly seven, out of the eight Congressmen.

THE ABDUCTED CANADIAN.

Dr. Bratton Appears in Court, to the Great Surprise of His Captor—He Trusts in British Justice.

LONDON, Ontario, July 16, 1872.

The case of Dr. Rufus Bratton, who was abducted from Canada on the 4th of June and taken to South Carolina, came up on a writ of remand to-day. Bratton arrived here on Saturday last, but kept himself concealed until after the opening of the Court, when he made his appearance, to the great surprise of the defendant.

His testimony shows that Cornwall, the prisoner, laid violent hands upon him on Waterloo street, handcuffed him, with the assistance of a cab driver, and thrust him into the cars; that he protested to the last, and only yielded because he relied on British justice to sustain him in the end.

The case is further remanded.

AUSTRALASIA.

Colonial Progress, Governmental, Political and Agricultural.

New Mines of Copper and the Supply of Gold and Wool—The Coal Trade—Shipwreck—The British Naval Flag—The Church Question.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 16, 1872.

The steamship Mohongo, from Honolulu, arrived here to-day with dates to July 3 from that place, and to June 6 from Australasia.

Captain Edward Wakeman, of the Mohongo, was stricken with paralysis on the trip from Honolulu.

The following is a summary of the news.

New South Wales.

The members of the present Ministry have been re-elected and expect to meet Parliament with a working majority. They have partially arranged the Border Customs Treaty. It only requires the legislative sanction to become law.

The Executive Council has decided to enforce the extreme penalty of the law on Nichols and Lester. The latter made a full confession.

COPPER AND GOLD.

Splendid copper mines have been discovered near Broadwood and Boro.

The yield of the gold mines has decreased from want of water, but the returns of gold are good.

DEFICIT IN THE REVENUE.

A special audit of the government's shows a considerable deficit in the public revenue.

SHIPWRECK.

The steamer Clarence, from Sydney for Grafton, was totally wrecked on the 2d of June. The passengers and crew were saved. The wreck was sold for a mere trifle.

The bark Mary and Edith, from Puget Sound for Australia, laden with lumber, was wrecked near Noumea. A French resident purchased the wreck and got the vessel off. The ship Young Australia was lost a few hours after leaving Brisbane for London, with a cargo of 1,400 bales of wool and other produce. The ship and cargo were fully insured.

THE BRITISH SQUADRON.

The British war steamers Dido and Fawn are hourly expected to join the Australian squadron A Rear Admiral will shortly assume command of the squadron.

TRADE.

Sydney is to be made a new depot and traffic station, with a permanent staff.

The coal export trade is increasing. A scarcity of tonnage just now prevents the execution of all the orders. A number of vessels are at Sydney loading for California.

Victoria.

The Chamber of Commerce has published a protest against the ratification of the California mail contract made by Premier Duffy, whose ministry, being defeated on the question of improper patronage, resigned. Mr. Francis, the new Premier, annuls all negotiations with Mr. Webb. The government will call for tenders for alternate mail service via the Cape of Good Hope.

THE WOOL CROP AND COTTON TRADE.

The scarcity of water is causing great losses to the farm squatters.

The next wool season is expected to be earlier than last and the clip somewhat lighter.

Thirty thousand cases of preserved meats were shipped for Europe last month.

POLITICS AND ELECTRICITY.

A political crisis causes great delay in parliamentary business.

The new ministry is expected to join that of Queensland in establishing a second cable to Batavia.

South Australia.

The wet season delays the resumption of the construction of the overland telegram line. The government has purchased a number of horses and will open a despatch express. Only 250 miles of the line remain to be completed, which will probably be early in August.

THE CROWN AND CHURCH.

Parliament has again passed a resolution ignoring the English government's order respecting the precedence of religious dignitaries.

The Markets.

SYDNEY, July 6, 1872.

Markets very firm. Wool unchanged. Tallow higher. Kerosene steady and in good supply. Tobacco advanced 2c. Lumber wanted.

The Melbourne markets are stronger. Devoe's kerosene, 46c.; inferior, 44c. a 45c., in bond.

SANDWICH ISLANDS.

Parliamentary Progress and the Public Finance—A Heavy Public Debt—Honors to the American Flag—Mariners Murdered.

TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 16, 1872.

The mails from the Hawaiian Islands supply the following news report:—

The Legislature at Honolulu has been in session eight weeks. The government has intimated to the honorable body that it must finish its business in two weeks more or the members will be sent home.

There has been appropriated $116,000 for the interests of navigation; $12,000 for the support of a government paper—the Gazette—and several other large sums for different objects.

The public debt will be quite large for this country, greater, it is said, than can be supported, it being not far from half a million dollars.

An attachment was issued by the Supreme Court at the instance of the Attorney General against the steamer Nebraska, in consequence of the introduction of the smallpox on her arrival from San Francisco in May last. H. Hackenced & Co., agents, gave the necessary bonds to enable the vessel to proceed on her voyage.

The Legislature adjourned over the Fourth of July in honor of the day.

MURDER OF MARINERS.

Captain Mammen and Fourth Officer Rose, of the whaling bark Onward, from Sydney, were murdered on April 20 by the natives of Gowen's Island, Solomon's Group.

Several of the crew were wounded.

NAVIGATOR'S ISLANDS.

The United States Naval Protectorate—Murder of a Missionary.

TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 16, 1872.

News from the South Sea Islands states that Commander Meade, of the United States steamer Narragansett, formally assumed protectorate of Tutuila (Titualla?) Island, where a private company has been formed to work the plantations.

The promoters of the enterprise allege that they have secured promises of differential duties on produce shipped to the United States.

Gordon, missionary to Errominga, has been murdered by the natives.

THE FIJI ISLANDS.

Revolutionary Democracy Almost Triumphant.

TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 16, 1872.

The Australasian and Polynesian advices at this port by the steamship Mohongo report that the Fiji Islands are undergoing incipient revolution. The government is powerless against it.

THE HERALD AND THE SOURCE OF THE MISSISSIPPI.

[From the Hudson (N. Y.) Star, July 15.]

The New York HERALD, not satisfied with carrying the war into Africa, is now engaged—in the person of one of its reporters—in exploring the head waters of the Mississippi. The reporter is a "canoeist," and his boat rejoices in the name of Dolly Varden.

CUBA.

Explosion of a Powder Magazine by Lightning—Seven Killed.

TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

HAVANA, July 14,
Via KEY WEST, July 16, 1872.

Fort Monarca, at Nuevitas, was struck by lightning on the night of the 10th inst. The powder magazine exploded instantaneously with the stroke, and seven artillerists of the garrison were killed. One of the rifled cannons was carried a distance of fifty yards from its embrasure. Fort Monarca was built in 1869 by the city of Nuevitas, and was presented to the government in 1870.

Count Valmaseda embarked for Spain to-day. An immense concourse of citizens assembled at the Captain General's palace and upon the quays to bid him farewell. He is accompanied by Colonel Ortis and his personal staff.

The newspaper La España has suspended publication.

Don Suarez Vigil has been appointed Political Secretary of the island of Cuba.

The Spanish iron-clad Numancia will shortly sail for New York en route to Spain.

An expedition which left here some time ago to search for hidden treasure near the Laguna de Cortes, in the Vuelta Abajo district, has returned unsuccessful.

General Lofio, the commander of Fort Cabaña and Morro Castle, is shortly to return to Spain.

The Cuban civil government has granted to coolies the right to return to China, after complying with certain prescribed conditions.

The Cable Company has chartered the steamer Quintin to carry telegrams between Havana and Key West until the cable can be repaired.

The Diario, commenting upon the seizure of the steamer Pioneer, says that vessel is a pirate, not a privateer, and that the commander of the Moccasin decided her status when he captured her and carried her into Newport. Had she been a privateer he would not have taken her, because a privateer is a vessel-of-war belonging to a nation recognized as a belligerent.

UTAH.

SALT LAKE CITY, July 16, 1872.

Referring to my despatches regarding the threatened outbreak of the Indians, telegraphic information has just reached this city announcing that Indian Agent Dodge and Colonel Nugent, of the Thirteenth infantry, had several stormy interviews with a large body of Indians in the southern part of the Territory yesterday and to-day. The Indians seemed determined to hold out for a long time, and the great body of them took to the hills.

Matters certainly looked warlike. After considerable effort on the part of the United States official, a number of the chiefs finally promised, the second time, to return to their reservations.

General Morrow hopes this will prevent war.

A special to the Evening Journal says:—"The Navajoes are not hostile, but the Elk Utes are troublesome and threaten a general war."

Chief Justice McKean to-day delivered a most elaborate decision in the case of the Emma Mines vs. The Illinois Tunnel Company, granting an injunction, as demanded, against the latter. The decision is well received and much commented on in the city.

J. M. Orr, chairman of the Territorial Liberal Committee, has issued a call for a Territorial Convention, to meet on the 25th inst. at Corinne, Utah, to nominate a candidate for delegate to Congress against George Q. Cannon, a Mormon.

LONG BRANCH

The President Still at the Branch—How He Passes the Day and Whom He Receives—Everything Quiet at the Branch—Interview with Mayor Brown of St. Louis—His Honor on the Political Situation.

LONG BRANCH, July 16, 1872.

It is all very well for an uneasy and curious public to be anxious for news about the movements of Grant, but what is an unfortunate correspondent to do with a man who won't move at all on any account? Greeley may [illegible] dance around for the general amusement and the furnishing of material for readable newspaper paragraphs. What he knows about the advantages of being perpetually advertised under one pretence or another in the great newspapers of the day is of admirable service to him just now and he is undoubtedly aware of that fact, but his rival down here seems to care nothing about the light comedy scenes of the Presidential play. He won't attend meetings nor visit clubs, nor hang round the headquarters of committees nor receive heavy and formal delegations. He won't take his little hatchet and go around barking up old trees and making his mark on young ones. He won't dig nor plough, nor sow, nor reap nor mow. It would be an immense relief if he and Henry Wilson would set up an old tannery and a cobbler's stall and invite people down here to receive practical lessons in the art of transforming the fresh cowhide into ready made patent leather boots, but there is no use in making that or any other suggestion of the kind—he won't adopt it. He won't do anything in fact. He rises early every morning and walks around the limited area termed grounds by courtesy which surrounds his neat but unpretentious little cottage. Then he takes an early breakfast and after that a brisk ride on horseback a few miles into the country. The remainder of the day he spends receiving his friends who keep up a constant succession in the calling way until late in the afternoon. All must call in a very simple and informal way or they will not be received at all. The callers for the most part are personal acquaintances and friends of the olden time who just drop in in passing, have a pleasant chat and then drop out again in the same quiet way. A good many of the visitors to-day and indeed for several days past were old soldiers—officers who had served under General Grant during the late war and with him in the Mexican war. Finding themselves at Long Branch they cannot resist the temptation to call and see their old commander or comrade as the case may be who has since become so distinguished, and may be still more so before he dies. They remind him of the regiment they served in and the engagements in which they were engaged, and fight all their battles over again in a most agreeable way. This kind of people the President seems always very glad to see, and makes heartily and unaffectedly welcome but the politician no matter how eminent who comes to talk politics and the issues' and 'the prospects and so forth may be certain of being entertained with a tremendous display of cold shoulder.

The statement that appeared in most of your misguided contemporaries in New York to the effect that the President was to go to Washington this morning to attend an important Cabinet meeting had no foundation in fact whatever. There was no meeting of the Cabinet in Washington or anywhere else to day, nor will there be one any other day of the week. The President had some intention of going to Washington this morning on some business of minor importance—he does run down there sure every ten or twelve days—but he did not go to-day.

Everything is very quiet at the Branch just now. A strong breeze kept blowing off from the land side all day, making a seat in the shade on the cliffs over the blue ocean and incomparable strand a luxury worth struggling for, but moving about in the sun was anything but agreeable. The hotels are pretty full, the guests being the usual class of watering place loungers of both sexes, and the absence of the great lights whose names are familiar in men's mouths is rather noticeable. The only remarkable stranger I saw here to-day was whom I had the pleasure of meeting in the breeze blessed halls of the West End Hotel. I had a pleasant interview with this gentleman who is a robust man, of first class physique and fine intelligence—the beau ideal of a representative of the business and politics of a great American Western city. Mr Brown speaks highly and proudly of the condition of affairs in St. Louis which he represents as all that could be desired. His city he says, was never so prosperous as it is at present or showed finer prospects for the future. The health of the city is excellent, its financial condition is as sound as a bell and business is extremely lively. The Greeley Brown movement is carrying every thing before it in Missouri and that whole section. Mayor Brown himself regarded the Cincinnati nominations at first with great disfavor nor is he entirely satisfied with them yet, but he finds the queer movement has now pushed itself beyond anything he ever expected or calculated upon and he goes with his party in support of it. He is very anxious—rather despondent, in fact—for the future of the country under Mr Greeley's administration, should the Philosopher get elected. The latter has many admirable qualities, but they are exactly such as would be dangerous in a man occupying the position of President of the United States. Gratz Brown, the Mayor said, stands very well out in Missouri, but the liberal ticket would carry that State with any other name in the second place upon it. Carl Schurz was never a very popular man out there. He did not get the Senatorship through his popularity but by a combination peculiar to unsettled politics in a State. Carl, the Mayor believes, is a man of great capacity and attainments, though theoretical rather than practical. He has undoubtedly given Grant a great deal of trouble, but Mayor Brown thinks the conduct of the great German in that regard was prompted more by personal resentment than by pure patriotism. He thought to run the federal business altogether in Missouri and Grant was not willing to allow him. That accounted for the sour milk in the cocoanut. The Mayor spoke rather kindly of General Grant and the difficulties he had to encounter in dealing with the republican malcontents. The Mayor is President of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad and has just come from San Francisco, where he went on business for the road which is being rapidly built, the Pacific end having been already laid down, and the city of San Francisco taking ten millions worth of the stock. Political affairs there, he says, are pretty much the same as in Missouri.

FIRE ISLAND.

The Inducements Offered to Visitors—Fishing and Bathing—High Tariff—A Profitable Season Progressing—Hint to Excursionists.

FIRE ISLAND, July 14, 1872.

A long stretch of sandy beach devoid of even a solitary blade of grass, washed on one side by the never ceasing, white crested steeds of old Neptune, which dash up its sloping shore, and on the other hand by the still waters of Great South Bay, forms a place of popular resort to invalids who require sea breezes and salt water bathing. Such a summer resort is the far-famed Fire Island. It is reached from New York by way of the Southside Railroad, the cars from Bushwick, Williamsburg, connecting with the Fire Island steamboat. Just before making further progress it may be well to inform the readers of the HERALD who are not familiar with the locality and the lines leading here that the

RATES OF TRAVEL AND ENTERTAINMENT ARE HIGH.

For instance, the fare from Bushwick to Babylon is $1 10; from the railroad depot to the steamboat landing ten cents, from thence to Fire Island (distance only eight miles) across the bay, $1. Board by the day is $4 for adults, by the week it is $20. The "extras" such as bathing boat hire and refreshments at the bar are simply outrageous. As a sample it need but be stated that to engage a sail boat which everybody does who cares to fish for a day is to pay $6, for half a day $3 50. A bottle of common cider which is sold everywhere else for forty cents is attainable at the principal hotel at an outlay of $1 00. In fact the new comers, who have never heretofore placed themselves in the meshes of the King of Fire Island are perfectly astounded at the modest (?) demands for everything called for outside the table d'hôte. The latter is pretty fair however which is the redeeming feature of the house. Then there are also billiard tables a bowling alley and a ten pin alley. All these games are going the whole time. People—young folks especially—grow weary of bathing and piscatorial sport and "keep the ball rolling" in the alleys from morning till night.

BRILLIANT PROSPECTS

There are at present about three hundred guests at the Island and the remaining rooms in the hotel are being rapidly engaged by parties who are "swinging round the circle" of fashionable and health inspiring summer resorts. No matter how the winds blow one gets a fresh sea breeze here the whole time which compensates the old habitués for the absence of vegetation and drives—there being neither on this desert island. Those who have not accustomed themselves to like this beach do not take so kindly to it. Mr Sammis who owns the cars which run from the depot to the steamboat Nelly White and owns the latter also has built in addition to his house which can now accommodate 600 guests.

TWENTY FIVE YEARS AGO

the old Surf House on the Island accommodated but eighty persons and that almost sufficed to meet the demand of the select party of visitors who made it their place of sojourn in those bygone summer days. Then the lighthouse keeper [illegible] to turn an honest penny in harboring visitors who could not find room in the hotel. Government shut down on that little enterprise however for [illegible] the keeper of the beacon light on that important [illegible] might neglect to keep his lamps trimmed and burning were he too much engrossed in attention to visitors. This year they look for [illegible] guests at the [illegible]. The Southside Railroad has popularized the [illegible] and its greater [illegible] in the charges [illegible] summer influx might possibly [illegible] greater than it is. As it is excursionists are invited to make the trip and return the same day. Trains leave [illegible] street Williamsburg and give three and a half hours [illegible] on the Island and permit of the excursionists returning by mail train the same day. It will cost from [illegible] just $4 40 for each adult to make the trip to the Island and back. Boat hire and refreshments charged for in proportion. It will therefore be necessary for parties bound on such a day's [illegible] to see to it that they are well supplied with cash for the trip. The fishing is good. The blue fish [illegible] and mackerel are running handsomely now and fishermen rejoice thereat.

STONINGTON July 13, 1872.

There are few of the old seaport towns on the Eastern coast where the relics of the Revolutionary wars are treasured with a more jealous care than in Stonington. The residents of this once famous whaling headquarters have been born and brought up on the rocky soil where their fathers lived before them. They love to point out with pride to the stranger a few carefully preserved shells that were fired into their homesteads from British guns in the days when, fighting for dear liberty they kept the invader at bay with the aid of two old eighteen pound guns that are still on exhibition as mementos of the stubborn resistance which forced the aggressors to raise the siege. It is not many years since when Stonington owned about the largest fleet of whaling vessels that hailed from any Eastern port and it still has the reputation of giving birth to some of the best seamen that ever sailed under the Stars and Stripes. The residents of Stonington have always been a seafaring people and many of our best and fleetest first touched the water in that port. Ex Commodore Loper and Captain Nat Palmer two of our oldest and most experienced yachtsmen are natives of Stonington. The Madgie is at present lying at Stonington and will soon be fitted out for the August cruise. Captain Nat Palmer cruises around in his sloop yacht Sallie F Day and Mr Richard Loper Jr flies his colors on the sloop Josie one of the fastest boats in Eastern waters. The latter gentleman is the preux chevalier of the

YACHTS

and generally takes a large party of ladies out sailing in the Josie whenever the weather is favorable. Although not considered a fashionable watering place Stonington boasts of one of the best hotels in the neighborhood of Fisher's Sound. The residents of Stonington are very anxious to receive a visit from the New York Yacht Club during the August cruise, and should the yachts cast anchor they will doubtless be received with a hearty welcome. Stonington is at present in a fervor of political excitement and the nomination of

GREELEY

is generally received with great enthusiasm. In course of conversation with Judge Palmer one of the leading republicans of the borough, that gentleman stated that the borough would certainly go for Greeley and they had the most sanguine hopes that he would carry the State. He said there was no doubt Greeley would poll a large republican vote, and the democrats, including the most rabid copperheads, were for him to a unit. Should Greeley be elected the old Revolutionary will once more be brought into action. Greeley hats Greeley fans and Greeley badges are noticeable with nearly every second person one meets, and the young ladies appear especially devoted to the fans bearing a likeness to the white haired philosopher. There are some very pleasant drives in the neighborhood of Stonington, through pleasant green pastures along shady lanes to the neighboring villages of Mystic Westerley Noank and others. The hotel will be very full during the month of August and the young people anticipate a gay season.

NEW LONDON.

NEW LONDON, July 15 1872

The Pequot season has been remarkably successful this summer, as to day there are 350 guests in the house, and there is not room for many more. Usually the busy term does not commence much before the first of August but this year the larger portion of the residents arrived early and secured their rooms up to September. Nearly all the old residents who have made this house their headquarters for time immemorial are here again but among them are many fresh faces on an experimental visit. The Pequot has always borne a good name for the excellence of its

CUISINE,

and it certainly has not deteriorated in that very essential addition to the comforts of life. It requires an unusual amount of ingenuity to kill time at the Pequot as there is really nothing to do. Luckily, one can get a good breakfast up to eleven o'clock A M, so that with the assistance of a cigar, noon is easily reached. The New York papers do not arrive until two o'clock P M and from twelve up to that hour the male portion of the community are decidedly miserable. Some avail themselves of the pleasure yachts and take a sail while others lounge around in a listless manner and patronise the establishment on the lower floor. Dinner and another cigar brings one up to five P M, when the piazza is in great demand, and the gossip and scandal cliques are set in motion. The band commences shortly after seven much to the delight of the infantine boarders, who immediately take possession of the parlors and do the greater part of the dancing. A few of the elder boys however occasionally show themselves in the parlor, and after taking a turn repair to the piazza and tell one another how such and such a girl squeezed their hand, and then discuss the respective merits of the female sex and exhibit a knowledge of their respective points as if they had been studying so much horseflesh.

THE LADIES

are an enigma in the morning, as they only show themselves in order to favor the gentlemen with a passing glimpse of a morning toilet, after which they are generally invisible until about two P M when they appear in a walking costume. At dinner they exhibit a third costume, and after that hour they generally remain on the piazza until bed time.

There is nothing very startling so far in the way of gossip or scandal, except what may have arisen from the jealousy of the single ladies at the attentions paid to some of the married ladies by eligible young men.

There is a new house this season on the opposite side of the river, called the Edgecomb House, which appears to be very fairly patronized. It is run on reasonable terms. It is pleasantly situated, and the fare is simple, plain and wholesome.

There have been several yachts here this season, and

has made this place her headquarters since the 10th of June. Mr James R. Smith, her owner, has taken one of the cottages adjoining the Pequot, and his family are stopping there for the summer. The Fleetwing, Mr George Osgood, left here on Saturday morning bound for New Bedford and the East. The Columbia, Mr Lester Wallack, left on Saturday morning for Mamaroneck, N Y, but will return about Wednesday. Mr G Haven and family are stopping at the Pequot and his schooner yacht Restless is expected every day from the East where she has been cruising for the past ten days. There is a very pleasant sloop yacht here, run by Captain Norris that is in great requisition and makes several trips daily. She is called the Frolic was built this season and her dimensions are forty three feet over all and sixteen feet four inches beam. One of the most useful additions to the comfort of the residents is called the Cecil which makes half a dozen trips daily between New London and the Pequot House dock. This boat carries about forty or fifty passengers and as she docks at New London near the depot, is very convenient for passengers to the hotel. The residents are already beginning to look forward to the visit of the New York Yacht Club fleet an event which generally serves to break the monotony of their existence. The majority of the residents of the Pequot are from New York although there are a few hailing from Boston, Philadelphia and other large cities.

A SMALL STEAM YACHT,

NEWPORT.

Summer Recreations at the "Swell" Resort—The Season Not Yet in Full Blast—The Cuban "Lion" Opposite the Dock.

NEWPORT July 16 1872

This morning brought to light the skeleton that haunts the Ocean House in the shape of Monday morning bills. It would be hard to discover a more dissatisfied lot of individuals than many of those perambulating the piazza after breakfast and from the [illegible] remarks that one could not help overhearing such as "A charge of seventy cents for boot blacking when I pay $2.00 per week." "Twenty five cents for a cup of tea in my room!" [illegible] it was evident that [illegible] was putting it on pretty heavy. It was my luck to be charged for a day longer than I had been in the house, but that of course was an oversight and [illegible] remonstrance rectified that [illegible] error. But seeing a charge of $1 00 for carriage hire I ventured to inquire what [illegible] and was informed [illegible] carriage to the [illegible]. [illegible] finally accepted the position and [illegible].

The citizens of Newport have at last made a move in the right direction by improving their docks. They have now a tolerably decent dock which is used by the Providence, Newport and Wickford steamers. They have also some steps and a tolerable landing place for yacht gigs and pleasure boats. [illegible] The schooner yacht

Commodore Jacob Voorhis of the Brooklyn Yacht Club is in the harbor and there are also several small sloop yachts. The Fleetwing Mr George Osgood left yesterday for New Bedford.

The drive is tolerably well patronized in the afternoon but all the fashionables have not yet arrived. There are a few handsome turnouts but the majority of the ladies appear to favor basket pony phaetons. Horseback exercise is not much in vogue and that branch of recreation is at present limited to two or three equestrians.

GRATZ BROWN.

His Movements Yesterday—Annoyances from Interviewers and Photographers—He is Going to the Seaside—A Ride in the Park Last Evening and a Lunch at Delmonico's—What He Thinks of the Outlook for November.

The Vice Presidential candidate showed a marked improvement in his condition yesterday morning and sat listening to conversations in his room or receiving such of his old friends and acquaintances as called in the spacious parlors of his friend Dr Steele's residence, in Great Jones street during the entire forenoon. The visitors were almost innumerable and most of those admitted to see the Governor were either old college classmates of his at Yale or friends of former years from Kentucky and Missouri. Among these last was Mr Jamison of the firm of Jamison, Smith & Codding bankers of St Louis.

Mr Ethan Allen, Chairman of the Liberal Republican National Executive Committee, called in the afternoon and had some conversation with the Governor which was not however, of an important character and Mr Allen remained but a short time.

Among the annoyances to which all

are the persistent demands of photographers for sittings. It has been stated that Mr Greeley was some weeks ago nearly distracted by these operators who desired to catch his counterfeit presentment with bare muscular arm and axe on shoulder. Finally when in their frenzy they insisted upon driving him up a tree, he rebelled. Escaping at the time he has since eluded their toils and they searching for a new victim have by concerted action and to a man gone for Governor Gratz. The Vice President in prospective received them kindly as they came pouring in and explained that he would notify them of his coming to their respective galleries each in good time. Thus several of the best known establishments have completed extensive preparations for the event and are living from day to day on the qui vive of expectancy.

The Governor is quite weak yet and wears a weary air with sometimes a look of longing in the eyes as of one who regrets absence from home. He spoke yesterday of his sudden illness, in which he is now removed from all danger, as perhaps the best event that could have occurred to him, warning him as it did of the limits beyond which even by a robust man, industry cannot be safely pushed. Not having suffered from sickness for some years, he had entered upon the labor of the campaign with and had worked incessantly for months with hardly three hours of rest in twenty four. Till two or three o'clock each morning he had sat up dictating and writing buried in a correspondence that covered the country from Maine to the Pacific Coast. The sudden prostration which had overtaken him, fortunately without fatal results taught him that he must exercise discretion in the tasks he has set for himself in future. He intends within three or four days to leave the city for some quiet place on the seashore, where he can find surf bathing and escape from the throngs that constantly surround him. In two or three weeks he expects to be recuperated, and he will then return to St Louis and the West.

At four o'clock yesterday afternoon the Governor, with his friend and physician Dr Theophilus Steele drove out on the avenue and through Central Park, with which he expressed himself delighted. Returning before dusk they lunched at Delmonico's and were home early in the evening.

Speaking of the prospects of the campaign, Governor Brown says he can see no possible

to secure more than three States and even these are acknowledged to be doubtful. The States alluded to are Connecticut, Massachusetts and South Carolina. A gentleman from Massachusetts who held a conference with members of the Liberal Republican Executive Committee yesterday, sent word to Governor Brown that his State would, notwithstanding present appearances give a handsome majority for the liberal ticket in November. Others were of the opinion that should any reasonable effort be made in South Carolina the vote of that State would be cast with her sister States of the South, and the representative men of Connecticut were unanimous in promising a majority of from five to ten thousand in the State of common schools and wooden nutmegs.

In regard to Iowa, which had by some been considered doubtful, the Governor remarked that the more densely populated counties bordering on Missouri had become infected with the popular feeling in the latter State, and the people there were among the most enthusiastic reformers. This feeling too, was fast spreading, and would long before election day have swept completely over the State.

Governor Brown seems to regard the present movement as one of those great tidal waves of opinion which, rising from a deep popular sentiment, passes beyond the control of politicians, and, while it carries some forward on its crest, buries thousands who strive to ride thereon beneath its undertow forever.

Movements of the Philosopher—He Gives Himself a Rest—The Visitors at the Glenham—Letter from Ex-Senator Stewart—Position of Sumner and Forney

Mr Greeley returned from Long Island at day break yesterday and took the early train for Chappaqua being almost exhausted with the continued excitement and worry of the past week and anxious for rest. He will amuse himself to day probably with chopping, having more leisure for that exercise now than he has had before since he owned his farm. During the campaign it is probable the woods will be beautifully trimmed, until the wooded hillsides present the appearance of an English park. He will probably return to the city this morning.

VISITORS AT HEADQUARTERS

The following is a list of distinguished visitors at the Glenham headquarters yesterday:—C M Tucker, James M Gray of Georgia, D H Armstrong, of St Louis Mo, William Rhodes, of St Louis, A D Banks, of Mississippi, Colonel C W Baker of New York, William B Maxson, of New Jersey, E Jefford of Mississippi, Walter Trumbull of Illinois, H H Hubbard, of Knoxville Tenn, General L A Merritt, of New York, John A McCaull of Salem, Va, William Lownstein of Richmond Va, John A Reynolds of Pottsville Pa, Colonel Shorter of Eufaula Ala, Colonel Herndon of Alabama, Mayor S Rich of Alabama, Andrew H H Dawson of New York, D C Lindsall [illegible] General Cabell of Arkansas.

SOUTHERN SENTIMENT

Colonel Shorter in conversation with Mr Everts of Montana, said that the [illegible] South did not care a cent for Greeley's past record. [illegible] would not honor him as we do now if we thought he could be [illegible]. We [illegible] trust him now for his present record, his amnesty sentiments and his [illegible]. Colonel Shorter is an [illegible] orator and made the most thrilling speech at the Chappaqua gathering on Saturday.

Colonel Herndon of Alabama who is running for Governor in that State remarked that if Greeley was defeated he did not care to remain in public life. It is the last chance for the southern people and if Grant is elected the whole white population of the South is remanded to the servitude of the last seven years.

The National Democratic Executive Committee [illegible] found no rooms yet [illegible] Mr Augustus Schell and Ethan Allen in their conference on Monday discussed the matter of a mutual arrangement as to finances but what the result was is not known.

Senator Thomas A Hendricks of Indiana who has been stopping at Mr Lindsall's for some days had an interview with Mr Greeley on Monday and left for home yesterday. He is the Greeley candidate for Governor of Indiana and expresses an assurance that Indiana will go heavily for the Greeley ticket.

The following letter from ex Senator James W Stewart of Michigan gives some most interesting statements concerning affairs among doubtful republicans in Washington:—

LETTER FROM EX SENATOR STEWART

DEAR SIR—The administration forces in Washington are [illegible] over the Pennsylvania situation [illegible]. I know [illegible] Forney. [illegible] Governor [illegible] arrives [illegible] and takes the stump for Greeley and Brown. [illegible] to Mr Sumner in an interview [illegible] on Friday [illegible] That settles the question [illegible] I think succeeded in removing some embarrassment he expressed as to coming forward. I tried to satisfy him [illegible] his duty to the negro [illegible] by his joining us and the question was not whether [illegible] practically realize the rights granted to them by law but whether the rights [illegible] secured by the preservation of our Liberal Republic against Caesarism. THE GERMAN DEMOCRATS.

Action of the German Union Democratic General Committee Last Night—Enthusiastic Endorsement of Greeley and Brown.

The German Democratic Union General Committee, Coroner Schirmer presiding met at the Teutonia Assembly Rooms last night, when the Executive Committee through Mr Goettman, its chairman, submitted a report endorsing the action of the Democratic National Convention at Baltimore in nominating Horace Greeley and Gratz Brown, the Presidential nominees of the liberal republicans and in endorsing the platform of the Cincinnati Convention, declaring that they hail with satisfaction the action of that convention and pledging that they will support the ticket to insure its election. Further, that they call upon all German voters, in the interest of democratic principles, and for the sake of local State and national reform of general progress and of individual and national rights to agitate during the campaign for Greeley and Brown to insure their election.

These resolutions were passed by an enthusiastic and unanimous vote, notwithstanding a loud and angry protest by one delegate named Herz Stern, who in disgust left the hall.

A resolution was also passed declaring that the present Presidential campaign is not an agitation of one party against another, but a rising of the people against corruption and usurpation—a struggle of patriotism against a corrupt administration. It was, therefore, further resolved to appoint a committee of seven to confer and jointly act with other central organizations on the subject. The committee was composed of Messrs Dr Mierson Henry Peter, Dr P Merkel, A Fickhoff, Carl Weidling, Magnus Gross and Jacob Koelmer.

SPICE OF THE CAMPAIGN.

Greeleyotypes and Grantographs.

The following bits of political personalities are from the Albany Evening Journal (Grant organ) —

"They ought to have begun talking about nominating Greeley but not to have actually made him the candidate till four years hence. By that time we would have become used to it and perhaps, reconciled. As it is the thing comes too sudden." So said a democrat to us.

A democrat was asked the other day for whom he would vote. His answer was we give it literally, "For Greeley, damn him." That's the way many of them feel about it.

Our democratic friends haven't as much to say about "black republicanism" since they have made the blackest of black republicans their standard bearer.

Gratz Brown's nomination has produced one result. For twenty five years since his graduation at Yale he had been as neglectful of his Alma Mater as she had been forgetful of him. He now visits her to claim relationship. In doing so he assumed to intimate that she was not as smart as she pretended to be, at which the old lady took offence. So Brown didn't make much of his visit, except to display his vanity.

"I might have stood Greeley or Greeley without Brown but to be asked to swallow both turns my stomach," said a democrat the other day. And it certainly is a nauseous dose for "an old liner"—these republican pills, with no sugar coating!

The Hartford Courant says Voltaire used to say of the diminutive territory of Geneva, "When I shake my wig I cover the whole republic with powder." It is the prouder boast of Horace Greeley, "When I put on my white hat I cover the whole democratic party with felt."

An old democrat from the backwoods, arguing in one of the hotel parlors at Baltimore in favor of regularly nominating Greeley, said —"If you nominate Greeley here he is the best democrat living, but if you adjourn without nominating him he is the same d—d old fool that he always was."

The Argus wants to know why General Grant should be elected. One very good reason is because his opponent is according to the Argus a "financial abortionist" and an "incompetent addle pate."

The Chicago Post (Grant) speaks of the assemblages who listen to speeches in favor of Greeley as "squawking audiences."

Observes the Chicago Post —"Mr Greeley is a 'mucker' and a 'temperenzler' in the eyes of the Germans of the land, and because he is he cannot receive their votes. He cannot be forgiven for his muckerthum, simply because he is, as some say, a free thinker."

The Musquash (Phoebus! what a name!) Times goes for Greeley. It is a good agricultural name, nevertheless.

Williamsport, Pa, boasts of a number of Greeleyized republicans.

In Vermont Greeley clubs are springing up among all the green hills and valleys.

An old democrat of Pennsylvania declares the growing sentiment in favor of Greeley to be "like a prairie tornado that sweeps over the country, coming from no one knows where."

THE TAMMANY RING.

The Cases of Tweed and Connolly Before the Supreme Court.

IMPOSING ARRAY OF COUNSEL.

A Formal Decision Suggested by Judge Miller.

CHARLES O'CONOR'S REMARKS.

Opening Argument for the "Boss" and Ex-Comptroller.

THE CHIEF QUESTIONS.

Can the State Sue and What Would Become of the Money?

ALBANY, July 16 1872.

Pursuant to the proclamation of the Governor the Supreme Court met in extraordinary General Term Judges Miller Potter and Parker presiding at the Capitol to day to hear the arguments in the appeal against the decision of Judge Hogeboom overruling the demurrer in the case of the People of the State of New York vs William M Tweed and others.

The following counsel appeared for the defendants:—David Dudley Field, Edwin W Stoughton, William Fullerton, John I Burrill, John H Reynolds, W O Bartlett and Elihu Root.

The following counsel appeared for the people:—Charles O'Conor, Samuel J Tilden and Wheeler H Peckham, who now appear as respondents, the defendant having appealed from Judge Hogeboom's decision against the demurrer. The demurrer was that the State had no right to bring the suit. Messrs William A Beach and Samuel J Courtney also appeared for Connolly and Fields.

THE CASE OF WILLIAM M TWEED

The case of Tweed was called and Judge Miller suggested that as the case was to go to the Court of Appeals the Court make a formal decision.

Mr D D Field said there could be no appeal to the Court of Appeals without an order of judgment and asked what was to be done as to a judgment. If the Court of Appeals reverse the decision here it will order a new trial and there must be a trial and an investigation now in order that the Court of Appeals may have something to act upon.

Messrs W A Beach and W O Bartlett put forth similar views referring to the decision of Judge Hogeboom who was too sick to examine the matter and render an opinion.

Judge Miller said the Court would hear argument and referred to the fact that the Court below understanding that the case was going forward in any event had rendered a formal decision.

Mr D D Field said that though these cases have been up four or five times no opinion had really been received as yet.

Mr W A Beach said that he hoped an arrangement could be made whereby these cases could be carried directly to the Court of Appeals for final action.

Judge Miller said that might be done by stipulation.

D D Field—Certainly. Let a judgment for a nominal sum be fixed upon and not entered on the record of the Court, and the case be thus carried up.

Judge Miller said it seemed to him that that was the best way. It was an excellent suggestion. What do you say to that on the other side?

STRONG OBJECTIONS TO A STIPULATION

Mr O'Conor—We will take the proposition into consideration as the argument progresses. We are dealing with numerous parties and numerous counsel and how far we may agree with the stipulation it is doubtful. I am strongly impressed with the belief that it is our duty to push this case on without listening to any form of proposition from the other side. He had been coerced by his associate to accept terms in one of the cases and when everything was done the [illegible] arrangement [illegible]. He felt that he and his associates had done well in not letting a single one of the defendants escape. He felt that they had done the public service in so acting. Therefore unless he could see a reason otherwise he would advise his associates not to make any bargains or arrangements of this character. He said counsel might talk and could talk for a long time on both sides but he insisted that there was no doubt respecting the points raised. He was willing to stake his reputation on the declaration that when this case reaches the Court of Appeals not a single Judge will feel any doubt and not one will sustain the points raised by the defendant.

The counsel was proceeding in this manner when Judge Miller reminded him that he was

DISCUSSING THE MERITS OF THE CASE

W A Beach—That is so, and I hope we will be heard in reply.

Mr O'Conor disclaimed discussing the merits of the case.

D D Field claimed the right of replying.

Mr O'Conor insisted that he was only protesting against magnifying these points.

D D Field rose to reply and demanded the right to do so.

The Court consulted and said the counsel would be given abundance of time to answer in his argument. Some conversation ensued between the Court and counsel as to the time to be occupied in arguments. The Court thought the Tweed and Connolly cases ought to be argued together. It was finally agreed to give four hours to each side arguing the Tweed and Connolly cases together as they are similar and in the meantime the Court said they hoped the counsel would consider the proposition for a stipulation.

MR. STOUGHTON OPENS THE ARGUMENT FOR TWEED

Edwin W Stoughton then proceeded to open the argument for the appellants. After referring to the fact that an appeal in all cases is provided for he said the decision here took the form of a judgment and proceeded to show the importance of a judgment when rendered by this Court. He said this was a suit at law, seeking to recover a judgment for $6 000 000 obtained, as it is claimed, by fraud. The first question was can the people on the complaint made maintain an action? and he turned to an act entitled "An act to make provision for the government of the county of New York." He read the act to show that the officials named therein were empowered as county officials to issue bonds raise money on them and deposit the money with the County Treasurer. "Does this not show," he asked, "that there were county authorities to do all acts therein specified and who owned the money deposited with that treasurer? Has the Court any doubt on this point?" That was the question underlying this case and to answer disposes of it. In ordinary cases he would proceed no further but this was a suit brought by the people of the State of New York to recover this money. It was nowhere averred that the people of the State owned this money, nowhere averred that they controlled it while in the hands of the County Treasurer. No Court has yet determined that the people of the State owned this money raised on bonds issued by the county, and for which the county pledges its faith.

The counsel then proceeded to detail the proceedings of the Board of Audit. He also quoted the law authorizing the issue of the bonds and then asked if this Court would allow a county to set up as a defence that it could not pay them because all the money raised upon them had been wrongfully used. Would this Court say that the county was not liable, but that the State was and could pay when it pleased, because, forsooth, the Legislature of the State had authorized the county to issue the bonds? He said his respect for this Court would not let him detain the Court much longer on this point. The county officers had disposed of this money and the county is still liable,

BUT WHO OWNS THIS MONEY?

the county or the State? If in this case it belongs to the State does not the same idea apply to all other counties of this State, and if so, where is the authority? The counsel then argued at some length the obligation of the county to pay these bonds. He asked, could the State assume the obligation to pay these bonds? and called the attention of the Court to what the constitution said about the State assuming such obligations. He referred to the averment that the suits brought by the Supervisors are collusive, and brought only to interfere with the suits subsequently brought by the State. It would, as the Court knows, make no difference how many such suits were brought, provided the State was entitled to bring suit. Then why, he asked, is this averment made here? Therefore he could not see how the plaintiff's case could be strengthened by bringing these suits. He, as counsel, had no interest in those suits, he only wanted to see, when the legal axe falls, that it falls in a legal track and is wielded by a legal hand. He called attention to the fact that in the complaint there was no averment against Tweed of fraud. There was an averment that after the money was deposited in the bank he participated in its division, but even in this there is no averment of fraud on his part.

THE ARGUMENT FOR CONNOLLY.

Samuel J Courtney then opened the argument in the case of Connolly. He said this case, which is similar to the Tweed case, had been so ably presented by the counsel who had just taken his seat that but little was left for him to say. He commenced by referring to the declaration made by Mr O'Conor that no judge could or would sustain the point raised by the defence, that they were frivolous. Counsel maintained that Mr O'Conor was entirely mistaken, and cited the opinion of Judge Learned, as also that of Judge Hogeboom. The former declared it to be one of grave moment. Counsel read from Judge Learned's opinion to sustain what he said. He said it would not do to treat so important a case as this on the mere dicta of the counsellor upon the cry of "thief thief."

The counsel then read a report of the proceedings as published by the Associated Press before Judge Hogeboom saying that it was the correct report, and that which was published by the counsel on the other side W H Peckham a few days afterwards, was incorrect. He read this report to show that Judge Hogeboom also considered the point raised important—so important that in his condition of health he could not consider upon and render a mere pro forma decision so that the case might be carried up. The counsel then asked if it was not time for the counsel on the other side and the public press to cease their clamor that the points raised by the defendants were of no consequence. As to the case of Mr Connolly the complaint had not been verified by even

THE FATHER OF ALL THE COMPLAINTS,

Mr Tilden. Counsel then stated the case of Connolly and claimed that in time it would be clearly shown that he was entirely innocent. Counsel then at some length argued the point as to the right of the State to step in and bring suits such as these. He denied this right and challenged the production of authority warranting it. He found no authority given to these gentlemen by the Corporation Counsel to bring these suits but he did find a correspondence by which it was proposed to institute such proceedings as would secure the return of this money to those to whom it belonged. These proceedings have been instituted. The only charges against Connolly were that he had neglected his official duties and the amounts are so large that there is suspicion of fraud. In answer to this we say, governed by statute and we insist that the people of this State have no right to call him to account for neglect of official duties even were he guilty of it. Where is the authority that gives the Attorney General power to bring these suits? The action is brought to recover money lost by his neglect of duty. To whom did this money belong? Did it belong to the State? It belonged to the city and county of New York. Then by what right do the People of the State claim it? Who are the obligors mentioned in the bonds? Is it the people of the State? No. It is the people of the county of New York and they are the ones, then the only ones who are liable to pay them and the money to pay them is to come from the taxable inhabitants of the city and county of New York. The people of the State have no interest whatever in them. Suppose, he asked, the State recovers this money what will it do with it? This was one of the questions which troubled Judge Hogeboom. He asked What will eventually become of the money? Who will get it? Where will it go to and I ask where would it go? Would it go into the State Treasury to be used in improving its canals or other great public improvements? The counsel referred to the effort made to legitimize this action by introducing a bill in the last Legislature. The bill was introduced by Mr Tilden a member of the House and this action counsel said he had anticipated. He had said it would be done and he was assured it would not be, yet it was done, and he declared that this was a cognovit of the fact that their action could not be maintained in Court.

CONNOLLY'S DUTIES WERE OFFICIAL,

SO FEARFUL, SO CONVINCED

were they that they could not sustain themselves, they were obliged to resort to the device of securing an ex post facto law to assist them. The bill failed however. It never became a law. Counsel then referred to a law which appropriated $50,000 to pay these counsel. That law directed the county of New York to pay these gentlemen. This was a recognition of the county for this purpose. Counsel argued further against the plea of the interest of the people of the State in the matter citing numerous authorities. He would not discuss the existence and organization of the Board of Supervisors of New York leaving that to the counsel to follow him. Counsel concluded with an earnest appeal to the Court to pass upon the question with that impartiality characteristic of it.

MR O'CONOR'S REPLY

Mr Charles O'Conor followed saying he agreed with the counsel on the other side who proposed to leave out of discussion here the matter concerning the Board of Supervisors as unimportant and irrelevant at this time. By so doing the Court would find themselves rid of much perplexity. He would therefore ignore all relative to that matter. He then read from the law authorizing the issue of bonds explaining its provisions as he read. The Comptroller who is not the County Treasurer was to pay this money raised on the bonds to the holders of claims against the city and county. It was the Comptroller who was to pay out this money. The bonds were issued the money was raised and the Comptroller paid the claims. This was all regular under the law, except in the matter of paying fraudulent claims. When Mr Courtney alluded to the bill passed by the Legislature providing $50 000 for the fees of counsel in these cases Mr O'Conor stated that he did not receive any such money.

Mr Courtney replied that he did not say he did, but the bill was passed making that appropriation nevertheless.

Mr O'Conor said that he did not receive a cent of the money neither did Mr Tilden. Their services had been given gratuitously.

Here the hour for recess arrived when the Court took a recess till four o'clock P M.

Afternoon Session.

On the reassembling of the Court at four P M, Mr O'Conor continued his argument. After explaining how these bonds were authorized he asked who was to suffer from the misdoings in the matter? It was not nor would be the bondholder, because he had parted with his money in good faith, and the bonds were issued to him by the proper officers and under authority of law. He would be paid in full. Then who was it he asked again who was to suffer? It was the taxpayer or he who would be the taxpayer when and as the bonds became due. He contended that this money was never in the county treasury and if it ever had any lodgment there it was, according to a proper construction of the law, improperly there. The bonds were to be issued, money raised upon them and that money used to pay certain claims. The Comptroller was to pay these claims with this money. He was not to deposit it in the county treasury and therefore that department never had any possession or control over it. He then returned to the question as to

WHO WAS THE INJURED PARTY,

and that was the tax payer—persons perhaps now unborn. The corporate authorities—the Board of Supervisors—are not the ones who are to pay these bonds. The bonds are to be paid by taxation only. He asked "Then is any body, any entity to be injured—any one, in short but the taxpayer," and then he said, "no individual taxpayer can bring a suit to recover this money no one can bring this suit but the people of the State represented in their sovereign corporate capacity."

Mr Stoughton asked who it was that owned this money?

Mr O'Conor said if such a question was relevant he had but one answer to make and that was that the State of New York owned it. The State authorized the issue of the bonds which took the money from the people of the State. Counsel argued at considerable length the point as to whom the money belonged. He put the case thus:—Agents of the State were authorized to raise, say $1 000,000. They raised instead $6,000,000. The State says, "You have who cannot get it back again but I will step in and make you give it to me. It is my money, which you raised through my authority. Local governing corporations, he said, may, like all other corporate bodies 'defend actions brought against them and prosecute actions in defence of their corporate or official property or rights.' But they do not in any general legal sense represent the local population or the local taxpayers past, present or to come, nor is it their duty nor have they any authority, to institute suits or proceedings to preserve or vindicate any public or private right of such persons to sustain this claim. He quoted various authorities and he, therefore, asked if the State has not the right to bring this suit who has? He held that the county was only liable as the servants of the State. Every dollar was to come out of the citizens of the State. Counsel then discussed the organization powers and duties of the Board of Supervisors, holding that their powers and duties were of the most limited character. He pursued this point at much length.

Here Mr O'Conor was interrupted by a conversation between counsel and the Court as to the time to be taken on each side, when Mr. Beach said that he hoped the arguments would be concluded to-morrow as he had written to the President of the Court of Impeachment that he was engaged here and asking a postponement of the Barnard trial till Thursday. It was agreed that the argument would be so made as to be concluded to-morrow, and the Court thereupon adjourned, to meet at nine A. M. to-morrow.

DANGEROUS STABBING AFFAIR

Arrest of the Perpetrator—Ante-Mortem Statement—The Victim Spirited Away.

On Monday night Philip Hammerer, living at No. 224 West Thirtieth street, and Henry Meyer, both Germans, became involved in a quarrel, during which the latter stabbed his adversary in the abdomen, right side, inflicting, it is feared, a fatal wound. Meyer was promptly arrested by the Twentieth precinct police and committed to the cells to await an examination by the proper authorities. Dr Moeller, of West Thirty ninth street, who was called to attend Hammerer, found him suffering from a stab wound on the right side of the abdomen (over the anterior superior spine of the ileum), the stab having passed inward, backward and slightly upward, probably entering the abdomen. Although Hammerer was in no immediate danger of death, Dr Moeller thought it advisable that his ante mortem examination should be taken. In compliance with the Doctor's request Coroner Keenan subsequently called at 224 West Thirtieth street, and, much to his surprise, found that the wounded man had been removed to a house in Twenty ninth street, the number of which could not be learned. This looks very much as if Hammerer was less dangerously injured than was at first supposed.

DR. LIVINGSTONE.

[From the London Telegraph, July 4.]

Yesterday we were all children again, listening to the outlines of a tale of travel daring as Vasco di Gama's, solitary as Crusoe's, romantic as Marco Polo's. The story of Livingstone's marches through the heart of Africa's dark mystery was at last related in our columns, and by this time everybody knows broadly where he has been, what he has done, and how the enterprising American found him out at last, "stout, strong and undismayed," among the black faces of Ujiji. Such a narrative has seldom been heard even in the old times when the globe was young and unexplored; and before many generations have passed the planet will be so thoroughly traversed in all directions that the sense of novelty and strange revelations which makes this account so thrilling will have become a bygone possibility. Thus the public enjoyed yesterday a pleasure which our posterity can scarcely know—such a pleasure as Athens must have felt on hearing the "Euterpe" of Herodotus read; or Carthage, when Hanno came back in his galleys from outside the "Pillars of Hercules;" or the lieges of Ferdinand and Isabella, when the Spanish carvels sailed home with intelligence of the golden New World. The effect of reading so profoundly instructing a summary after the bare statement that our great traveller was safe and well, resembled that process in photography when the picture comes out upon the plate under the developing solution. We knew he was recovered to civilization with all the fruits of these long, anxious, hidden six years, during much of which the grave was not more silent to us than Livingstone. After many speculations, rumors, efforts and disappointments, we had heard authentic tidings; they grew clear and clearer—they were confirmed. He is safe, we said, and we shall have his story. What will it be? A little while longer, and out of the brief message grows up this complete picture, which will assuredly be placed in the gallery of history for ever. The mind delights to realize in imagination that glad moment when, after all sorts of perils, adventures and misadventures, the gallant and indefatigable Stanley won his way with a band which made up in noise for what they lacked in numbers to the outskirts of Ujiji town. We must all envy that American flag which was carried proudly at the head of the procession; and yet it happens seasonably just now in the hour of our agreement at Geneva that the "Stars and Stripes" should thus bring help to the lonely Englishman But will he be at Ujiji? Yes, there he is—"a pale-looking, gray-bearded white man, in a red woollen jacket, and upon his head a naval cap with a faded gold band." Stanley, at a glance, knows it is Livingstone, and Livingstone knows that Civilization has found him out, and brought aid, strength and security for all his harvest of toil and danger; but they are under the eyes of the grave Arabs, who judge men severely by "deportment." So England and America keep up their character demurely before Paganism, and not one excited word is spoken, though the Old and New World thus meet in a spot, as it were, outside the world. "Dr. Livingstone, I presume?" says Stanley, very quietly; and the Doctor smiles, and bows a calm assent; nor until hours after did the two men get together on the goatskins in the hut, where they could freely unpack their hearts, brimful of congratulations, human fellowships and eager questions and answers—with the news of all the world for six years past to tell on one side, and on the other the last secret of Africa to impart.

Mr. Stanley must some day tell us every sentence, every word of that memorable conversation; but, meanwhile, the gallant American communicates enough to furnish a sufficiently connected sketch of Livingstone's proceedings during the long period of his absence in the Libyan wilds. It was in March, 1866, that the Doctor left Zanzibar, and, following the left bank of the Rovuma River, made his way towards Lake Nyassa. All this region is well enough known by the expedition of search which Mr. Young led; for the traveller was traced step by step through Chibisa's country to the village of the fat King of the Lake, and was found, as all remember, to have gone on, well and hopeful, from the spot where the lying Johanna men gave out that he had been murdered. These fellows deserted out of fear of a Mazitu chief, and also through the bad behavior of Musa, from whom better things were expected. But Livingstone, as we had heard, got a fresh set of porters together, and struck off northward through the country, marked in the map with the name of Babisa, towards Lunda or Lucenda, and the Lake Tanganyika. In approaching Cazembe, which lies between the lakes, he crossed a thin stream, called the Chambezi, which is written on our maps under the name of the Lokanka, and represented as being tributary to the Zambesi. He followed this stream up and down with such pertinacity that the natives, we are told, thought he had gone mad, and said, "He has water in his head." But, nothing moved by their observations, he stuck to the Chambezi and satisfied himself that it had no connection with the great river of the similar name. He traced it through three degrees of latitude, and then made his way to Ujiji, whence he sent the last messages which were received. Again he started and explored the head of Lake Tanganyika, where he found the River Rusizi flowing into, not out of, the basin; and then, again returning to Ujiji, he seems to have crossed the Lake Tanganyika and to have travelled westward. Marching hence he entered a perfectly unknown land, that of "Manyema," and nearly perished of ulcers and a fever; but, recovering, he pushed on northwards and reached a broad lacustrine river called Lualaba, which he subsequently identified as the Chambezi by tracing them to a common point. Afterwards he followed this channel to within 180 miles of the Nile, as already explored. At this intensely interesting crisis his men deserted, and, having neither stores nor followers, he was constrained to make his way once more back to Ujiji, where he arrived only eighteen days before the brave American reached that spot.

Knowing all this, we can wonder no longer that Livingstone declines to come home to us. He has sent down his papers and collections; but on the 14th of March of the present year Mr. Stanley parted from the Doctor, leaving him indomitably bent on solving the question of those same tantalizing "one hundred and eighty miles," and also of "four fountains," said to supply a vast volume of water to the Lualaba, or Chambezi. And now, it will be asked, what is the upshot of these researches? The upshot—if Livingstone be right—is that the Chambezi is the Nile, and that the marvelous ancient river of Egypt flows from sources eleven whole degrees south of the Equator, instead of half a degree north of it! No maps existing will suffice to pilot the reader of this strange romantic story. Livingstone is a maker of maps—a writer of new names in the vast blank spaces of the Atlas, and, therefore, till we possess fuller descriptions and statistics, it is unsafe to draw any positive conclusions. But the general meaning of the narrative is, that the great traveller has found an important continuous stream which, rising as low south as Cazembe, runs steadily northward outside Tanganyika, and carries the explorer, as we suppose, in the direction of the Nyanzas and Uganda country of Speke and Grant—to the north, and apparently not only "to the Nile," but "by the Nile." If the interval which Livingstone has gone to explore connects the Chambezi and the known Nile, that amazing river runs through forty-two degrees of latitude, and the illustrious traveller has added nearly a thousand miles to its recorded course. In such a case it appears that the Victoria Nyanza must be regarded as but a tarn, and the Albert Nyanza a mere weir of the antique flood, whose veritable fountains run from far behind the mythical "Mountains of the Moon." But how does Tanganyika drain? and where is the watershed of the Rusizi? and what mountains are there in the Cazembe or Babisa land, where the new and suddenly important "Chambezi"—a mere conjectural streamlet hitherto on the map—has its origin? Such are the questions which geographers will burn to ask, and some of them will say that Livingstone may yet find his Lualaba going off eastward to the unknown, or northward to the Desert. If it should, indeed, turn out that this fearless and unconquerable man has really traced the very mother springs of the mighty river, what a glory for him, and what a crowning credit for the land of Park, Denham, Bruce, Speke and Grant! That the doctor should turn back from such a quest was impossible. Refreshed, reinforced, and put into communication with us by the gallantry of the New York reporter, he will finish his business with the Lualaba or Chambezi River; and, as likely as not, the next white man who sees his face will be "Baker Pasha," at present founding a new kingdom for the Viceroy of Egypt upon what, albeit so very remote, we can no longer call with confidence the "head waters of the Nile."

Far surpassing everything else in interest is the information which, through the courtesy of the representative of the NEW YORK HERALD in London, has been afforded to the English press respecting the discovery of Dr. Livingstone. Far surpassing everything else yet achieved in the way of journalistic "enterprise" is the discovery of the great African explorer, about whose fate, it may be said without metaphor, every civilized State has been painfully anxious for years past, by the special commissioner of a daily newspaper. We are accustomed to laugh on this side of the Atlantic at the rage for "big things" manifested by our American kinsmen, but it is not only with satisfaction but with a kindred pride we express our admiration at the wonderful undertaking not only conceived but carried to a successful issue by our New York contemporary. While governments were hesitating and ultimately refusing to grant the necessary supplies for an expedition in search of Dr. Livingstone, the proprietor of the NEW YORK HERALD took the matter in his own hands, selected a gentleman eminently fitted for the enterprise he was called upon to undertake, gave him carte blanche in all that regarded expenditure, and sent him into the unknown regions of Central Africa to find Dr. Livingstone, if possible alive, but if not, to procure authentic information respecting his fate, and to secure, if the man existed, the results of his labors. Mr. Stanley, the commissioner in question, has been completely successful. He found Livingstone not only alive and well, but so busily engaged in his explorations that he has voluntarily deferred his return for another year and a half. Nor is this all. Not only is the great traveller safe—his labors have been crowned with complete success. He has discovered the streamlet from which the mighty Nile takes its origin, and he remains behind to satisfy himself by personal examination of a hitherto unexplored break of 180 miles in length between the lowest point to which he followed the stream in question and the uppermost point to which the Nile has been traced.

Starting from Zanzibar at the head of a large caravan, organized by himself, Mr. Stanley reached Unyanyembe on the 23d of January, 1871. At this point his troubles and difficulties began. The King of a neighboring territory through which he intended to pass positively refused permission, and Mr. Stanley in an evil hour consented to join his forces with those of some discontented Arab chieftains and make war on the potentate in question. The first day's operations were successful, one of the villages of King Mirambo having been carried by the assailants and the inhabitants put to the sword; but a day or two afterwards, Mirambo having drawn the invaders into an ambuscade, signally defeated them and killed five of Mr. Stanley's armed escort. The commissioner, luckily for himself, had been compelled by an attack of fever to return the day before to Unyanyembe, and there he received the account of the disaster, and had the additional mortification of seeing his little band dissolve, leaving him with only an Englishman named Shaw, an Arab boy and six of his armed escort. King Mirambo, luckily, was contented with the thrashing he gave his enemies, and did not, as was apprehended, follow up his success by attacking Unyanyembe, for, had he done so, we fear the fugitives Mr. Stanley was enabled to collect and marshal under the American flag would have made an ineffectual stand against the forces of Mirambo, flushed with victory, and we might have been deprived of the pleasure of following Mr. Stanley further in his travels. The result of this brief campaign was to convert the HERALD commissioner to a policy of "non-intervention" in African disputes; and, leaving the Arabs to continue the war on their own account if they so pleased, he formed the plan of taking a different route, avoiding the territory of the warlike Mirambo. To this, however, his former allies, the Arabs, raised numerous objections, and succeeded in frightening a great number of his followers, including Shaw, into desertion. Not discouraged, however, by these losses, Mr. Stanley collected as many as were still willing to accompany him, and started boldly across a desert and through a country completely unknown to him or any of his followers. Of this journey, which occupied several months, we have no particulars in the present summary. He seems, however, to have met with more than the usual obstructions which befall travellers at the hands of petty potentates and the chiefs of savage tribes; but at length, on the 3d of November, he came within sight of the town of Ujiji. It seems to be the correct thing to enter an African town with as much noise and éclat as possible, so Mr. Stanley arranged his band in the most imposing manner, and the American flag being unfurled, and the armed escort being directed to discharge their firearms as rapidly as they could, the little band entered the town, where Mr. Stanley saw among the bystanders "a pale-looking gray-bearded white man, whose fair skin contrasted with the sunburnt visages of those by whom he was surrounded." That man he rightly conjectured to be Dr. Livingstone.

The summary of Dr. Livingstone's adventures and labors during the past six years is necessarily not so ample as we could have desired. When the story of his assassination, told some years since by the Johanna men who accompanied him on his expedition, was tested, the unanimous conclusion arrived at was that these men were simply desirous of concealing the fact that they had deliberately deserted their employer. This surmise is now proved in every particular to have been correct. Very shortly after his departure from Zanzibar in 1866 Dr. Livingston was abandoned by his followers, and he was compelled afterwards to rely exclusively on the assistance of natives. At the end of this year he crossed what is described as "a thin stream" called the Chambezi, flowing in a northerly direction, and the course of this river he steadfastly followed from the beginning of 1867 till March, 1869, and the results of his observations were, first, that this river was not, as some Portuguese travellers had affirmed, identical with the Zambezi, which flows from Central Africa in a southeasterly direction to the coast, and, secondly, that it was in truth the source of the Nile. Assuming this supposition to be right, the Nile rises in eleven degrees south latitude, and consequently attains the unparalleled length of 2,600 miles. In 1869 he returned to Ujiji and despatched letters, which have never reached their destination. In June of the same year he renewed his explorations and struck on a broad river—the Lualba—which he traced backwards until he found, as he conjectured, that it was the continuation of the Chambezi, and then, resuming his investigations, followed the river until he reached a point only 180 miles distant from the point to which the Nile has been already traced. Here he was again deserted by his followers and compelled once more to return to Ujiji. It was only some three weeks after his return to this town that Mr. Stanley arrived there; but so desirous is Dr. Livingstone of fully completing his labors with respect to the source of the Nile and its complete course, that he proposes once more to return to the banks of the river he quitted and follow it steadily up to the point already reached by Speke. That his conclusions are correct there can be no question, and it may now be taken as practically demonstrated that the Nile does not take its source in the lakes explored by Speke and Burton, but that the fountain stream is supplied many degrees farther south.

[From the London Daily News, July 14.]

Africa is fulfilling in a new sense her destiny as the nursery of lions. Mr. Stanley, the correspondent of the NEW YORK HERALD, has won for himself fairly the title to be the freshest and most attractive lion of the society of Manhattan. The extraordinary narrative of his explorations in search of Dr. Livingstone, which he has just communicated to his journal and to the world, is one of the most exciting stories civilization has had since it chose to disbelieve the startling stories told by Bruce. We are willing to make every allowance for the strength of the effects naturally thrown in where a narrator is his own hero, and has reason to congratulate himself on the success of a daring and apparently hopeless enterprise. Mr. Stanley is a newspaper correspondent, detailing his own adventures for the benefit of the enterprising journal which sent him out. We may assume that he will put everything in the most picturesque light, and that he will not undervalue the successes or the difficulties of his own expedition. Still, the fact certainly remains that he found Dr. Livingstone; and not, as we think Sir H. Rawlinson conjectured, that Dr. Livingstone found him. Mr. Stanley made his way from the sea, over deserts and through fiercely hostile tribes, until, after adventures that almost seem incredible, he came upon the object of his search, communed with him, spent weeks and months with him, and has brought back to civilization a narrative of Dr. Livingstone's occupations, taken from the great explorer's own lips.

Little more than a year ago Mr. Stanley started from Zanzibar on his mission. He made his way, at the head of a large caravan organized by himself, to Unyanyembe. Thence he proposed to continue his journey to Ujiji, the village which has lately been made famous as the supposed resting place of Dr. Livingstone. To get there, however, was not easy. A King interposed his divine right. Mirambo, Sovereign of Ujowa, whose name it will be useless to seek in the "Almanack of Gotha," had become tired of foreign visitors and refused to allow a passage to any caravan across his soil. Mr. Stanley did exactly what Cortez would have done under the circumstances: he allied himself with some of the enemies of the King, and proposed to fight his way through. Some very spirited scenes of la petite guerre succeeded. In the first day or two the gallant correspondent and his Arab allies were victorious; but the American chief caught a fever and had to quit the scene of fight, and fortune for a while passed over to the banner of the churlish King. The latter, indeed, now displayed some military skill. He defeated the Arabs, killed some men of Mr. Stanley's own escort, and had very nearly spoiled the enterprise of the NEW YORK HERALD. Several of the correspondent's own men and nearly all his Arab allies deserted him; and the victorious Mirambo was advancing to attack Unyanyembe itself. Mr. Stanley, however, had by this time recovered from his illness. He rallied some hundred and fifty fugitives, put the town in a state of defence by barricading several houses and hung out the flag of the Stars and Stripes. Perhaps it was the defiant attitude of the village, perhaps it was the sight of the Star Spangled Banner, which awed the King of Ujowa. He paused in his march of conquest, took thought and retreated. Mr. Stanley, however, did not care to involve himself any further in the politics and wars of the region. He resolved on trying to reach Ujiji by a more northerly route which would take him out of the range and ban of the inhospitable Mirambo. In many a romantic story the hero who has lost his way and sees no chance of otherwise finding it again escapes from every difficulty by the simple process of throwing the reins upon his horse's neck and letting the sagacious animal go where he will. Apparently by some such appeal to chance or instinct, Mr. Stanley got along. The Arabs assured him that the northerly route was an impossibility, and succeeded in frightening many of his followers into desertion. But the intrepid American had made up his mind to go that way, and that way he went. His men fell off from him; he had the utmost difficulty in obtaining an escort, or bearers for his baggage; he had to traverse a district unknown to the Arabs themselves for hundreds of miles; he was in constant difficulty and danger from the rapacity and treachery of the chiefs of hostile tribes. It certainly is not easy to imagine an enterprise more full of toil and of peril than this strange journey of a lonely American, surrounded by a small and reluctant escort, through a trackless desert, or amid tribes whose very names and characters were utterly unknown. Mr. Stanley passed on, and succeeded On the 3d of last November he came in sight of Ujiji. He was resolved to enter with dignity. He formed his escort into as imposing procession as he could arrange on the spur of the moment. He displayed the American flag in the van. He ordered his escort to keep firing their guns and pistols as incessantly as though they were celebrating the Fourth of July. Thus the cortége entered Ujiji, the conquering hero himself coming last. The effect was tremendous. The Ujijians poured out in crowds, with shouts and beatings of their rude drums, to welcome and wonder at the unknown visitor. It is difficult, perhaps, not to smile at the thought of this triumphant march. It is wholly impossible not to admire the daring and perseverance which it crowned. Nothing more heroic and more ludicrous, more oddly suggestive of Pizarro and of Astley's, has been carried out and described in the history of modern adventure.

Mr. Stanley's grand success met him almost at the moment of his entering Ujiji. He saw in the crowd a pale-looking, gray-bearded white man, in whom he recognized the object of his search, Dr. Livingstone. Mr. Stanley's taste for dramatic description and action did not, even in that exciting moment, desert him. He at once reflected that any expression of emotion would lower him in the eyes of the Ujijians, and he, therefore, only accosted Dr. Livingstone with a distant and stately courtesy. We certainly could excuse the American correspondent if his feelings of delight and pride had been too much for him at such a time. He had done a great thing; he had made a complete success. He had waited until Dr. Livingstone and he were alone before he gave vent to his emotions. Naturally, there was much to be said between these two men. Mr. Stanley had to tell Dr. Livingstone the news of all the startling events over which Europe and America have speculated and wondered for years back. Dr. Livingstone is described as full of energy, courage and hope—with faith in his own work wholly undimmed, and with new and unexpected discoveries to supplement his past and cheer his future labors. He explained to Mr. Stanley the circumstances under which the famous Johanna men—creatures apparently well qualified to rival the fame of the ancient Cretans—came to send abroad the mendacious stories of his death. He explained the nature of the discoveries he has more lately made and of the tasks which he sets to himself as still to be accomplished, and which we are told are to occupy nearly two years more. Mr. Stanley spent several weeks in company with Dr. Livingstone. They travelled together to Unyanyembe, whence in March last the correspondent started for the coast, leaving the illustrious explorer to continue researches which are the appointed work of his life.

Such is the substance of the extraordinary narrative which has reached us. We do not stop to consider the value and importance of the geographical discoveries which are pointed to by Mr. Stanley as the fruit of Dr. Livingstone's later researches. The personal narrative will have just now the deeper interest for the public. The one fact, that at Ujiji Mr. Stanley found Dr. Livingstone alive, well and full of hope; that he conversed with him, and dwelt with him for months, and was allowed to share his projects—this fact alone will overshadow all other facts, conjectures and speculations for the moment. We have taken the narrative just as we find it. The central facts can hardly be open to any doubt or qualification of a serious kind. Mr. Stanley has conferred a great service on the world by rendering that at last a certainty which for many years had never ceased to be, to some extent, a matter of doubt—the safety of Dr. Livingstone. We are not disposed to quarrel with any little tendency to personal self-glorification over an exploit which was so successful. Few things in the romance of travel and adventure seem to us more striking than that first meeting with the long-lost explorer among the wild crowd in the African village. Perhaps it only wants a poet to render Mr. Stanley's first sight of Dr. Livingstone as impressive as Cortez' first glimpse of the far ocean from the peak in Darien.

"Dr. Livingstone, I presume?" said Mr. Stanley, slowly advancing, with a courteous bow. "Yes," was the laconic reply. And so, after years of uncertainty, the great traveller has been found. At Ujiji, a pleasant little spot somewhere in the interior of Africa, he has been interviewed by the "Special Commissioner" of the NEW YORK HERALD. The great qualities of the Anglo-Saxon race enabled both men to maintain their reserve—they did not fall weeping into one another's arms as two Frenchmen would have done. We have even reason to be thankful that they did not altogether miss one another as people often do in a ballroom, for want of a formal introduction. "A dignified Arab chief" was standing by, but he appears to have been painfully wanting in good manners, and the two perfect strangers were thus forced to make themselves known to each other in this quite unceremonious way. With the assured safety of Dr. Livingstone the occupation of the Royal Geographical Society may be said to terminate. So long as his existence remained uncertain he belonged as of right to that speculative body. The uncertainty [illegible] what [illegible] have for a long time formed their sole title to the world's attention. But, now when fiction has to be exchanged for fact, the great traveller passes into other hands. Henceforth Mr. Stanley will have the exclusive right to stand between the great traveller and the public. The work of the Geographical Society is complete, and in the joy felt at the Doctor's safety we are disposed to look charitably even upon such labors as theirs. But Mr. Stanley's attainment is substantial. He has not talked or reported. He has actually seen the great traveller and the news he brings will be everywhere joyfully received. It may be that with thankfulness at the discovery there may mingle some feeling of shame that the care of one who represents so well the enterprise of England should be left to the newspaper correspondent of a foreign paper.

[From the Manchester Guardian, July 4.]

A summary of despatches received from Mr. Stanley, the intrepid American who searched for and found Dr. Livingstone, appears in our columns to-day. A certain amount of mystery which the fuller publication will doubtless clear up hangs over the question why this information was not received before. Mr. Stanley left Zanzibar towards the end of June, 1871, and, after many delays and repulses, made his entry on the 3d of November into Ujiji, where the lost English traveller had already arrived. It might be supposed that the homeward route would be more expeditious than the outward one, and yet it is not until an interval of double the length—namely, nine months—has elapsed that authentic intelligence of the joyful meeting of the white men reaches the seacoast. All is well, however, that ends well. The adventures of the illustrious explorer during the time he was hidden from view seem to have followed pretty closely the course attributed to them by speculation. The chief contribution made to science by his latest labors appears to be the discovery that the River Rusiji, known previously to exist to the extreme north of Lake Tanganyika, flows into the lake instead of out of it, from which it is inferred that Tanganyika cannot be the source of the Nile. In place of this theory Dr. Livingstone advances the proposition that a stream called the Chambezi, which had been accounted by the Portuguese the head water of the Zambesi, but which he found to be flowing in an opposite or northerly direction, affords the true solution of the geographical problem of ages. Unfortunately, after following the course of this river for hundreds of miles, and when within 180 miles of that part of the Nile which has been already traced, our countryman was obliged by the desertion of his followers to turn back from the goal and retire to Ujiji. With indefatigable perseverance he remains in Africa to resume and complete the exploration of the district which he was compelled to leave unvisited, and gives himself sixteen or eighteen months for the task. It is somewhat remarkable that no mention is made of the subterranean road, with villages, the examination of which was stated in the earliest form of the information received from Mr. Stanley to be the principal object of Dr. Livingstone's stay in the country.

[From the Liverpool Post, July 4.]

The despatches of Mr. Stanley, the intrepid correspondent sent out at the sole expense of the proprietors of the NEW YORK HERALD to find Dr. Livingstone have been communicated in advance to the English papers. They will be found in extenso in another column. Singularly enough but a very short time elapsed between the time when Livingstone arrived, sick and destitute, at Ujiji and the entrance of Stanley into the same place. Dr. Livingstone appeared in Ujiji on the 16th of October, 1871, and the American entered on the 3d of November. The account given of the meeting is almost dramatic. "As the procession entered the town Mr. Stanley observed a group of Arabs on the right, in the centre of whom was a pale-looking, gray-bearded white man, whose fair skin contrasted with the sunburnt visages of those by whom he was surrounded. Passing from the rear of the procession to the front, the American traveller noticed the white man was clad in a red woollen jacket, and wore upon his head a naval cap, with a faded gilt band round it. In an instant he recognized the European as none other than Dr. Livingstone himself; and he was about to rush forward and embrace him, when the thought occurred that he was in the presence of Arabs, who, being accustomed to conceal their feelings, were very likely to found their estimate of a man upon the manner in which he conceals his own. A dignified Arab chieftain, moreover, stood by, and this confirmed Mr. Stanley in his resolution to show no symptom of rejoicing or excitement. Slowly advancing towards the great traveller, he bowed and said, 'Dr. Livingstone, I presume?' to which address the latter, who was fully equal to the occasion, simply smiled and replied, 'Yes.' It was not till some hours afterwards, when alone together, seated on a goat skin, that the two white men exchanged those congratulations which both were eager to express, and recounted their respective difficulties and adventures."

THE IRISH PRESS.

[From the Irish Times, July 4.]

We must concede to the spirit and enterprise of the late proprietor of the NEW YORK HERALD the honor of tracking out the course pursued during five long years by Dr. Livingstone, and of communicating the first full and trustworthy report of his discoveries to the world. It is not pleasant to know that while the British government, appealed to over and over again to send out an expedition in search of Livingstone, faltered, hesitated and ultimately refused, one of the representatives of the New York Press bravely penetrated into the vast depression of Central Africa, and found the famous traveller elate with his recent discoveries. From henceforth the names of Bennett and of Stanley will be combined in the history of this last and greatest of Livingstone's discoveries. The proprietor of an American newspaper found money, means and zealous men, when Mr. Lowe could not feel himself justified in expending £1,000 from the Exchequer to search for one whose name is a household word in all civilized nations.

Mr. Stanley, who had his own difficulties and dangers to encounter, caught the first glimpse of Livingstone at Ujiji, a town on the eastern side of Lake Tanganyika. Travel and toil had told on Livingstone. Stanley saw "a pale looking, gray bearded white man, whose fair skin contrasted with sunburnt visages of those by whom he was surrounded. The white man was clad in a red woolen jacket, and wore upon his head a naval cap, with a faded gold band around it." We can fancy the triumphant joy of Stanley and the quiet happiness of Livingstone. The latter had not been forgotten in his wanderings. The American flag, displayed by the shore of the great African lake, told him from what country these friends in the desert came.

The numerous and sometimes apparently well authenticated reports of Livingstone's death which from time to time excited such sorrow in these countries were all spread by his cowardly attendants, who fled from him and excused their treachery by falsehood. The difficulties experienced by Livingstone in this last exploration seem to have been greater than any which delayed his enterprise before. At one time he was compelled to lie up for six months through ulcers on his feet. When Stanley left him, however, full of hope and spirit, Livingstone was about to start to complete the greatest of all his discoveries.

Hitherto the statement iterated by the Portuguese, to the effect that the Zambezi and the Chambezi were the "same water," was generally assented to. Tracking the course of the Chambezi southwards, westwards and eastwards, as it wandered for many hundred weary miles, Livingstone has proved beyond all question that the Chambezi is altogether unconnected with the Zambezi. Further, he identifies the Chambezi with the Lualaba, and proves that the "mysterious and ancient Nile" is but the continuation of the united streams. The great secret of Africa, which, from the days of Herodotus down to our own time, has puzzled mankind, is at length solved. Only 180 miles of country remain to be traversed—that part, namely, which extends from the meeting of the Chambezi with the Lualaba to the nearest point of the Nile. Home, country, friends, rest, are as nothing to Livingstone in comparison with the thorough completion of the great object of his life.

THE AMERICAN PRESS.

[From the Council Bluffs (Iowa) Republican, July 12.]

Some of the papers have seen fit to doubt the authenticity and veracity of the reports touching the safety of Dr. Livingstone. But now trustworthy despatches have been received from Mr. Stanley, the leader of the NEW YORK HERALD expedition, which set at rest any doubts upon the subject. Dr. Livingstone is alive, though not in good health, and his son will accompany Stanley to England, bearing messages and letters from him. He remains in Africa to discover, if possible, the sources of the Nile, a Quixotic scheme, not likely at the best to prove of any value to the world. And yet we must admire the persistent heroism of this man, who defies, even in the prosecution of a worthless idea, all sorts of peril, and seems in his devotion to it to court death itself.

[From the New York Commercial, July 16.]

The press of the country is properly complimenting the enterprise of the HERALD in sending an expedition into the interior of Africa to discover Dr. Livingstone. The credit of this bold enterprise is due entirely to Mr. Bennett. It is the first, we understand, of several startling movements which he intends to inaugurate soon. The young man don't mean to be behind his father in every undertaking that will add to the greatness of journalism.

[From the Worcester Spy, July 16.]

[From the New Brunswick Fredonian, July 13.]

The correspondent of the NEW YORK HERALD, Mr. Stanley, who penetrated the interior of Africa in search of Dr. Livingstone, is on his way to London, accompanied by a son of the illustrious Doctor. Mr. Stanley is the bearer of letters from the great explorer for the British government as well as for the family and friends of the long-absent Livingstone. Mr. Stanley states that when he left the interior of Africa Dr. Livingstone was unwell, but he was nevertheless determined to proceed with his explorations, and will not return home until he has completed the great work of ascertaining the sources of the Nile. The enterprise of the HERALD in sending an agent, at an enormous expense and risks, in quest of the long-lost traveller, justly ranks as one of the greatest journalistic feats of modern times.

AQUATIC NOTES.

The Inter-Collegiate Regatta is the most interesting event in the boating line at present in prospective in American waters, and will take place, provided the elements do not seriously object, on Tuesday, July 23, on the Connecticut River, at Springfield, Mass. Three crews arrived at the course from Yale College on the 6th inst., and other crews have since made their appearance, and are now busy at work with the oars. Josh Ward has charge of the Massachusetts Agricultural crew (who won last year); George Price looks after the students of Bowdoin College, and John Biglin is the mentor of the Amherst representatives. A series of exciting contests are expected.

The Potomac Regatta, about which the oarsmen and press of Washington and Georgetown, D. C., talked so enthusiastically several months since, has been abandoned. We are assured that this is due solely to lack of energy on the part of the projectors, for the people of the capital manifested a disposition to subscribe liberally toward the object.

A rowing regatta came off recently on Lake Quanisscitt, Wakefield, Mass., several thousand persons assembling to witness it. The single scull race was won by L. Johnson, and the double scull by W. L. Coon and E. Edgecomb. This is the fourth time Coon has been one of the victorious pair.

The flat regatta fixed to take place on the Allegheny river at Pittsburg, on the afternoon of the 13th instant, was postponed until the 20th, because of a freshet in the river.

An amateur regatta is to come off at Pettaquamscot Cove, Narragansett Heights, on August 3. Prizes are offered for four-oared and single-scull races.

William Dagnall, of the Moorhead Club of Pittsburg, Pa., has challenged William Albertson, of the Clipper, to row in shells, for $150 a side, on the Upper Monongahela course. John Snyder, of the Beck Club, has also challenged Ben Delsenroth, of the Sheridan, to pull three miles, for $100 a side, over the same course. They had a tilt last summer.

William Thomson, a gentleman well known in commercial circles, and David McCleary, a member of the press, rowed a scullers' race, for $50 a side, in Toronto Bay, on June 29, the former winning by about half a length.

A new club has been organized in Toronto, of which Henry O'Brien is president.

Samuel Archer, a leading citizen of Hoboken, has been elected Vice President of the Atlantic Boat Club.

Five tub races afforded amusement to a large number of spectators at Wedge pond, Winchester, Mass., on July 6. Charles Buxton won the first prize in the first race and Fred. Shepherd the second. In the second contest the winners were Eugene Ayer and Fred. Steele; third, H. A. Hatch and Robert Windsor; fourth (heavy weights), Briggs and Charles Marble; scrub race, George Baker and O. A. Dunce.

A four-oared match, for $100 a side, was made between the Clipper and J. M. White boat clubs, of Pittsburg, on July 13. They are to row two miles, with a turn, on the Allegheny River, 20th inst.

The Shatemuc Boat Club, of Poughkeepsie, held their annual review and regatta on the Hudson a few days since. The main event was a single-scull race, which was won by George Van Vliet, G. S. Burnap second, John Grubb third, T. R. Roosevelt fourth and John Reynolds fifth. A tub race followed, and was won by J. Whitehouse.

On the 6th inst. George E. Cooper and George Johnston, of Toronto, rowed from Tinning's wharf to Parkinson's Hotel, on the bay, for $100 a side, Cooper winning by half a dozen lengths.

The citizens of Sacramento, Cal., who interested themselves in the programme of amusement for the celebration of the Fourth of July, wisely appropriated money for a rowing regatta on the river. For a week before friends of the different parties who were to contest in the races discussed their merits to the exclusion of almost all other topics of conversation; and, as the time drew nigh, nearly the whole population of the city felt an interest in the matter. The first race of the day was for Whitehall boats, and it had three entries:—J. C. Green and W. A. Betts in the Minnie May; Chris. Johnson and Billy Rogers the General Lee, and Considine and "Brock" the Fashion. The General Lee won the race by several lengths. The second event was a skiff contest. Three boats appeared—the Joe Willett—crew, McDowell and Tean; the Old Rags—crew, McClain and Dougherty, and the Sudden Jerk—crew, J. C. Green and W. A. Betts. The Willets came in winner by twenty lengths. The third and big event was the four-oared shell race. Entered for this were the Bessie of Stockton—C. Baldwin, stroke; R. H. Dykman, William Daily, J. Murray, bow; the Challenge, of the Capital Club—James Denny, stroke; Hugh Denny, Peter Denny and John Denny, bow; the Neptune, of the Pioneer Club, of San Francisco—E. Nelson, stroke; John Coyle, M. Nelson and C. Lynch, bow; the Alpha, of the Undine Club—C. T. Patriarche, stroke; W. C. Clark, J. O. Chesley and S. C. Scoville, bow. After a most exciting contest the Challenge came home the winner and the Alpha second. Matches and regattas have already grown out of this race, and the boating gentlemen of the Pacific slope are in great glee.

Mark Addy, the well-known Manchester (Eng.) sculler, saved a young girl of sixteen, who had fallen into the River Irwell, from drowning, on June 24. The rescue was accomplished with great difficulty, Addy being much exhausted, and the members of the Manchester Nemesis Rowing Club are endeavoring to obtain the Royal Humane Society's medal for him.

Joe Sadler, champion sculler, is, we learn, making preparations to visit America again this season, as there is no likelihood of any one coming forward on that side of the water to dispute his right to the title, and there's more money to be picked up at regattas here than on the Thames and Tyne. He is having a shell built by Robert Jewett, of Dunston, and will, it is understood, put up at Josh Ward's, Cornwall, N. Y., during his stay. He may expect a cordial welcome from the oarsmen of the States and Canadas.

The Newcastle (Eng.) Chronicle of recent date says:—"The splendid white wood skiff built especially in New York for the use of Mr. Smith, of the Atalanta crew, at the recent Henley Regatta, has been purchased by Mr. James Taylor, of the Trafalgar Inn, Newcastle, on behalf of Major A. S. Stevenson, the President of the Tynemouth Rowing Club. The boat is now on inspection at Mr. James Hall's, the Elswick boathouse, and will, we understand, be used by Mr. William Fawcus and James Taylor in forthcoming engagements.

Single scull match between Robert Fulton, of St. John, and George Brown, of Halifax, rowed 12th of July, 1872, over a four-mile course, straightaway, at Digby, N. S. Brown rowed the Spanish cedar shell John Coney; Fulton the Spanish cedar shell A. C. Smith. Brown won. Time, 32 min. 12 sec.

YACHTING.

Bayonne Yacht Club Regatta—The Course, the Prizes and the Entries for To-Day's Contest.

The yachting event of to-day, should the weather prove auspicious, will be the sixth annual and fifth union regatta of the Bayonne Yacht Club. The contest is open to any yachts belonging to duly organized yacht clubs in the United States, and the list of entries below embraces some of the acknowledged fast vessels of their respective classes. The contest to-day will be for the following

PRIZES.

UNION PRIZES.—First, a prize for all cabin sloop yachts over 45 feet long on water line; second, a prize for all cabin sloop yachts under 45 feet long on water line; third, a prize for all yachts (open boats) over 24 feet and under 32 feet long, mean length; fourth, a prize for all yachts (open boats) over 18 feet and under 24 feet long, mean length.

CLUB PRIZES.—Two prizes for each class of yachts—one to be sailed for on time allowance and one (the Flag Officer's prize) to be awarded to the first yacht home, regardless of time allowance. No yacht shall win more than one club prize; if the yacht winning the Flag Officer's prize also wins the club prize on time allowance the same shall be awarded to the next yacht on time allowance.

The following are the entries for the regatta:—

FIRST CLASS SLOOPS.

Meta, Commodore G. A. Beling, Brooklyn Yacht Club.
Captain, Joseph Ellsworth, Brooklyn Yacht Club.
Kate, Rear Commodore R. Dillon, Brooklyn Yacht Club.
Qui Vive, Captain Clapham, Brooklyn Yacht Club.

SECOND CLASS SLOOPS.

Undine, Dr. Vondy, Jersey City Yacht Club.
Nettie B., A. C. Bush, Brooklyn Yacht Club.
Mary, S. P. Hill, Jersey City Yacht Club.
Watson, John H. Ellsworth, Brooklyn Yacht Club.
Sophia, C. M. Felt, Brooklyn Yacht Club.

FIRST CLASS SLOOPS.

Meteor, A. C. Bush, Brooklyn Yacht Club.
Jeannette, H. B. Pierson, Brooklyn Yacht Club.
Maud, W. A. Morris, Brooklyn Yacht Club.
W. T. Lee, C. M. Felt, Brooklyn Yacht Club.
Annie Mack, P. McMahon, Brooklyn Yacht [illegible]
Blossom, E. R. Tinson, Jersey City Yacht Club.

FOURTH CLASS SLOOPS.

Edith, J. Van Pelt, Stapleton Yacht Club.
Comet, Captain Ketchum, Jersey City Yacht Club.

THE COURSE.

For First Class—From the anchorage off Robin's Reef to and around the Lightship, rounding it from northward to eastward, and return to stakeboat off the Club House. Second class—From the anchorage off the Club House to and around the monument on Romer Shoal, rounding it from northward to eastward, and return to stakeboat off the Club House. All yachts to pass to the eastward of West Bank buoys Nos. 11, 13, 15, and to the westward of Fort Lafayette and monument on Romer Shoal, going and returning. Third class—From the anchorage off the Club House to and around Fort Lafayette, rounding it from northward to eastward, and return, sailing over the course twice. Fourth class—From the anchorage off the Club House to and around the Robin's Reef buoy, rounding it from northward to eastward, and return, sailing over the course three times. All yachts to turn home stakeboat from northward to westward.

The yachts will take up positions as follows:—Sloops, first class, in line to the westward of Robin's Reef Lighthouse. The second, third and fourth class sloops will start from an anchorage off the Club House. All yachts are to be in position before eleven o'clock on the morning of the regatta.

Should the wind be favorable to-day it is expected that the regatta will prove the most spirited in the annals of the club. In accordance with the custom of the Bayonne yachtsmen the termination of the day's sport will be celebrated by a grand ball at the hotel.

Yachting Notes.

The schooner yacht Josephine, N.Y.Y.C., Mr. Phœnix, which was capsized during a squall on Monday, between Bedloe's Island and Robin's Reef, was raised yesterday by one of the floating derricks, and will be towed into dock for repairs today. She sunk with her canvas all spread, and stood yesterday morning upon an even keel. Her club and private signals were flying from the fore and main all day, about ten feet above water, and attracted not a little attention from persons passing on the bay. The Josephine went down in about ten fathoms of water. Beyond the springing of her mainmast the vessel does not seem to have suffered much damage, exclusive of the natural effects of water soaking and the injury to her furniture and interior decorations.

The yacht Dauntless, N.Y.Y.C., Commodore Bennett, arrived yesterday morning, at eight o'clock, from Cowes, after a severe voyage occupying thirty-two days. She took the regular European steamer passage, and experienced almost continuous head winds after leaving the Scilly Isles, with occasional very rough weather, in which some of her light running rigging was carried away.

The sloop yacht Kingfisher, late Fanny, Mr. Perry Belmont, arrived at Newport from New York yesterday.

The schooner yacht Resolute, N.Y.Y.C., Mr. Hatch, is lying off the South ferry, Brooklyn.

The schooner yacht Halcyon, N.Y.Y.C., Mr. Smith, arrived at Newport, R. I., yesterday from New London.

The new sloop yacht Vision, N.Y.Y.C., Mr. Alexandre, is lying at Upper Quarantine, Staten Island. This vessel presents a rather peculiar outline, which has made her the subject of much comment in yachting circles. Her dimensions are as follows:—Length over all, 68 feet; breadth of beam, 20 feet; depth between decks, 6 feet; draught of water, 5 feet; length of keel, 47 feet; length of mast, 71 feet; topmast, 30 feet; main boom, 63 feet; gaff, 34 feet; tonnage, 60 tons. She was built at South Brooklyn by McGarrick and is a centreboard yacht, and has a very broad stern, with great overhang. There are very few yachts of her class and tonnage that carry such a spread of canvas as the Vision does, and her captain, Frank Baker, formerly of the Gracie, Addie and Tidal Wave, thinks she will show considerable speed. She has not yet made her appearance in any regatta, but in one or two impromptu spurts with the Meta and other fast sloops she has displayed good sailing qualities and good time.

The schooner yacht Eddie, Crescent City Yacht Club, arrived at Newport from New York yesterday.

A STRANGER KILLED BY A RAIL CAR.

On Monday evening, about half-past seven o'clock, a man, whose name is unknown, while attempting to jump aboard an emigrant car attached to a dummy engine belonging to the Hudson Railroad Company, corner of West and Jane streets, slipped and fell before the wheel, which passed over his neck, completely severing his head from the body. The remains were gathered up and sent to the Morgue to await the result of an investigation before Coroner Keenan. Deceased was about forty years of age, and dressed in dark clothes. The witnesses to the occurrence are John Lynch, of 528 West street, and Officers Fitzgerald, Doran and Miller, of the Ninth precinct.

Bankruptcy Cases—The Butler-Weigel Perjury Suit—A Distillery Libelled—Judge McCunn's Will—Sentences and Criminals in the General Sessions—Decisions.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Bankruptcy Cases.

Judge Blatchford called the calendar of bankruptcy cases yesterday in the United States District Court and set them down for hearing.

The General Butler-Weigel Perjury Suit.

Weigel, who was a lieutenant on General Butler's staff during the occupation of New Orleans by General Butler, and who was the principal witness in the case of Tilden against Butler, lately disposed of in the United States Court, and who now stands charged with perjury, was to have renewed his bond yesterday to answer to the charge at the October Term. In this he failed. By consent of the District Attorney the renewal was dispensed with, and the present bond, furnished at Baltimore, where Mr. Weigel was arrested, allowed to stand accepted.

An Illicit Distillery Seized.

Collector Blake, of the Thirty-second district, seized yesterday an illicit distillery in full operation, with all the necessary tools and two thousand gallons of mash, at 288 Front street. It was libelled in the United States District Court and taken in charge by the Marshal.

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONERS' COURT.

Commissioner Osborn has adjourned the case of the seaman Greig, charged with stabbing Captain Richmond, of the bark Sunshine, while on the high seas. Greig says he did not use the knife until the captain had wounded him three times with a pistol. The examination will be resumed on Friday.

SURROGATE'S COURT.

Judge McCunn's Will.

Before Surrogate Hutchings.

Yesterday the will of the late Judge McCunn was presented before Surrogate Hutchings for probate. The will devises property to legatees in Ireland, and there are consequently six weeks' citation of witnesses to appear. It is unofficially understood that the will directs that his remains shall be interred in the family vault in Ireland. The bulk of his real estate in this city he leaves to his widow. His estate in Ireland he devises to his two brothers in equal shares.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Recorder Hackett.

The first case disposed of yesterday was an indictment for robbery against John Landis. William Connors testified that early in the morning of the 9th of June as he was going out of a liquor store in Twenty-third street he was attacked by Landis and other men and robbed by him of $10 and a pair of sleeve buttons worth $10.

Michael Cannon and Timothy O'Connor were arrested hours after the robbery by a police officer simply because they were found in the company of Landis. As there was no evidence that they were with Landis when he robbed the complainant the jury rendered a verdict of not guilty.

Landis Brought Up Again.

William Ginan was tried upon a charge of grand larceny, the complainant being Samuel Miller, who, on the 3d inst., had stolen from him $193 in English gold coin and $40 in bills, at the corner of First avenue and Fifteenth street. There was no testimony against the accused, and by direction of the Recorder the jury promptly acquitted him. John Landis, who pleaded guilty to another charge, was brought out of the prison box, and Miller positively identified him as the man who stole his money.

The Recorder suggested to the Assistant District Attorney the propriety of trying Landis upon this charge, remarking that such a dangerous man ought not to be let off with five years' imprisonment.

John Landis, through his counsel, tendered a plea of guilty of grand larceny upon the complaint of Miller.

His Honor promptly sentenced the prisoner upon the first plea to the State Prison at hard labor for the period of five years, and directed that at the expiration of that term of sentence he be further incarcerated for five years.

The prosecuting officer stated that there was another charge against this prisoner, so that it will be seen that the Recorder has done the community a service by putting a notorious thief out of the way for ten years.

A Shoplifter Sent to Sing Sing for Ten Years.

Charles Williams, alias Samuel Phillips, a well known shoplifter, was tried for stealing a package of lace valued at $51 from the store of Herman Weckerlin, 110 Grand street, on the 17th of May. The porter of the store met the prisoner on the stairs, who dropped the package and ran away. He was pursued by the porter, and caught and delivered into the custody of an officer, from whom he escaped. He was rearrested a month after and positively identified. The indictment was for the second offence. It was shown that on the 20th of December, 1866, he pleaded guilty to an attempt at grand larceny, and was sentenced by Recorder Hackett to Sing Sing for two years and six months. The accused, who appeared to be very ill with consumption, went on the stand and positively denied having stolen the lace. He swore that on the 16th of May he was taken with hemorrhage of the lungs at his home in Grand street, Brooklyn, and was confined to his bed for three days. Mr. Stewart, in his address to the jury, exploded Mr. Williams' "alibi," and urged for the conviction of this professional shoplifter, who was well known to the police.

The jury rendered a verdict of guilty without leaving their seats, and the Recorder sentenced him to the State Prison for ten years, the punishment authorized by the law on conviction of larceny for the second time.

Felonious Assault.

Robert Kelly, charged with firing a loaded pistol at Robert Griffiths, on the 25th of June, with intent to do bodily harm, pleaded guilty.

The Recorder said that every man who felt aggrieved at the use of opprobrious epithets uttered by another and used his pistol, he (the Recorder) was going to teach a lesson by imposing a severe penalty in this case. Kelly was sent to the State Prison for five years.

Forgery of an Order for Catawba Wine.

William Walsh and Walter Brodhead, indicted for forgery in the third degree, pleaded guilty to the fourth grade of that offence. It appeared from the complaint that the defendants on the 14th of June forged an order upon Messrs. P. Leak & Co., 129 Broadway, for three cases of quarts and pints of Catawba wine. They were each sent to the State Prison for two years.

Another Stabbing Case.

John K. Mortimer was tried for a felonious assault and battery. Frank Smith, the keeper of a lager beer saloon at 41 Bowery, testified that on the 4th of May the prisoner entered his place, and conducted himself in such a disorderly manner as to necessitate his being ejected. He threatened that he would get square with Smith, and shortly after returned to the saloon, and, when being put out the second time, stabbed Smith in the chest and in the groin, inflicting dangerous wounds. The jury convicted Mortimer of an assault, with intent to do bodily harm, and, by direction of the Recorder, he was remanded to give him an opportunity of finding out whether mercy could be extended.

Alleged Homicide—Acquittal of the Accused.

Late in the afternoon James N. Carroll was arraigned upon an indictment charging him with killing Thomas Perry by striking him on the head with a hammer, inflicting a wound that proved fatal. The widow of the deceased, who lived in Harlem, proved that the prisoner and her husband were friends, and that on the 13th of February Carroll used abusive words to her, whereupon Perry called him to account. They had a quarrel, and during the wrangling the defendant drew from his pocket a small hammer used in his trade of bell hanging and struck Perry in the temple. She did not believe he meant to do him any harm.

Thomas Nugent, who witnessed the occurrence, testified that Perry followed Carroll, who endeavored to retreat and defended himself by using the hammer, in a very excited manner.

Dr. Gregory was called and testified that he attended Perry, who died on the 4th of March, of inflammation of the lungs.

Mr. Hummell, who defended Carroll, called no witnesses.

The Recorder instructed the jury that there was no evidence against the prisoner, who was thereupon declared not guilty and discharged.

Larceny of a Watch and Chain.

Margaret and Rosa Smith, two "unfortunates," were tried for stealing a watch and chain, valued at $200, from Charles Baur, at a disreputable house in Hester street about a month ago. There was no legal evidence implicating Margaret and she was discharged. Rosa was found guilty and sent to the State Prison for one year. The Frenchman was fortunate enough to recover his watch and chain.

Other Larcenies.

George Adams and John W. Ridgeway pleaded guilty to an attempt at grand larceny, the charge being that on the 18th of June they stole a watch worth $74 from Alfred Harris. They were each sent to the State Prison for two years and six months.

George Balfe pleaded guilty to petty larceny from the person in stealing a silver watch from William Cartland on the 2d of May.

Spencer Ludlow, indicted for burglariously entering the premises of John J. Bragg, 22 Desbrosses street, on the 6th of June, pleaded guilty to an attempt at burglary in the third degree.

Balfe and Ludlow were each sent to the State Prison for two years and six months.

BROOKLYN COURTS.

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONERS' COURT.

Arrest of Liquor Dealers.

Before Commissioner Winslow.

Three retail liquor dealers—J. Flynn, of 116 Columbia street; John McNeil, of 111 Atlantic avenue, and William Grant, of 301 Remsen street, E. D.—were arrested yesterday on the charge of being engaged in business without paying the special tax required by law. They were held to bail by the Commissioner to appear for examination.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM.

A Flatbush Contested Election Case.

Before Justices Barnard and Tappen.

In April, 1870, James H. McKinney was elected Collector of Taxes for the town of Flatbush, and in the month of January, of the same year (which was, of course, previous to the election), the Legislature extended the terms of office of the Collectors of all county towns three years. The act took effect on the 22d of April. Peter Williamson claimed that on the 4th of April, 1871 (a year afterwards), he was elected Collector in McKinny's place, having received 15 votes, and subsequently he obtained a temporary injunction from Judge Gilbert, of the Supreme Court, restraining the Supervisors from giving the tax book to McKinney, alleging that the act of the Legislature was unconstitutional. Judge Gilbert afterwards dissolved the injunction and Mr. Williamson then brought a quo warranto suit and Judge Gilbert again decided against him.

An appeal was taken to the General Term, which convened in Poughkeepsie in May last. The General Term has just rendered a decision sustaining the Court below.

Decisions.

By Justices Barnard, Gilbert and Tappen.

Raymond vs. Wright.—Judgment affirmed with costs. Opinion by Justice Tappen.

Brown vs. Leigh.—By the Court—The case of Borst vs. Levy seems to be a direct adjudication of the Court of Appeals governing the question of costs in this case. Ordered that plaintiff have costs of motion only in the Court of Appeals, with stay of proceedings, if this decision be taken to that Court for review.

In the Matter of the Application of the Port Chester Railway to Take and to Value Lands, &c.—Order affirmed, Judge Tappen not sitting.

Cornell vs. Cornell.—Order affirmed. Justice Gilbert not sitting.

Carpenter vs. Black Hawk Mining Company.—Judgment reversed, with costs to abide event. New trial ordered at Special Term. Opinion by Justice Barnard.

Fosdred vs. Seamen's Savings Bank.—Judgment reversed. New trial ordered. Costs to abide event. Opinion by Justice Barnard, Justice Tappen not sitting.

Matter of Will of Mary McCord, deceased.—Decree of Surrogate affirmed, with costs to the respondent to be paid out of the estate. Opinion by Justice Tappen.

Holdame et al. vs. Doyle.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Justice Barnard.

Boland et al. vs. Robertson et al.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Justice Gilbert, Justice Barnard not sitting.

Sherman vs. Brown.—Motion to open default denied; $10.

Roe et al. vs. Sanger.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Justice Barnard.

Randall vs. Elwell et al.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Justice Gilbert.

Barclay vs. Quicksilver Mining Co.—Order affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Justice Gilbert.

Executors of Zachariah Smalley vs. Hopkins et al.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Justice Gilbert, Justice Barnard not sitting.

People vs. Collector of Flatbush.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Justice Tappen, Justice Gilbert not sitting.

Reilly vs. Newman, executor.—Judgment reversed and new trial ordered. Proceedings remitted to Surrogate; the question of costs is reserved under the statute. Opinion by Judge Tappen.

Williams vs. Anderson.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Judge Tappen, Judge Barnard not sitting.

De Grove vs. Metropolitan Insurance Company.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Judge Tappen.

Dutcher, assignee, vs. Chatham National Bank.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Judge Gilbert not sitting.

Loretz vs. Lucius Hart Manufacturing Company.—Judgment reversed. New trial ordered. Costs to abide event. Opinion by Judge Barnard, Judge Gilbert not sitting.

Lawrence vs. Kiernan—Two actions.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Judge Tappen.

Cocks vs. Travis et al.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Judge Tappen, Judge Gilbert not sitting.

Mutual Benefit Savings Bank vs. Sheldon et al.—Order affirmed, with $10 costs. Judge Gilbert not sitting.

Executors of Daniel Quimby vs. Tompkins.—Judgment affirmed, with costs.

Boylston vs. Wheeler.—Judgment affirmed, with costs. Opinion by Judge Barnard.

Markham vs. Supervisors of Suffolk County.—Judgment affirmed, with costs.

Worrell vs. Munn et al., Executors, &c.—Judgment affirmed, with costs.

COURT OF SESSIONS.

Receiving Stolen Property.

Before Judge Moore and Associate Justices.

John Strauss, a Flushing avenue liquor dealer, was placed on trial for receiving thirty gallons of alcohol and a number of demijohns, which he knew had been stolen. Strauss asserted that when he bought them he believed they belonged to the person who offered them for sale. The jury convicted the prisoner, and the Court deferred sentence.

Burglary.

William Jackson, alias "No Toe Charlie," pleaded guilty to burglary in having broken into Michael Rummalt's grocery store, at Miller and Fulton avenues, East New York. A young man named Williams was arrested on the charge of being implicated, but Jackson stated that he had nothing whatever to do with the "job," nor did he know anything about it, although he was arrested near the place. Williams was accordingly discharged, but Jackson was remanded for sentence.

A Nuisance.

Patrick Synett, Thomas McManus and Thomas Kingsley were tried yesterday for maintaining a nuisance in the shape of a piggery in Dean street, near the city line. They were convicted, and Judge Moore allowed them thirty days to abate the nuisance.

MONEY THREE PER CENT.

Money was easier, and the closing dealings were at three per cent, with more offered at the same rate. Earlier in the day some borrowers paid four per cent on stocks, and a number of renewals were made at that figure. The banks and private bankers are abundantly supplied with money from out of town depositors, and, as indicated in the bank statement on Saturday, there is a steady influx of money, chiefly national bank notes, from the out of town banks, which threatens to create the

USUAL SUMMER GLUT

of paper money at this centre. The effect of this increased supply is witnessed in the lower ruling of rates on call yesterday and to-day. Prime paper is quoted 5 a 7 per cent discount. Foreign exchange was not so firm. In the first place the advance in gold checks the buying of bills, and secondly serves to make a better supply of commercial bills. The weakness, if the change amounted to so much, was more perceptible in sixty-day than in sight sterling, and is attributable also to more

ACTIVE MONEY IN LONDON,

consequent upon the introduction of the new French loan, particulars of which ought to reach us by the cable this evening. The amount marketed is said to be 500,000 francs at 82 per cent, equivalent to about £17,000,000, a sum that ought not to occasion any prolonged activity or disturbance of the money market in so wealthy a place as London. Still, the Bank of England lost heavily last week and continues to lose, inspiring a belief that may be raised next Thursday. So far as our bonds are concerned they were steady on the other side all day, but dull, which latter they would be naturally pending the diversion of attention to the new French loan. Sixty-day bills were freely offered at 109½, and cannot be quoted at better than 109⅜ a 109⅝, while sight sterling was only steady at the quotation 110⅜ a 110⅝. There is further more good evidence that some small amounts of new railway loans have been recently negotiated in Europe.

THE DISCOUNT RATE

GOLD STRONG—114⅜ A 114½.

The gold market was strong, and advanced two points more—viz., from 114⅜ to 114½, closing quiet and steady at 114½, which was so exactly the final quotation that it was the asking price "regular way," and the bid price "buyer three." There was not much doing at the advance, the pool seeming to content themselves with their forenoon work of putting the figure up a quarter, and then quietly supporting the market at 114½, keeping their

the smaller operators and dealers, and noting carefully the temper of the outsiders and the street and public generally. There is no doubt that more strength would have been developed to-day had the steamer taken out specie and the engagements for to-morrow been larger. In explanation it was said that to-day's steamer was not liked by shippers, and that the Cunarders demand too much freightage charge for specie consignments. As it is for to-morrow foot up $856,000, of which $550,000 is gold. The Sub-Treasury paid out $225,000 on account of interest and $37,000 on account of redeemed five-twenties of 1862. The course of the market is shown in the table:—

In the gold loan market the rates ranged from 2 to 3½ per cent for carrying. The operations of the Gold Exchange Bank were as follows:—

Gold balances	1,757,816
Currency balances	2,149,286

GOVERNMENTS STRONG.

The foreign quotations for our bonds being no lower, and gold having advanced ⅛ a ¼ per cent, the government list improved in the same proportion as the gold market, although business was dull and transactions were confined chiefly to small dealings at the counter. The following were the closing quotations:—United States currency sixes, 114⅜ a 114⅝; do. do., 1881, registered, 115½ a 115⅝; do. do., coupon, 117⅜ a 117⅝; do. five-twenties, registered, May and November, 115⅛ a 115⅜; do. do., 1862, coupon, do., 115⅜ a 115⅝; do. do., 1864, do. do., 115⅛ a 115⅜; do. do., 1865, do. do., 115⅞ a 116⅛; do. do., 1867, registered, January and July, 114⅜ a 114⅝; do. do., 1865, coupon, do., 114⅜ a 114⅝; do., do., 1867, do. do., 115⅛ a 115⅜; do., do., 1868, do. do., 115 a 115⅛; do., ten-forties, registered, 111⅛ a 111⅜; do. do., coupon, 112⅜ a 112⅝; do., fives, 1881, registered, 113⅜ a 113⅝; do. do. do., coupon, 113⅜ a 113⅝.

SOUTHERN SECURITIES LOWER.

The Southern State bonds were heavy for some reason not readily given, unless it be the recent heavy floods throughout the South and the damage to the crops and property they involved. The Tennessees were only steady, Virginia consols and North Carolinas were lower, and the South Carolinas weak at a considerable decline, the July issues having fallen to 27¾. The market was at the same time quite dull, it being difficult to get any close quotations for other bonds on the list than those above referred to. The following were the

STOCKS DULL AND STRONG.

The stock market continued very dull, and was only relieved from utter stagnation by the coincident activity in Erie, Pacific Mail and Northwestern—a trio of stocks to which the business of the summer so far has been chiefly confined. An improvement in Erie had the effect of communicating strength generally, especially as it was fully rivalled by an advance in Pacific Mail. The better feeling in Erie was due to the important measures adopted by

of Directors at their meeting this afternoon. The proposed abrogation of the scandalous contracts, by which the railroad was made the instrument of enriching corporations organized or controlled by the late Erie Ring, was the most important of these measures as affects the price of stock, and its suggestion, as well as all the good intentions expressed to-day by the new board in their resolutions, would have had more influence did not the fact underlie all that the present administration of Erie was the selection of the

ATLANTIC AND GREAT WESTERN

party, whose interests cannot be in human nature secondary to those of the Erie road. This is the cloud which overshadows Erie, despite the excellent material in the new direction. We give in an adjoining column a faithful and detailed account of all that was done at this interesting meeting, the proceedings of which will doubtless be read with avidity on both sides of the Atlantic. The advance in the stock was about one per cent as compared with the average price of the previous day. The rise in Pacific Mail for to-day was nearly as much, and excited considerable curiosity as to its cause, the fact being generally known that were not doing anything of any extent, and were rather disposed to await the return of the fall activity before resuming operations. The story about a further stock dividend on New York Central to raise the capital to $100,000,000 was revived, the additional stock to be awarded to present stockholders and marked fully paid for a consideration of only 40 per cent cash. On the other hand came the discouraging report that within three days the road would be in the hands of the Sheriff unless the tax due the government on the scrip dividend was by the end of that time duly liquidated.

COMMERCIAL REPORT.

Cotton in Limited Request and Firm—Receipts at the Ports 447 Bales—Flour and Wheat Steady—Corn and Oats Firmer—Pork and Lard Steady—Coffee Dull—Metals Quiet—Spirits Firm—Whiskey Steady—Wool in Moderate Demand and Firm.

NEW YORK, July 16—6 P. M.

ASHES.—Receipts for the past three days, 96 packages. The market remained unchanged. Pots were in moderate demand but pearls were scarce and nominal. We quote:—Pots, $7 75 a $8 25.

BUILDING MATERIALS.—Brick continued in good demand at unchanged prices. Quoted at $4 a $5 for pale, $7 a $7 50 for Jersey, $7 a $9 75 for North River, $13 a $16 for Croton, and $40 a $45 for Philadelphia front from yard. Lime remained dull and more or less nominal. Quoted at $1 25 for common and $1 75 for lump. Cement was quiet and unchanged. Quoted at $1 60 for Rosendale. Laths continued in good demand and a shade firmer. Sales at $2 25 a $2 50.

COFFEE.—The market remained without a new feature to note—namely, dull and more or less nominal for all descriptions. We quote:—Rio—Ordinary cargoes, 16½c. a 17c.; fair do., 17½c. a 18c.; good do., 18½c. a 18¾c.; prime, 19c. a 19½c., gold, per lb., 60 days; Maracaibo, 16½c. a 18c.; Laguayra, 17½c. a 18½c.; St. Domingo (in bond), 14c.; Java, 19c. a 20c., gold, per lb.

COTTON on the spot has been quiet and steady. There were free sellers at quotations, but the demand was limited and only for spinning purposes. For future delivery the market was moderately active, especially for the distant months, and prices were about ⅛c. per lb. better. The sales reported on 'Change sum up as follows:—

	To-day.	Last Eve'g.	Total.
Consumption	364	101	465

—For future delivery (basis low middling) the sales have been as follows:—Sales last evening after three o'clock—July, 100 at 22⅝c.; August, 100 at 22 5-16c., 400 at 22⅝c.; September, 300 at 21⅝c., 200 at 21 7-16c., 1,100 at 21½c., 100 at 21 9-16c., 100 at 21⅝c.; October, 900 at 20 5-16c., 100 at 20⅜c.; November, 100 at 19⅞c.; December, 100 at 19 7-16c., 100 at 19⅜c. FLOUR AND GRAIN.—Receipts, flour, 9,650 bbls.; wheat, 11,340 bushels; corn, 21,119 do.; corn meal, 600 bbls.; oats, 39,350 bushels. The flour market ruled steady under a moderate demand—in part for export—at our quotations. The sales foot up about 8,500 bbls., including 225 bbls. of Southern and 50 bbls. of superfine rye. Corn meal was in better demand and about steady. Sales 550 bbls. at $3 85 for Brandywine and $3 25 for Western yellow. We quote:—

—Wheat was quiet, but with limited offerings the market ruled steady. The sales were about 29,000 bushels at $1 53 for No. 2 Milwaukee spring afloat, $1 77½ for new amber Tennessee afloat, $1 75 for small lots of amber Michigan and $1 75 for small lots white Michigan. Other descriptions were nominal. Corn was rather firmer, owing to light receipts. The sales were about 67,000 bushels at 61c. a 64c. for steam and sail mixed, 64c. a 65c. for yellow, 65c. a 70c. for white. Southern remained nominal at previous figures. Oats were firmer and in good demand. The sales aggregate about 67,000 bushels at 45c. for Western afloat, 44c. for No. 2 Chicago in store, 45c. a 48½c. for white and 45½c. for Milwaukee afloat. Barley and rye were inactive and nominal in the absence of transactions.

FREIGHTS.—The market was very firm for accommodation by vessels on the berth, and rates were firmer, especially for grain, although but little was accomplished, owing to the scarcity of room and the high rates asked. A moderate chartering business was consummated at rates strictly in owners' favor. The engagements were:—To Liverpool, by steam, 15,000 bushels grain relet, at 9½d. a 9¾d.; the regular asking rates were 9¾d. a 10d. The charters comprise:—A Norwegian bark, 3,200 quarters of rye, to Hamburg direct, at 7s. 3d.; a bark, hence to Dunkirk, 3,400 bbls. crude petroleum, at 6s.; a British brig from St. Martin's to New York, salt, on private terms.

GUNNIES.—The market since our last has been dull for all descriptions, and, with the exception of small jobbing orders being filled, nothing has transpired of interest. We quote:—Native cloth, 14½c. a 15c.; domestic do., 16c. for prompt delivery and 17c. for future; bags, 11½c. a 12c. for light to heavy.

HEMP AND JUTE.—The market has been quiet and unchanged for all descriptions of hemp. Manila quoted at 12c., gold. Jute was also quiet, but steady at 4½c. a 6½c., gold. Jute butts sold moderately, at 2⅞c. a 3c. currency.

HAY AND STRAW.—The demand has somewhat slackened off, and large arrivals are shortly expected, which has caused an easy market, although we make no particular change in our former range of quotations; quoted at $1 15 a $1 20 for shipping hay, $1 40 a $1 60 for retail qualities, 95c. a $1 for salt, 80c. a 85c. for clover, $1 10 a $1 15 for long rye straw, 85c. a 90c. for short do., 70c. a 75c. for oat, and 60c. a 65c. for wheat.

HOPS.—There has been a pretty fair demand for prime hops since our last; but this quality of domestic is nearly, if not quite, exhausted, and foreign hops have been resorted to instead. Old hops have also been in rather better request, but the transactions were of no special importance. Former prices were current.

LEATHER.—The market for hemlock sole remained without noticeable change. The demand continued fair, especially from manufacturers, and former prices were current. The receipts have been light for the past week, but the stock is well assorted. Oak was in light stock and the demand somewhat in excess of receipts; full prices were readily obtained. We quote:—Hemlock—Buenos Ayres, heavy, 28c. a 29c. per lb.; do., middle, 28c. a 29c.; do., light, 27c. a 27½c.; California, heavy, 27c.; do., middle, 27c.; do., light, 26½c.; Orinoco, &c., heavy, 26c. a 27c.; do., middle, 26½c. a 27c.; do., light, 26c. a 26½c.; do., [illegible]; do., damaged, 26c. a 25c. Oak—Slaughter, heavy, 32c. a 38c.; do., middle, 34c. a 38c.; do., light, 37c. a 42c.; do., rough, 37c. a 38c.; do., middle, 38c. a 35c.; do., middle, 35c. a 36c.; do., light, 32c. a 35c.; bellies, 17c. a 19c.

METALS.—Copper has been in better demand, but generally the market has remained quiet. Sales have been reported of 100,000 lbs. of lake at 33c. a 33½c. Tin, iron, spelter and other metals have been quiet and without reported change in prices.

MOLASSES.—The market remained dull and without any new feature to note. Prices were unchanged but more or less nominal. We quote:—

	Old Crop.	New Crop.
Cuba—Centrifugal and mixed	19c. a 20c.	20c. a 25c.
Clayed	22c. a 28c.	25c. a 32c.
Muscovado, refining	22c. a 30c.	30c. a 33c.
Muscovado, grocery	30c. a 35c.	34c. a 38c.
Porto Rico	25c. a 40c.	30c. a 60c.
English Islands	— a —	30c. a 45c.
New Orleans	30c. a 45c.	40c. a 90c.

NAVAL STORES.—For spirits turpentine the market was rather less active, but prices were a shade firmer without being quotably higher. The sales have been 150 bbls. at 47½c., 30 bbls. in lots at 47⅞c. a 48c., 50 bbls. to arrive at 47⅞c., and 100 New York bbls. at 48½c. Rosin was in limited request. Strained quoted steady at $3 a $3 10. We hear of sales of 10 bbls. strained at $3 10, 200 bbls. No. 1 at $4, 174 bbls. low pale at $4 25, 50 bbls. pale at $4 50, 275 bbls. do. at $4 50 a $4 75, 50 bbls. do. at $5 37½, 176 bbls. do. at $5 50, and 21 bbls. black at $2 65. Tar was in better demand, with sales reported of 50 bbls. Wilmington rope at $3 25 and 100 bbls. Washington at $3 75.

OILS.—No particular change has occurred in this market since our last report. Linseed has sold moderately from crushers at previous figures, but for other oils the market has been very quiet. We quote:—Linseed 83c., in casks; crude whale oil 70c. a 72c., natural winter do. 78c.; crude sperm $1 40, bleached do. $1 65 a $1 68, crude cotton seed 50c. a 51c., Menhaden 42½c. a 44c. for prime and 40c. a 42c. for inferior.

PETROLEUM.—The market for refined remained dull and more or less nominal in the absence of transactions; quoted for spot or balance of month at 22c. a 22⅛c. Crude in bulk was held with considerable firmness, but we learned of no transactions; held at 12½c., but the best bids were not above 12c. Case oil was quoted steady, although nominal, at 27c. a 27½c. Naphtha remained entirely nominal at about 14½c. At the Creek the market was quiet and unchanged; quoted at $3 50 on both roads. The Philadelphia market was easy, but not quotably changed. We learn of sales of 2,500 bbls. standard white for first half of August at 22 3-16c., and 4,000 bbls. do. seller last half of do. at 22⅛c.; quoted for spot or remainder of month at 21⅞c.; also in New York, 500 bbls. crude in bulk at 12⅛c.

PROVISIONS.—Receipts—Pork, 50 bbls.; beef, 25 packages; cutmeats, 1,342 do.; lard, 1,102 bbls. and tierces. The market for mess pork exhibited but little animation, yet prices were about steadily held, although there was little disposition shown to operate; round lots quoted at $13 75 for July. In jobbing lots about 350 bbls. changed hands at $13 50 a $13 87½. Bacon met with fair inquiry, but the scarcity of freight room prevented exporters from operating; sales 125 of light, long clear at 7¼c.; quoted for the range of light to heavy at 7¼c. a 7½c. Dressed hogs were steady and in moderate demand; quoted at 5⅝c. a 6c. for heavy to light. Beef sold to the extent of 72 bbls. in jobbing lots at from $5 a $10 for mess, $10 a $12 for extra do., $12 a $14 for prime mess in tierces, and $17 a $20 for India mess do. Beef hams sold in small lots at from $22 a $28 50 for Western and Texas. Cut meats—Smoked meats were in fair request at full prices. Pickled meats were also in moderate demand and firm. Sales 250 boxes bellies at 7½c. for 12 lb. We quote:—Smoked hams, 15c. a 17c.; do. shoulders, 6¾c. a 7c.; pickled bellies, 7c. a 7½c. for boxed or loose; do. hams, 12c. a 13c.; do. shoulders, 5½c. a 6¼c. Lard—The market for Western was quiet, but without essential change in prices. Sales 250 tierces for August at 9⅜c.; spot and mouth quoted at 9¼c.; 100 tierces new for immediate delivery at 9⅜c., and 250 tierces of city at 9⅛c.

RICE.—The market to-day has been less active, but prices remained firm. Sales were reported of 30 tierces Carolina at 8⅞c. a 9½c.; 125 bags Patna at 7½c. a 7⅞c., and 200 bags Rangoon at 7c. a 7¼c.

SUGAR.—The market for raw exhibits but little animation; still there was a limited business transacted at about previous figures. The sales aggregate about 780 hhds. of refining Cubas at 8⅝c. a 8⅞c., and 1,440 boxes centrifugal at 10c. Refined was in moderate request and steady at 11⅝c. for A, and 12⅛c. a 13c. for bonds. We quote:—Cuba—Refining, interior to common, 7⅞c. a 8⅛c.; fair to good fair, 8⅜c. a 8⅝c.; good to prime, 8⅞c. a 9c.; grocery, fair to good, 9⅛c. a 9⅝c.; prime to choice, 9⅝c. a 10c.; centrifugal, hhds. and boxes, 9⅝c. a 10⅜c.; molasses, hhds. and boxes, 7⅞c. a 8⅜c.; melado, 4½c. a 6¼c. Havana—Boxes, Dutch standard, Nos. 7 to 9, 8c. a 8⅜c.; do., 10 to 12, 9c. a 9⅜c.; do., 13 to 15, 9½c. a 10⅛c.; do., 16 to 18, 10⅜c. a 11⅛c.; do., 19 to 20, 12c. a 12⅝c.; white, 11⅝c. a 12⅞c. Porto Rico—Refining, common to prime, 8c. a 9c.; grocery, fair to choice, 9⅜c. a 10c. Brazil—Dutch standard, Nos. 8 to 12, 7⅞c. a 9c. Java—Dutch standard, Nos. 10 to 12, 9c. a 9⅞c. Manila—Superior and extra superior, 7⅞c. a 8⅜c.

STEARINE.—The market was firmer, with sales reported of 150 tierces at 10c. a 10⅛c., closing at the latter price.

TOBACCO.—There has been a moderate business consummated for the past three days in all descriptions at about former prices. Kentucky especially was in good demand, chiefly from the home trade. We note sales of 100 cases of old crop, sundries, at 20c. a 40c.; 100 cases new crop, State, at 11c. a 14c.; 450 cases do. Ohio, at 10c. a 15c.; 175 cases do., Wisconsin, part at 9½c.; 200 bales of Havana at 95c. a $1 15, and 550 hhds. of Kentucky at 8⅞c. a 15c.

TALLOW continued in fair demand at full prices. We hear of sales of 100 hhds. city at 9⅛c. a 9 5-16c.

WHISKEY.—Receipts, 1,088 bbls. The market was steady at 92½c., with sales of 250 bbls. at that price.

WOOL.—The general market is reported as being quiet, but firm, although some dealers have had considerable trade, and consequently report more inquiry and activity. Fine wool has chiefly been in demand, and there was also a moderate inquiry reported for sheepskins. We hear of sales since our last of 20,000 lbs. pulled at 65c. a 72c.; 5,000 lbs. fleece, 68c.; 5,000 lbs. English Noils, 72c.; 3,000 lbs. East India, 78c.; 4,000 lbs. medium fleece, 72c.; 5,000 lbs. Georgia, 53c.; 8,000 lbs. Russian Noils, 38c. a 40c.; 10,000 lbs. Mexican, 30c.; 36,000 lbs. Cape, 42½c.; 20,000 lbs. THE ERIE RAILWAY.

The First Meeting of the Newly Elected Directors—The Extravagances of the Past to be Looked Into and the Investigations to Go On.

The new Board of Erie Railway Directors held their first meeting yesterday forenoon at the Grand Opera House. The meeting was held with closed doors, the reporters for the press not being allowed to enter the sacred council chamber until the deliberations had come to an end. The entire Board was present, with the exception of General Dix, G. Talbot Olyphant, Frederick Schuchardt and W. R. Travers.

President Watson presided and Mr. Otis acted as secretary.

The following committees were appointed, the President being ex officio member of each committee:—

Executive Committee—Messrs. Diven, Duncan, Morgan and Barlow.

Finance Committee—Messrs. Cisco, Lansing, Babcock and Travers.

Committee on By-Laws—Messrs. Barlow, Pruyn and Johnston.

Mr. W. Watts Sherman resigned the office of Treasurer, and the election of a successor was postponed.

The following resolutions were adopted:—

Resolved, That in view of the extravagance which has characterized the legal expenses of this company for a number of years past, that all appointments of counsel and attorneys now existing be terminated, and that Messrs. Barlow, Laroque and McFarland be appointed the counsel and attorneys of the company, at an annual salary of $10,000, and that any further appointments or expenditures in respect to legal business of this company be made by the President and Executive Committee of this Board.

Resolved, That in all cases where bonds or undertakings in behalf of the company are necessary to be given in legal proceedings or otherwise, that the treasurer for the time being be and he is hereby authorized under the authority of the Executive Committee to use any of the securities or moneys of the company to the extent necessary for such purposes, as an indemnity and security for the execution of any such bonds or undertakings by the sureties, and that any securities thus used be reported to this Board.

The following preamble and resolution offered by Mr. Duncan were also adopted:—

Whereas the late Board of Directors of this company were diligently engaged from the 11th day of March last to the end of their official term, in an investigation as to the management of the affairs of this company under the previous so-called Gould administration; and whereas, from such action and investigation, this Board has reason to believe that during the period last referred to a large number of fraudulent, burdensome and unjust contracts were nominally imposed upon this company which are voidable at its election; therefore,

Resolved, That the Executive Committee be requested to forthwith examine and inquire touching all such contracts with any person or corporation made before the 11th day of March, 1872, and in regard to the force and validity thereof, and that they report their conclusions to this Board.

The meeting then adjourned.

THE ORANGE PARADE—CARD FROM GRAND MARSHAL M'GEE.

NEW YORK, July 14, 1872.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

SIR—In reply to a letter, signed "An American," in your issue of to-day, allow me to correct a misstatement in it. The Orangemen of New York did not parade for the purpose of proclaiming their adherence to the British government, for the simple reason that they do not owe allegiance to the British or any other government other than the United States of America. We are sworn as Orangemen and citizens of this great republic to support the Union, and not by any act of ours to bring disgrace on our country or the colors which we wear. Should the services of American citizens ever be required to defend our country it will be found that the Orangemen will be the first in the field and last to yield.

WILLIAM MCGEE.

THE BROOKLYN BRIDGE.

The Caisson Filled In—Work Under Water Finished—The New York Tower—Present Condition of the Enterprise.

The New York Bridge Company has progressed in their enterprise to the point of commencing the erection of the stone work on the tower above high water mark on this side of the East river, at the place where it was left off when the caisson was sunk to its permanent location. Monday afternoon, at one o'clock, a body of masons commenced to labor at this branch of the great work, and it is the intention of the engineers to prosecute it vigorously and lose no time in having Brooklyn and this city connected by a wire cable roadway, which will be in fact when completed one of the greatest engineering successes of the time. This week will see the last of the work under water finished. There only remains a space of six or seven cubic yards now to be filled up at the foundation, and the two open shafts, eight feet in diameter, used for communication from the surface are to be at once closed up and made solid like the surrounding structure. The air-pumping machinery, consisting of thirteen engines, each of twenty-horse power, are to be removed without delay, their services being no longer required. The two large engines employed for hoisting the débris from the bottom of the river were removed on Saturday last. All that will be retained is the machinery for hoisting and handling the material to be used for building the tower. The wharves are to be immediately cleared and arranged for the rapid prosecution of the mason work. Derricks are to be placed in position, car tracks laid, and the most expeditious means adopted for landing the granite as it arrives from the coast of Maine. The Brooklyn bridge is now in a fair way towards completion.

THE TOWERS.

Now that the New York tower is about to rise above the waters of the East River the people of the two cities will acquire increased confidence in the early realization of a work considered essential to their mutual prosperity. The tower on the Brooklyn side has reached the height of 105 feet above high water mark and rests upon a solid foundation. The work has made more progress there owing to delays in obtaining possession of the property at the foot of Roosevelt street, and also on account of the directors not wishing to incur the expense of duplicating the machinery required in sinking the caissons. At a point fifteen feet above the present height of the tower in Brooklyn will be the level of the road bed of the bridge, and from this upwards will be erected a structure 150 feet high of solid masonry, divided into three columns and two arched openings. The wire cables are to run over the columns and be stretched at a point 120 feet above the water. The same arrangement will exist on the New York side.

WORK UNDER WATER.

To such of the general public as might imagine that an inconsiderable amount of work has only been done on the New York tower, Mr. Roebling, the Chief Engineer, states that the quantity of masonry and concrete laid on the foundation under water is equal to the entire masonry of the Brooklyn tower visible to-day above the water line. Active operations were commenced late in December in the way of excavations at the bed of the river. In the month of May, before a satisfactory foundation was reached at a depth of seventy-eight feet below mean high water, the borings had been confined only to the small area covered by the old pier 29, but were extended over the remaining portion of the foundation as soon as the adjacent ferry slips were vacated. The results showed an extreme difference in the level of the bed rock of twelve feet, the hole of the least depth touching rock at eighty feet below high water, and the deepest at ninety-two feet. The immediate river bed consisted of logs and loose dock stones followed by a sticky black clay. Next came gravel and quicksand, the latter varying from fifteen to twenty feet, until the solid or rock foundation was reached.

THE CAISSON.

In September last the caisson was towed from the Atlantic basin to its final resting place. While at the basin seven additional courses of timber and concrete had been built upon it. All the outer seams were caulked and protected by felt, tin and creosoted sheathing. The various pipes, shafts and locks were also carried up the necessary height. When the caisson was brought over it was twelve feet thick on which ten feet of woodwork, as stated, was afterwards built. Under it was a chamber ten feet high, making the entire height thirty-four feet. It contains twenty-two feet of timber as solid as ship carpenters' tools can make it, above the roof of the air chamber, seven courses more than the Brooklyn caisson. It is twice as strong as its Brooklyn brother. At a depth of seventy-eight feet and a load on its back of 55,000 tons, not the slightest sign of weakness has been discovered. In this connection it may be remarked that there is nothing better established in engineering than the durability of wood under water. It is removed from the action of air, and, unlike stone, is not subject to disintegration.

THE FILLING IN.

But now the air chamber is filled with material that will stand the test of centuries. Hydraulic cement, composed chiefly of sand and gravel, together with stones, have been crowded into the space, which is 172 feet long by 102 wide and nine feet high. The concrete for filling the chamber was all mixed above and let down through the supply shafts, ready for distribution below. No brick pillars were used, as under the Brooklyn caisson, the bearings of the frames being so wide as to be equal to all contingencies when once uniformly packed under with concrete. The stones, earth and sand left in the caisson during the sinking were sufficient to fill one-third of the space. At one time there were four gangs of men, sixty each, employed under water. Yesterday the number so engaged was only three men, and their work will be closed up to-morrow or after.

DEATHS AMONG THE LABORERS.

The deaths that have occurred among the laborers engaged at work in the caisson have been frequently referred to by the press. As many as 600 men have been employed at one time, and out of this number, in the course of seven months, five died. The effects of the compressed air on the men, it was known at first, would be serious, and only a few hours labor were required to be performed. A physician was engaged and medical remedies kept at hand to be used in case of necessity. It is claimed by the engineers, Colonel Paine and Mr. Collingwood, who superintended the work below, that only in two instances was death caused by the pressure, but enough is known to make it certain that persons not possessing sound constitutions were exposed to imminent danger while working under water. Scarcely any man escaped without being somewhat affected by intense pains in his limbs or bones, or by a temporary paralysis of arms and legs; but they all got over it, either by suffering for a few days outside or by applying the risky mode of returning into the caisson at once as soon as the pains manifested themselves. All this is now over, and the very remarkable matter of men working forty feet under the bottom of the river will totally cease before the week closes. Ordinary street gas, manufactured on the wharf, was used for illumination, and an ingenious mechanical telegraph, contrived by Colonel Paine, proved of great assistance in keeping up communication between the upper and lower world. The masons, who commenced work on Monday, will lay four feet of granite each week over the entire tower. It will be 120 feet high exclusive of superstructure.

VANDERBILT'S BROTHER-IN-LAW INDICTED.

Crawford's Shooting at Henderson, the Police Detective—Indictment Found Against Him—He Is To Be Tried at General Sessions for Assault With Intent to Kill.

The Grand Jury yesterday had under consideration the case of Robert L. Crawford, brother-in-law of Commodore Vanderbilt. It will be remembered that Crawford, on the night of the 25th of May, discharged a pistol at Detective William Henderson, of the Fifteenth precinct, in the course of a quarrel arising out of a difficulty consequent upon the arrest of Commodore Vanderbilt's colored coachman for a supposed assault upon a white woman. An alarm was given to the police by some citizens on the night in question, apprising them that Mr. Vanderbilt's coachman had dragged a woman into the stables in Waverley place, she screaming and resisting with all her might. The coachman was arrested and taken to the Fifteenth Precinct Station House, in Mercer street. Mr. Robert L. Crawford went round to the police station and demanded the coachman's release in rather a boisterous manner. By direction of Captain Byrnes, Crawford was expelled from the station house by Detective Henderson. A few minutes afterward Henderson also went out. He was met on the corner of Amity street and Mercer by Crawford, who at once produced a pistol, and, pointing it at the police officer, called to Mr. Albert Guerin, of No. 4 Clinton place, who happened to be passing at the time, saying—

"WAIT UNTIL YOU SEE ME KILL THIS FELLOW."

Henderson, seeing his danger, jumped at and grappled with Crawford. They rolled over on the sidewalk, and while both were struggling on the ground Crawford shot Henderson through the thigh. The ball after passing through Henderson's leg entered the knee of Mr. Guerin, who was still standing near. Henderson lingered for several weeks, but finally recovered, and yesterday appeared to testify before the Grand Jury. The other witnesses were Mr. Albert Guerin and Sergeant McClintock, of the Fifteenth precinct. The Grand Jury came into court at two o'clock, and presented an indictment against Crawford, charging him with felonious assault on William Henderson, with intent to kill the said Henderson. It is probable that the case will be tried toward the end of the term.

SUICIDE OF A LUNATIC.

Shortly before twelve o'clock on Monday night Philip Gertner, a German, thirty-two years of age, who is believed to have been insane, while in the hallway of the tenement house 1,128 Second avenue, committed suicide by shooting himself in the mouth with a heavily loaded pistol. Captain Gunner, of the Nineteenth precinct, had the body sent to the Morgue and notified Coroner Young to hold an inquest.

Catesby the Winner of the Saratoga Stakes, Harry Bassett the Saratoga Cup, Gray Planet and Buckden Make a Dead Heat in the Dash of One Mile and a Half, Dividing the Purse

SARATOGA, July 16, 1872.

Half the republic is here in spirit to day The two finest horses of the age have as many partisans as the two candidates for the Presidency and the result of their second competition makes as much intense feeling as the great election to be decided after the fall State elections of which the race at Long Branch was the equine counterpart

SARATOGA ON THE CUP DAY

The Saratoga Cup is a myth There is no cup In England where fortunes abide a plate is an heirloom a piece of silver is the honorary part of every great field contest Here the plate is generally commuted and the cup meant to dry the draught of elixir in $1 600 offered as the joint prize of the premium of the association and the sum of the entering fees for all the horses which originally desired to run Before the Grand Stand on the race course, a pedestal is erected to hold such occasional cups but to day the cup is less a breach than an observance, they give its value and wink at its omission

FOREGROUND INDICATED

Before we give the recital of the extraordinary race between the kings of the turf to day, wherein the proud testimonial reclaimed at Long Branch was wrested from the noble horse which in the judgment of the multitude, will carry it off again, let us briefly jot down the surroundings of the spot where the race occurred

The little village is full of praise for the money now being spent in it. They are driving the nails in the trial stage of Judge Barnard in the new Town Hall which has just cost $110 000 The two morning journals are disturbing the peace of visitors by dull and pointless village abuse over the question of who shall be Postmaster for the next four years The new spire of the great Methodist church is waiting for its bells They are throwing out a mountain of mud from the old High Rock spring to tube it again The upholsterers wrestle with the new Grand Central House to fit it for company The fine new depot lies silent and abandoned between trains and at train time is a pandemonium. The [illegible] is crowded, and the races are the cause of it

A very large crowd was assembled at the pool room on Morrissey's grounds Monday evening, probably above four hundred persons, coming and going, of whom nearly one half occupied chairs in an irregular semi ellipse, around Underwood the pool seller, who waxed warm in his shirt sleeves and perspired about the collar but kept up that sustained, even and good humored form of rapid auctioneering which despatched a great deal of work and stunned nobody's sense of hearing

With the names of the horses chalked up on a blackboard for each of the three races and the treasurer and tally taker about a table below, Underwood had under his eye all the varieties of the sporting man here a horse partisan who would stick to a particular nag, as Bassett, the whole season through taking the best odds he could get, but determined to recover the money lost at Long Branch by sustaining the same gallant chestnut on which he had made it the previous summer, here a cool, indifferent wagerer, whose superstition or judgment had got the better of his sympathies, and who now offered odds greedily on Longfellow against the colt which had for a whole year enriched him, again, a novice or poker player, with an eye to human mutations, fond of betting upon anything that came along, whether a horse or an election, and willing to lose something for the remote consideration of winning very much. Some timid people, always betting upon certainties, were listening around for suggestions, others, with means enough and time enough to make wagering a necessity of human enjoyment and a stimulation for the ennui of looking even at such a race, bet for the benefit of their spirits on the morrow We little know in the ordinary professional and methodical courses of life how much of human nature finds employment in these forms of hazard

SCHOOLS OF TURF PEOPLE.

Yonder were the great patrons of the turf looking on—Belmont Cotterell Sanford, Hunter Morris Travers Jerome—taking little apparent part, yonder the heavy stockbreeders and exchangers—McGrath, Carroll, Walden, Withers, Doswell Bacon and Donahue, again the boyish and wiry jockeys drawn to the spot by wistful curiosity, further on that knot of genial horse-loving Irishmen and stablemen who follow Underwood around, hopeful of an opportunity to improve such means as they may possess, yonder Babcock, the owner of Helmbold, still sullen under Morrissey's denunciation of Saturday, on the outskirts the cappers and the creatures of the faro houses looking in for victims or excitement, behind all, at the bar, smoking his cigar, Morrissey, whose horse Defender is to enter the lists for the Saratoga Cup with the two great rivals, and finally the old Virginian, McDaniel, head of "the McDaniel Confederacy," and proprietor of Harry Bassett with Roe, the light and wiry boy rider of that splendid young Lexington colt, close at his side as ever and Old John Harper quainter and more provincial still, the owner of the favorite Longfellow, attended by that cheery faced black waif who rides the great five year old to victory Politicians lurk around as Jimmy O'Brien, the 'Big Judge' Connolly and Harry Genet, a few Western and Southern Congressmen and perhaps a Senator, watch the proceedings, and then we have the Kentucky crowd of Confederate officers, the Maryland school, led by Governor Bowie, the New Orleans turfmen, the Canadians who travel with the steeple chasers, and that over-dressed swarm of New York liverymen, fanciers and sale stablers who seek ideas, odds and holiday.

PROGNOSTICATIONS ON THE HORSES.

The betting was nearly three to one on Longfellow against Bassett. Mr Morrissey's horse Defender gets very little encouragement at the pool room—say $1 in the pools to Longfellow's $100

"What did Morrissey put in that slow five year-older for?" asked one 'About all he ever did was to come in well along behind once or twice Did he ever win any race?"

"Oh! Morrissey says he put him in to help Mac (Daniel) along. He'll help him along as a coach dog helps a coach—by staidly running behind"

'What's Morrissey want to help McDaniel more than John Harper for?" said the new arrival, fresh in horsemongery

"You know ever since last year, when he won so largely on Helmbold by Longfellow's defeat, Morrissey has been betting on Bassett, and by this course he lost $10,000 at Monmouth Park at the last meeting But he is obstinate and sticks by his favorite!"

At this point a sporting reporter comes up with news

'McDaniel says it will be no 'walk over' to-morrow and that John Harper isn't running this time against a sick horse, as he was a fortnight ago"

'Now, that means something Does old John feel confident?"

'John says if Bassett beats his horse it will be only one to one and no finality, and that they must run again"

"That is what the public will say. A single beat this season won't settle the matter It's the popular idea that Longfellow is the best horse alive in the world, and that, except under suspicious circumstances, such as took place last year, Bassett can't outrun him"

'Do you think Longfellow can beat any horse on the English turf?" says the novice to Mr Cotterell, the Mobile stockowner who is betting on Bassett

'I should like to see him over there or Bassett either Yes I believe that they are both superior to the best running champions of England'

THE SECTIONAL ATTITUDE OF THE BASSETT-LONGFELLOW RACES.

If we were in the relative equality we occupied before the civil war the series of contests between Bassett and Longfellow would take the form of a hot sectional rivalry between the North and the South like the great race between Eclipse and Henry fifty years ago In that instance a race took place at Washington city between Charles and Eclipse and Charles broke down, whereafter the sectional sportsmen met at a hotel and the South closed a match to beat the Northern horse next year, on the Long Island course with a Southern horse to be named at the post on the day of the race Eclipse was considered a distinctively Northern horse having been raised on Long Island and sired by Duroc who was of the direct stock of Diomed the winner of the first English Derby in the year 1780 At the appointed time Colonel Johnson came East with Betsey Richards and Henry and named Henry as the Southern champion at the post The feeling was extraordinary and the Southern people not consulting their judgment bet wildly on their favorite Henry won the first heat and Eclipse won the race The Southern people full of emptiness and fury went home hating the Northern men and never afterwards allowed them to race South on terms of equality At least so said the authorities of the pool room

THE LAST OF BASSETT AND LONGFELLOW

Although Harry Bassett and Longfellow were foaled within half a mile of each other Bassett is now a New Jersey horse belonging to McDaniel's stock farm at Paterson while Longfellow's stable is in Kentucky The South and Southwest regard Longfellow as their exponent the Northern sporting populace predicted last year that Bassett would beat Longfellow in the former's fourth year there being the difference of a year in favor of John Harper's champion Bassett has been a more valuable horse in the way of winning money than Longfellow and he run above double the number of races Longfellow has run a half score times and been twice beaten the actual value of Longfellow however as a swifter stronger and more reliable animal—never yet strained nor even out of temper—was supposed to be greater than that of Bassett and the betting last night [illegible] showed this to be the general impression Longfellow was estimated to be worth [illegible] and it was thought that after the present season he would never appear upon the track but be used for stock purposes Longfellow had made his mile in 1 40 ahead of any time Bassett had run under 110 pounds weight two miles in three minutes and thirty five and one half seconds His career last year was remarkable and excited the liveliest apprehensions of his capacity to transfer the honors of the turf from Kentucky to the East He walked away from Helmbold Preakness and Regards and beat the former tough and matured galloper in the four mile contest at Baltimore The worsting of Longfellow by Helmbold at Saratoga last August was by many imputed to dark and treacherous work on the part of outsiders All waited for the opening races of this season but Bassett's expected triumph was ended at Long Branch amidst the greatest excitement of the kind in one period and the present struggle has been regarded as of high though minor interest as giving the young and defeated son of Lexington one more chance to take the ascendant He gallantly closed up with the chance and carried it off As to king her opinions differ Some say he is merely veneered and will go down in a year His owner who paid $1 000 for him, is, it is said, is still proud of his favorite Helmbold also hurt himself at Mobile so that we have nothing on the turf approaching the champion and his young challenger who to day became champion

THE STALL BY NIGHT

While this gaming and fluting goes on in the hotels and club rooms of Saratoga the mind of the quieter spectator can wander off to these secluded stables among the pines of the race track one mile out of the lighted village, where carefully watched all night as Mammon might watch impounded Pegasus, the beautiful subjects of all this speculation and barter sleep upon the straw No stranger may venture near A footstep startles the watch dog The owner lies sentinel over groom and jockey for bribery and violence take devious or desperate paths The thin plates which are to replace the horse shoes as a pair of pumps in a human runner replace his boots are already fastened upon the young stallions The mighty shoulders and haunches of the black champion are stretched in the clean litter as he dozes out the night in forgetfulness of his strength and beauty The more capricious Bassett stirs oftener and starts sometimes to his feet as if he knew the morrow's work, while Longfellow indifferent may be supposed to think the day sufficient for the victory thereof Such are life and morals when the speed and splendor of horses become subjects of the gamester's commerce and the horse grows nobler at the contrast of the human selfishness his nobility provokes.

BASSETT'S FATHER

A gentleman recently in Kentucky told me that he had seen the grand old sire of Bassett that parent of our noblest stock old Lexington who [illegible] years of age past the measure of equine length of days

He was wrapped up in a linen coverlet " said my informant and we could only see his [illegible] eyes ankles and he moved [illegible] so [illegible] that I said What trotting mare have you got there? Just as if he knew that we were talking about him The old veteran at this gave a neigh threw his legs in the air, and executed a flourish, like a colt!"

BETWEEN POOL SELLING AND RACE MORNING

At ten o clock John Chamberlain the Morrissey of Long Branch and as some say a more prosperous gamester than Morrissey and the chief spirit of the race course there arrived at the Grand Union Hotel and joined his friend McGrath At the same hotel were such opposite spirits as Judge Barnard, who has taken a cottage on the hotel premises and is to appear to morrow to defend the charges on which the Judiciary Committee have impeached him The Peruvian Minister Garcia and his handsome wife were at the same hotel and across the street at the Congress were Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Hartley and hundreds of others prominent in society politics or commerce Mr Breslin at the Union told me that 1 000 guests slept under his roof that night and probably ten thousand strangers were in Saratoga on the eve of the races

Tuesday morning opened hazily and with signs of rain but before nine o clock the sun was shining brightly and the day grew warmer than on any preceding morning of these meetings The pool room was again crowded and a rival and more democratic pool room under the Marion Hotel also did a fair trade in the possibilities of the next three hours

A lunatic made the streets lively by parading in red white and blue priestly vestments with an enormous hat and a tremendous banner full of texts from Scripture A band of music announcing a horse trot somewhere, made the air heavy with bum bum bumming The marble walks of the streets were full of promenaders and all the many shops exposed their gorgeous goods upon the side walk Carriages stood in long rows along Broadway, and at an early hour pedestrians moved in long lines out of Union avenue past the handsome brick and brown stone Club House, the Indian camp and the circular railway to the race track There again the pool selling continued under the Grand Stand, and as the people filled the long lines of seats the air blew down from the Green hills of Vermont and feebly swayed the piny woods about the gates Boys were peddling programmes of the races, carriages drove up and filled the field, grooms at the park stables, without the grounds were walking the animals to be raced to and fro It was the noisiest day of the meeting and sufficiently animating to interest the oldest man of the world

'Will it be a fair race? Now tell me' said an incredulous belle surrounded by gallants and a too doting father 'Are horse races ever fair? Don't they make them up beforehand and get people to bet the right way and then take their money by riding the wrong horse best?"

'Oh no, not in such races as this The reputation of the horse is worth more than the profits of swindling These horses are owned by the most honorable and conservative men on the turf'

'Then I'll bet Let me see, who will bet with me? Pa I guess you must'

Pa looks shy at this, but brightens up with the reflection that any closeness on the money hint may affect his chances to get this lady off upon some of the admirers aforesaid

'Well, what do you bet, Pet'

'I'll bet you $100 on Harry Bassett That's the prettiest name and he ought to win.'

"Not even, Miss Perichole' says a malicious young man, 'the odds are three to one against Bassett If you win the Colonel loses not $100 but $300"

The Colonel is gently grim The young lady feels assured now, more than ever, that the pretty name will win the race

THE GRAND STAND

At eleven o clock the stage is full of Greeley fans and morning dresses programmes and pretty feet, parasols and white felt hats handkerchiefs wiping away perspiration and people walking down in the quarter stretch, cutpurses, governors invalids, professional men, the kaleidoscope of the human world

The first race has many contestants, and they are all colts—two year oldsters, of no discretion—so that it takes about one hour to start them off and the people grow impatient, and over all the enormous length and depth of that great stand there is a decent beating of feet. As the colts finally get off we look back and see one of the most immense and orderly assemblages of people ever congregated at an American race, and before our astonishment at this multitude is done the three quarters have been run and we see that a negro boy rides in the winner This relieves as Anything would.

THE TALK AGAINST BASSETT

Just before the horses started for the first race a partial revulsion took place concerning the second and great race of the day I mention it to show how the best laid plans go a-gley

"I anticipate no sport," said one authority "Last night Colonel McDaniel was offered 100 to 30 on Longfellow, and he replied that such was not fair—that 100 to 20 would be more equitable Now," said this gentleman, "if the owner of a brag horse like Bassett, stands that way on ten per cent, what are we to think, who must take sides?"

"Yes," said another, "I would have preferred to see a race between Abdel Koree, Monarchist and Alroy and, perhaps, Defender—a close equalized contest This race to day will be an easy triumph for Longfellow, and the nag Defender will make it ridiculous"

At this time old Colonel David McDaniel, with his slow dragging walk white hair large red nose and big stature came by the Grand Stand and around him were the members of 'the McDaniel Confederacy' Bassett, Brewster Hubbard Joe Daniels, &c all supposed to be owners of shares, more or less in Harry Bassett That good steed might say They have parted my vesture among them and for my raiment they have cast lots McDaniel has bought grounds adjacent to the track at Saratoga and put up comfortable stables and lodgings evidently designing to stand siege yearly He is a man of observation, of wide experience without strict education but of far higher intelligence than John Harper and is a better trainer

McDaniel' said the editor of a well known sporting journal "has been too sanguine He thought he had a world beater in Bassett and he let too little upon patient work. Some say that his horse was strained at Baltimore in the four mile heats and that four mile heats kill three year old steers but his horse has made better time since than before It is work—patient, skilful work which conquers other things being nearly the same Bassett could run better two weeks hence than at present for he is not now in condition'

The prophets were destined to come to grief on this day, although possibly their ultimate judgment upon Longfellow will be sustained Within one hour and a quarter Harry Bassett riding neck and neck with Longfellow passed the two mile and a quarter pole won the mythical Saratoga Cup, won $1 600 won enormous odds in pools and wager, and had his backers shown faith, they might have won scores of thousands of dollars

WEIGHING THE TWO RIDERS.

The scene under the judges stand at the weighing of the jockeys at a quarter to twelve o clock was picturesque and interesting about twenty little urchins white and black carrying saddles and bags of weights upon their arms clad in parti colored suits and skull caps of light colors each the livery of some celebrated stable waited their turn to mount the scale with all their haberdashery upon them There successively the little heirs of danger and poverty stood [illegible] of the several locomotives with no other relation than pluck and habit [illegible] and [illegible] weight of each—his only biography of human consequence—was recorded [illegible] nobody speaking to him any word of encouragement and he indifferent to any. The average jockey is of the newsboy and the shoeblack class with his attention transferred from a [illegible] of papers to a horse [illegible] in native faculties and confidence for either is his lot may be The two most marked urchins among these were Roe the rider of Harry Bassett, and the negro boy who rides Longfellow

Young Roe is a lean sharp chinned large eared lad with a black piercing eye quiet and listening manner skin broken out with pimples—perhaps from fulness of the blood—and prettily booted on the whole a fine wiry specimen of the fighting urchin without vanity or assumption of any kind He is the very apple of McDaniel's eye

The negro who rides Longfellow has a light mulatto skin and a cherry shaped face with bulging flesh under each eye and bright, [illegible] negro eyes He said nothing like the [illegible] Roe but waited his turn and studied the situation Neither was above thirteen years of age Some of these little whiffets weigh no more than seventy pounds One boy of the lot was pointed out who had reduced his weight three pounds in eighteen hours He had wrapped himself to his ear in blankets and waited till that amount of moisture percolated through his pores and appeared to day sickly and weak as a new mother cat Upon each of these little fellows hundreds of thousands of wagered dollars depended They were pursued to the weighing spot by a dozen still littler whites or negroes who peered in admiringly at the gorgeous vestments and burned to rule and reign like these

THE GREAT RACE.

Just before one o clock the sky to the north was full of gold and laden clouds lying on the angular mountains there like discolored balloons A fresh breeze blew the whole length of the main stand but on the well harrowed track the sun was hot and the pool bidders and uneasy strollers on the homestretch carried umbrellas to be comfortable

It's a noble day to get speed from a horse' was the general exclamation

A minute or two later a large horse swaddled in coarse worn gray and blue blankets appeared on the track moving sluggishly and there was a great wave of involuntary applause It was Longfellow All knew his quiet movement his white hinder feet his white nose and that unsuspecting docile look so admirable in strength or beauty—the unconsciousness of it Stripped in a few minutes he was mounted submissively by the aforesaid negro clad in a dirty yellow jacket and a dirty yellow cap John Harper is evidently no man milliner Next a common looking sorrel stood on the track exciting no curiosity—Defender—and then there dashed past well mounted by the cleanly Roe aforesaid the changeful chestnut Bassett swinging his head and neck and looking ugly, like a fair haired woman under family discipline

> Do they think they have shorn thee of strength
> Stringing mud with the light yellow hair?
> Their thrones thou hast [illegible] at length
> And the king of the earth shall beware

Nobody noticed any difference between these except that Longfellow has the most method regularity of speed, length and beauty of body and worked with [illegible] less effort than his [illegible] and ardent rival A literary man might say that they ran this race like Goethe and Schiller the poets—the one qualified by broad powers natural and acquired the other with the fiend spirit of one more desirous and less confident They had to start a quarter of a mile up the track They passed the stand with Bassett leading a length both jockeys quiet and Longfellow galloping as steadily as the hand of a clock his brilliant brownish black color giving him a fine relief to the reddish tint of his junior They passed up by the half mile pole with Longfellow apparently a half a length behind so close were both indeed, that we could only distinguish them by the black jockey pulling back and the white jockey on Bassett sitting straight They kept the same unchangeable place till they returned down the quarter stretch and then the first articulate sounds escaped the people

'See how Bassett holds his own"

"The black boy will let Longfellow out in the last half mile"

Still like parts of the same machine the fierce contention grew Nothing could be distinguished from nothing It was only a ravelled horse's shadow against the eye

Bassett wins" said a reporter, who had been steadily looking through a glass Longfellow can't catch him Bassett wins Yes! He will win He does win!"

By this time nothing was to be seen but the run down the homestretch There was a long belief that the black horse would pass His rider climbed up in the stirrups and flogged him. He never winced but did his noblest methodical gallant and ineffectual as before The shout from the stand was that of distress rather than of joy as Bassett passed the pole and the white jockey turned maliciously round and grinned in the negro rider's face even under the line which was the boundary of victory

Description is inadequate A few caps were in the air The great mass were in that state described by Sairey Gamp when she said she was "confuged."

THE RACING.

The morning was foggy and clouds obscured the sky, indicating rain but the curtain was withdrawn and the sun shone brilliantly before noon The track was very fast, as much labor had been bestowed on it during the morning by the harrow and scraper Longfellow and Bassett were expected to make great time, and Mr Wheatly was determined to give his aid by having a fast track for them, and at the start a more favorable prospect never presented itself to horsemen The racing was all good but the favorites were beaten and the big betters were heavy losers at the end of the day

Three races were on the card—the Saratoga Stakes a half mile dash by two-year olds, the Saratoga Cup two miles and a quarter, and a mile and a half dash by three year olds

The entries for the Saratoga Stakes numbered forty two twelve of which came to the post Two of the original entries were made void by the death of James S Watson The value of the stakes was $3 000 The starters were Hunter & Travers' chestnut colt Reviler by Censor, dam Jennie Rose, Hunter & Travers' chestnut colt Saturn by Planet, dam Jennie H, John Coar's bay filly The Nurse, by Australian, dam Zone A Belmont's chestnut colt Count d'Orsay, by Kentucky, dam Lady Blessington, A Belmont's chestnut filly Electra, by Kentucky, dam Bernice, J Morris' chestnut colt by Eclipse, dam Mollie Jackson D Swigert's chestnut colt Springbok by Australian dam Hester, D McDaniel & Co's chestnut filly Cora Linn, by Lexington, dam Dolly Carter, M A Littell's chestnut colt Fellowcraft, by Australian dam Aerolite, R. W Walden's chestnut filly Minnie W by Planet, dam Edina, Leonard Jerome's chestnut colt by Australian, dam Weatherwitch and O Bowie's bay colt Catesby, by Eclipse dam Katie. Springbok had the call in the betting He did not, however, come up to the expectations of his backers as he was slow in getting away, and never showed to advantage in the race, being eighth at the finish Mr Bowie's Catesby, a colt little thought of in the betting, won a capital race very easily, going through the others on the last quarter as a race horse should, and won by a length and a half, to the great astonishment of the backers of the others Morris' colt was second Electra third The time was good—1 17¼, the fastest two-year old time ever made

The second race was the great race for the Saratoga Cup, in which there were originally twelve entries but the night before the race nine of them declared out, leaving Longfellow Harry Bassett and Defender the only ones willing to struggle for the trophy. Why Defender ran was a puzzle to all who knew his racing capabilities, and they have not solved the question yet. Longfellow was pronounced in faultless condition by his trainer when he appeared on the track, and Harry Bassett was said by Colonel McDaniel to be a much better horse than he was at Long Branch Longfellow was the favorite in the outside betting at one hundred to thirty five, and, in some instances, one hundred to thirty Harry Bassett won the race, Longfellow breaking down in the struggle He pulled up so lame at the finish that it was with difficulty that he got back to the stand The cheering that took place after the race exceeded anything we ever heard This is the fastest race ever run in this country, being two seconds and a half faster than Kentucky's race, when he beat Captain Moore and Rhynodine over the same course on the 8th of August 1865, which was run in 4 01¾ Harry Bassett won in 3 59 Longfellow will never run again, as the cord running over the joint of the near fore ankle appeared to be severed entirely He is a broken down horse and will now retire to his home in Kentucky where he will be given a chance to repeat himself in his posterity

The third race was for three year olds a mile and a half for which there were four starters consisting of Hunter & Travers' imported bay colt Buckden by Lord Clifden dam Consequence A Belmont's gray colt Gray Planet by Planet dam Eagless, H P McGrath's bay filly Jury by Lexington dam Roxana and T B & W R Davis bay colt Piedmont by Asteroid dam Fairy Buckden was a great favorite over the field Gray Planet made a dead heat with him in 2 42¼ It was not run off, Mr Belmont and Messrs. Hunter & Travers the respective owners of Gray Planet and Buckden concluding to divide the purse and not punish their colts with another trial to test their superiority

THE RACE

When Longfellow and Harry Bassett appeared, they were received with applause from the stand and as the former galloped up in front of the stand the cheering was resumed The assemblage were very nervous but there was no delay in getting the horses away They soon moved down to the quarter pole and at the first attempt were despatched to a capital start Harry Bassett soon took the lead and as he came rattling up the homestretch to the stand he led one length, Longfellow three lengths in front of Defender The time of the first quarter of a mile was twenty five and a half seconds Going around the upper turn, Longfellow went up to Bassett's saddle girth but at the quarter pole they were nose and tail Time of the half mile 52¼ seconds Defender at this time was out of the race and not worthy of further notice Going down the backstretch Longfellow again went up to Harry's saddle girth but at the half mile pole fell back again The three quarters of a mile were run in 1 16¾ Harry Bassett led half a length around the lower turn and at the three quarter pole The time was 1 45½ for the mile Longfellow then ran up to Bassett as they came up the homestretch, and passing under the wire, they were both doing their best and running at a tremendous rate of speed, head and head The mile and a quarter was run in 2 09¼, which is the fastest time ever made for that distance They did not relax in their flight around the upper turn Longfellow gaining gradually until he reached Bassett's shoulders at the quarter pole, the mile and a half being run in 2 35¾ Leaving this point Longfellow faltered and he had to be urged It was here, it is supposed that Longfellow's near ankle gave way but still he ran up again without flinching and was at Harry's saddle girth at the half mile Longfellow ran up closer, and was at Bassett's shoulders on the lower turn and as they passed the three quarter pole, finishing the two miles in 3 30, the fastest two miles ever run A bullet fired at one jockey would have hit the other so near together were the horses Coming up the home stretch the contest was close until near the furlong pole, where Longfellow began to succumb and his jockey commenced using the whip The horse struggled on, but could not keep up with Harry Bassett, and the latter passed under the wire a winner by a length making the two miles and a quarter in the fastest time ever recorded 3 59 Defender was beaten nearly a quarter of a mile

LONGFELLOW'S CONDITION AFTER THE RACE

I have just returned from the stable of John Harper and have seen the broken down horse Longfellow and gathered all the facts possible about his defeat Harper told me that as his horse wheeled to start in the race he struck his foreleg with the hind one on the heel and grabbed the plate which he says nearly threw Longfellow down but seeing him run on rapidly afterwards without showing any signs of injury, he supposed that nothing material had occurred

When the horse stopped at the end of the contest he was very lame and came near falling at every step as he hobbled to the stand and thence to the stable where it was discovered that his plate was doubled up under his foot and that his ankle was sprained and the back sinew broken The horse had the mark of the hind foot on his quarter at the heel an inch and a half in length—enough to have cut half of the heel off—and the ankle was swollen to an immense size Longfellow would not put his foot to the ground but held it up as if in great misery the muscles of the forearm being in constant agitation The horse in the opinion of horsemen is irretrievably ruined as a race horse and will never again be able to contend on the turf

Buckden was first away Piedmont second Jury third Gray Planet fourth As they passed around the lower turn Buckden showed the way Gray Planet second Piedmont third Jury fourth At the three quarter pole Piedmont had his head in front Buckden second Jury third Gray Planet fourth his jockey having taken him in hand to make a waiting race The three leading horses were abreast as they ran up the homestretch and passing under the string Buckden led by a neck Piedmont and Jury head and head eight lengths in front of Gray Planet Going around the upper turn the leading trio were parallel eight lengths ahead of Gray Planet. They were in line at the quarter pole Gray Planet far behind Going down the backstretch there was not the slightest advantage between Buckden Piedmont and Jury but here Gray Planet began to shut up the daylight which he gradually accomplished At the half mile pole the three were still running head and head Gray Planet four lengths behind As they entered the lower turn Buckden began to show his head in front and Gray Planet shut up all the daylight while going to the three quarter pole As the leading trio swung into the homestretch Gray Planet between Buckden and the inside fence pulled his horse in there and in less time than it takes to tell it was on even terms with Buckden A fierce and exciting struggle ensued [illegible] freely used and after a brilliant race they landed at the wire head and head—so parallel that the judges decided a dead heat Jury was half a dozen lengths behind them, and about as far in front of Piedmont

THE CLEVELAND RACES.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 16, 1872

The second annual meeting of the Cleveland Club was to have commenced this morning but heavy rain set in early in the forenoon, and showers prevailed all the afternoon At one o'clock the following notice was issued by the President of the Club Mr John Tod—

"The races of this day are postponed until Wednesday the 17th inst. those of Wednesday postponed till Thursday, 18th inst, and the races of Thursday postponed to Saturday, 20th inst at ten o clock A M precisely Goldsmith Maid, American Girl and Lucy will positively trot on Friday, the 19th inst"

There was a large crowd at the track and considerable disappointment was felt There is great interest in the races for Friday Most of the railroads have issued half fare tickets for that day and a large attendance is anticipated from all parts of the country Goldsmith Maid, Lucy and American Girl are here in fine condition

TURF NOTES.

The Utica Park Association has completed its mile track and buildings, which are second to none in this country The track is an admirable grade, and situated about a mile to the east of the city, on a broad plateau rising to the south of the valley of the Mohawk, commanding an extended view of its magnificent scenery. The grounds are approached by street cars and by steamboats on the Erie Canal, in twelve minutes from the centre of the city. The association is composed of some of the most prominent gentlemen in the central portion of the State, whose names are a guarantee that its meetings will be conducted in a high toned manner, and free from the objections that are occasionally met with on the track Utica being situated midway between New York and Buffalo, on the New York Central Railroad, not three hours distant from Saratoga and one hour only from Sharon, Richfield, Vernis and Chittenango Springs and Trenton Falls, promises a large attendance at what, in the future, must be one of the most popular racing associations of the State. Entries for the large purses offered, aggregating $33,000, will close on the 27th instant, Nominations must be addressed to Alexander Buell, Herald Buildings, Utica, N Y The meeting takes place August 13 14, 15 and 16

Jackson's bay gelding Mystery and Sammis' bay gelding George Gillett are matched to trot two miles and repeat, in harness this afternoon, at the Prospect Park Fair Grounds

REVIEWING THE AWARDS

Meeting of the Contract Commissioners—John Bryan's Stowe Pavement Contract—Was the Ordinance Forged, and Who Committed the Forgery?

Ex Judges Sutherland and Hooper C Van Vorst and Mr D R. Jaques, the Commissioners appointed to pass upon the awards made by the Mayor and Commonalty of the city by virtue of chapter 580 of the Laws of 1872 resumed their investigations yesterday afternoon at half past four o clock, in the rooms of the Board of Aldermen At the opening of the session Commissioners Sutherland and Van Vorst were in attendance Mr Jaques entered a few moments later and the session was formally opened The first call on the calendar considered was John Bryan who claims an award of contract for paving with the stone pavement, White, Fifteenth, Twenty sixth, Twenty seventh, Twenty eighth Thirtieth and Fortieth streets bids for which were opened November 23 1870

The argument in the case was resumed by Mr Shepard counsel for property owners He quoted from the law which, he said provides for advertising in all the corporation newspapers and declared that the ordinances were not published at all The law requiring the advertising of bids must be published ten days before the giving out of the bid Counsel asserted that the law had not been complied with in this particular

The counsel for the Comptroller declared that there was no legal advertisement of the ordinance If not properly advertised under the ruling in the Douglass case there was no ordinance at all

Judge Sutherland stated that he was free to say that he thought the advertising of the ordinance amounted to nothing The question we are to discuss is whether there was fraud in the award The city cannot retreat from an award and the spirit of the law is that the city must fulfil the obligations assumed by its officers

Mr Calvin counsel for Bryan stated that if the case was reopened he was prepared to put in further evidence although they had submitted the case upon its merits

Mr Jaques stated that the question now raised in this argument was whether there was an award at all

Mr Shepard denounced the job as a fraud inasmuch as it was not advertised in all the papers It was a Guy Fawkes fraud of the Common Council to deceive the property owners The evidence of the Mayor showed that the ordinance contained a forgery, and that this is not the ordinance he approved Therefore a forged ordinance is not an ordinance and there can therefore be no ordinance The counsel continued his argument at great length but his effort seemed to have little influence upon the Commission who frequently interrupted him and corrected his misconception of their powers in the premises

Mr Colvin counsel for Mr Bryan said that a complete misrepresentation of facts in regard to the evidence of the Mayor on the subject of the alleged forgery of the ordinance existed The Commission were visibly pleased when the argument closed and soon after adjourned

Two Employes of a Coffee Warehouse Employ a Drummer and Sell the Stock on Their Own Account—A Very Quiet Operation.

On Friday last Charles Vattier a Frenchman in the employ of Marshal S Driggs, 2 8 to 230 South street noticed the foreman of the establishment, James Boardman, removing the marks from a number of bags of coffee and then sending them down the elevator to the walk Vattier asked what the marks were removed for, and if the coffee had been checked on the books The foreman answered that it was all right The coffee was placed on the cart and driven off Vattier mentioned the circumstance to Mr Driggs who examined the books and found no record of it When the cartman James Meehan, returned he was asked where he left the last load of coffee He answered that he was directed by the foreman to take it to the house of Fisher & Lansing corner of Duane and Greenwich street Messrs Fisher & Lansing were then visited and said that they had bought the coffee from a man named Dennis Shay They received ten bags or 1 896 lbs and paid him $355 68 for it They bought [illegible] they had been [illegible] Lansing also [illegible] coffee from the said Shay James Boardman the foreman, and Richard Reading the [illegible] cleaner and sampler of the house, who was also concerned in the shipping of the ten bags were arrested by Detectives Shirney and Jarboe of the Seventh precinct who also secured Dennis Shay They were all brought before Judge Scott, at Essex Market Police Court yesterday Shay who is a junk dealer at 75 Henry street admitted selling the coffee to Fisher & Lansing by sample, but said he was employed by a broker named Hays Mr Driggs stated to the Judge that he thought it was only one of a long series of similar operations Judge Scott held them all for trial

THE WHISKEY MEN STARTLED.

Raid by Supervisor Dutcher's Officers—Capture of a Still and Its Effects in the Fourth Ward.

The energy displayed by Mr Silas B Dutcher, Supervisor of Internal Revenue, has been the means of putting a complete stop to illicit distillation in Brooklyn, and the fact of such vigilance on his part in the City of Churches has emboldened the operators in "poteen" to try their luck in New York, with a prospect of more success Yesterday morning, having received intelligence that a still was in operation in the Fourth ward, Mr Dutcher detailed some of his force to visit the neighborhood of Dover and Roosevelt streets one of the worst parts of the Fourth ward The efforts of the officers were crowned with success At 286½ Front street, rear building, was found the following property, which was at once seized by Marshal B. Blake, Collector of the Thirty second street district—viz, one large copper still firmly enclosed in brickwork running whiskey at the rate of forty gallons an hour, about two thousand gallons of molasses mash ready to be charged into the still, four barrels of rum, five barrels of molasses and all the tools and accoutrements necessary to produce liquor

The building in which these operations were conducted is a four story edifice, and judging from the complete manner in which it was fitted up, it is fair to presume that the owners had located themselves with a view to permanency

Under section 44 of act of July 20, 1868, the real estate and building are liable to confiscation, as well as the distillery property captured therein The United States Marshal has already taken possession of the seized effects and the District Attorney will at once commence proceedings for forfeiture The following officers of Mr Dutcher's force assisted at the above seizure—Assistant Assessors J B Wass David Irish, John H. Clyne, F L Tucker, Alfred Vanderwerken Robert Hunt and William H Whitlock

BRUTAL MURDER IN CANADA.

A Sea Captain Murders a "Crimp" with an Axe—Excitement of the Populace—Great Efforts Made to Lynch the Assassin.

QUEBEC, July 16, 1872

A horrible murder was committed here to-day by Captain Pelletier, of the bark Rivoli The Rivoli is lying off the city, and the captain, wishing to land, was rowed ashore by two of the seamen belonging to the vessel When they landed the men were approached by "crimps" An altercation arose, and one of the sailors being struck, the captain seized an axe, and with one blow almost severed the head of James Dillon who was not the assailant, from his body The wounded man died in less than twenty minutes, being taken immediately to the nearest police station

The murderer was at once secured, and it was with difficulty the constables were able to prevent the crowd from lynching him An inquest was held forthwith, and Pelletier, being declared a murderer by the Coroner's jury, was lodged in jail.
